Cleveland, July 26 — (AP) — Six Cleveland postal clerks reported today that they have been suspended for alleged Communistic sympathies. Postmaster Guy R. Lucas declined to name the six, but admitted they had received letters from the Post Office Department's Loyalty Board. A board panel recently heard the cases here.

STORMY STRIKE ENDS

Niagara Falls, N.Y., July 26—(AP)—One of the stormiest strikes in this city's labor history ended Monday when members of the United Chemical workers (C.I.O.) returned without a contract to the three plants of the National Carbon Company.

They returned after 77 days of idleness, but they were not put to work.

Twenty-eight were fired, the company said, for being involved in strike violence. Some of the others will be called back to work when production schedules can be re-established. The rest will be laid off due to a drop in company business, but will receive lay-off allowances.

McDermott, Cocky Sox Hurler, Brightest Young Pitching Star Performing in American Loop

By JOE REICHLER
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

The biggest break Boston Red Sox got this season was when Maurice (Lefty) McDermott swallowed his pride and consented to return to the minors for more seasoning.

Because of that decision, the Red Sox today own the brightest young pitching star in the American League.

Last April, when Manager Joe McCarthy farmed him out to Louisville, the 20-year-old lefthander was so incensed that for a while he was ready to return to his home in Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

Not long after McDermott set an American Association record by striking out 20 St. Paul players in a single game, Lefty was recalled by the Red Sox. That was June 12. Since then he's made six starts and won four of them. His two defeats were by 1-0 and 5-4 scores.

The cocky youngster, now in his fifth professional season although not yet of voting age, pitched another beauty last night as the Red Sox chopped up the Chicago White Sox 11-2. In going the route for the fifth straight time, the lanky fireballer allowed six hits, walked six and struck out seven. In 52 innings, he's allowed only 31 hits, walked 32 and fanned 38. Eight is the most hits he's given up in a game.

Vern Stephens was the big gun, lashing out a double and his 25th home run to give him five runs batted in for the night and 102 for the year. Boston's Dom DiMaggio singled in the eighth to extend his consecutive hitting streak through 21 games.

The victory enabled the 3rd - place Red Sox to move within 7½ games of the pace - setting New York Yankees. The Yankees and runner - up Cleveland Indians were idle.

St. Louis Cardinals increased their National League lead to 1½ games over Brooklyn, the Redbirds walloping the Philadelphia Phils 9-5 after Chicago Cubs had shut out the Dodgers 6-0.

Harry Brecheen pitched a so-so game but was aided by a 16-hit barrage by his mates to earn his eighth victory. Stan Musial and Enos Slaughter each rapped a pair of doubles and a single. Red Schoendienst cracked three singles and a double.

Johnny Schmitz, an old Brooklyn nemesis, blanked the Dodgers with seven hits. It was the Brooks' fourth straight setback.

Shortstop Roy Smalley, with a double, triple and single, and two runs batted in, led the Cubs' attack.

Single Did It

Sam Chapman's single with two out in the 10th inning scored Eddie Joost with the run that gave Philadelphia Athletics a 5-4 victory over St. Louis Browns. Alex Kellner went the route for his 14th victory of the year and his fifth over the Browns.

Wally Moses, veteran Philadelphia outfielder, singled in the 5th for the 2,000th hi hisetf n for the 2,000th hit of his major league career. He became the 3rd active player to accomplish the feat, and the 86th in baseball history. Luke Appling of the White Sox and Dixie Walker of Pittsburgh are the others still playing to hit 2,000.

Detroit Tigers handed Washington Senators their 11th successive defeat as young Ted Gray spun a five-hit 6-2 victory for the Bengals.

Dino Restelli backed Ernie Bonham's six-hit pitching with a two-run homer to lead the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 4-1 triumph over the New York Giants. The victory enabled the Bucs to move within a half-game of the fifth-place Giants.

Cincinnati Reds knocked out Johnny Antonelli in the second inning and went on to whip Boston Braves 6-3. Kent Peterson went all the way for his third victory, giving up six hits.

TURNING THE PAGES OF "CANADA UNLIMITED"

Mud! Ox-carts and carriages had a rough time on Canada's first highway from Quebec to Montreal in 1735. In the best dry weather it took four and a half days to complete the trip by carriage!

Road-building was slow until Asa Danforth completed a roadway from Kingston to Ancaster, Ontario, in 1800. Yonge Street in York (Toronto) was commenced about the same time, financed by the Northwest Company. By 1868, after Confederation, most settlements were connected by roads. But they were bumpy and full of holes and impassable in spring. Journeys by stage-coach were hazardous.

Then came the automobile—and the need for better surfaces. One of the first improved highways stretched from Toronto to Hamilton. It opened in 1917.

The Trans-Canada Highway and the Alaska Highway are today's developments that point to great super-highways of Tomorrow. With these highways will come increased industrial development that means great opportunity. Yes—there's room to grow in Canada Unlimited.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEORGE H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Sleek Rolls-Royce-powered Miss Canada IV, Canada's hope in the forthcoming Harmsworth Trophy Race emblematic of world championship in speedboating, will pit her power against three American craft on the Detroit River on Friday and Saturday in an effort to bring the coveted trophy to Canada for the first time. She will be driven by Harold Wilson, son of her owner A. E. Wilson, of Ingersoll, Ont.

• • •

And while the eyes of speedboat Canada will be on the Queen of Canadian speedboats, and the Dominion pulling for a victory, it might be noted in passing that in the event Miss Canada IV does annex the mug, the next Harmsworth Cup race will be staged on Canadian waters. Just where-well your guess is as good as ours.

• • •

Harold Wilson, a modest young man, is not saying much about his chance to win the race. His father has stated that the sleek racer is "in perfect condition and plenty fast" following speed trials at Gravenhurst. It is recalled that the Miss Canada IV driven by last year's power plant drove to a Gold Cup record at Picton at a speed of 119-009 miles per hour. Her new engine, designed especially for the Harmsworth Cup races, should easily exceed that speed and, it is hoped, the world's record for unlimited hydroplanes established by Sir Malcolm Campbell in "Blue Bird II" at Lake Coniston, England in 1939. Campbell drove his "Blue Bird II" over the Lake Coniston course at a recognized speed of 141.74 miles per hour.

• • •

We had the pleasure of meeting and talking with Harold Wilson at Picton just previous to that memorable crack o' dawn when he sent his racer slithering through Bay of Quinte waters to establish the world's Gold Cup type record.

• • •

He's a husky lad of some thirty-six summers, modest to a near-degree of shyness. He was reticent about talking of himself and his boat, but what he lacked in rhetoric was made up by his father and owner of the boat, Mr. A. E. Wilson. But a cloak of near shyness hides a lion heart. He does not know fear. Any one that hurtles a quivering racing craft through water at a speed of nearly 120 miles per hour is not lacking in g--- pardon—intestinal fortitude.

• • •

And this big sparsely-thatched blonde husky who can turn a streaking concoction of plastic, steel, and machinery on a dime, so to speak, is a quiet unassuming chap in his home town of Ingersoll. He is a family man with a charming wife and children. On Sunday he sings in the church choir, and teaches Sunday School. He is associated with his father's manufacturing business and draws a weekly pay envelope.

• • •

To get back to his other personality of a grim determined speedboat driver, reckless of danger, whose main ambition in life is to bring to Canada the world's speedboat championship, Harold Wilson can be depended upon to give his best for Canada on Friday and Saturday, and we mentioned before the eyes of the Dominion will be focused on the Detroit River and its hopes on this sleek speedster and her fearless pilot.

• • •

Digging into the records we discovered that the first gasoline-driven boat putt-putted on the River Seine in Paris in 1887. That was two years after Gottlieb Daimler, having discovered internal combustion by use of gasoline sought some vehicle that might quiver into action when fitted with his motor. He experimented successfully with the bicycle. In 1897 he hitched his contraption to the rear of a rowboat and that was the pioneer outboard motor boat. The test wasn't much of a success but Daimler did succeed in moving the craft forward under power of the engine.

• • •

Nothing much occurred until it was felt a motor would transform navigation by small craft. England intensified its efforts to develop engines with a powerful drive. American builders joined them and impetus was given to the sporting angle when Sir Alfred Harmsworth, later Lord Northcliffe, of England, donated a trophy to be competed for in 1903.

• • •

An English boat, the "Napier" won that race at a speed of 18 knots an hour. Twenty-nine years later, Gar Wood drove "Miss America X" at a speed of 124.89 land miles an hour on the St. Clair River near Algonac, Michigan, establishing an American record. In September Sir Malcolm Campbell shattered Wood's mark on Lake Maggiore, Switzerland, driving his famous "Blue Bird II" at a speed of 127.5 mph. In 1939 the Briton established the present record of 141.74 on Lake Coniston.

• • •

The most sensational woman driver in the world was Miss Marion "Betty" Carstairs of England. She raced to many spectacular triumphs in Europe in 1929 and 1930 and challenged Gar Wood, Detroit, for a world's championship race on the Detroit River in Septmber, 1930. She was defeated. Kaye Don, another Briton took over and was defeated by Gar Wood and his now famous "strategy". Wood, it is alleged, sent another of his boats roaring over the starting line, luring Don over to disqualification.

Canadian Henley Opens Today With High Entry List

By JACK SULLIVAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Port Dalhousie, Ont., July 27—(CP) — This little Niagara district town, the Coney Island of Lake Ontario ports, was the focal point today for an estimated 800 to 900 oarsmen and scullers, an all-time high entry list in the annual four-day Canadian Henley.

The 67th edition of North America's premier regatta opens this afternoon.

Henley officials, winking at the yearly "no post entry" caution, admitted they accepted 'a few late comers" before the July deadline but just "to fill out some heats" and said the list this year would be tops.

"I haven't got around to adding it, but my guess is that the entry list is between 800 and 900 — a record," J. L. Murray of Kingston Ont., secretary of the Canadian Association of Amateur Oarsmen, said early today.

Stranahan Rolls To Easy Victory In Second Round

By W. R. WHEATLEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Riverside Golf and Country Club, Saint John, N. B., July 27 — (CP) — The Canadian amateur golf championship moved into its third round today, an enthusiastic gallery paying homage to defending champion Frank Stranahan but failing to see one of the greatest upsets in the 45-year history of the tournament.

The gallery of 600 followed Stranahan in Tuesday's second round as he staged a glamorous walk to an 8 and 7 win over grey-haired R. L. Davison of Amherst, N. S., then the fans followed the Toledo, O., strong man to the club house — and thus missed the spectacle of R. H. (Sparky) Graham of Royal Quebec coming down 18th fairway to plaster a one-up victory over Canada's No. 1 ranking amateur, Walter McElroy of Vancouver.

The hard-won victories of 27 other Canadians, although expected, were eclipsed by Graham's swift blow. Five Americans, led by a sterling performance of Dick Chapman, of Osterville, Mass., were still left.

Tommy Riddell of Montreal Beaconsfield scored a two - up victory over Bill Hamilton of Toronto Mississauga, the Quebec amateur champion leading all the way.

Kesselring Surprised

Jerry Kesselring, Ontario amateur champion, suddenly found himself in an unexpected "survive or bust" struggle with Hal Brynjolfson of the Saint John home club and had all he could do to squeeze out a 2 and 1 victory.

Phil Farley of Toronto Scarboro, a competitor and close finisher in many amateur tournaments, toyed along with young Lorne Smith of Dartmouth, N.S., to win 6 and 5.

The American contingent behind Chapman was bolstered by Buddy Lutz of Reading, Pa., who found himself down a hole on making the turn but overcame a tendency to overshoot greens and won 4 and 3.

John Kraft of Denver won easily over G. B. Fairbrother of Toronto Summit 6 and 5 and Ollie Kay, Stranahan's protege from Toledo, was down to E. H. Colter of Dartmouth, N. S., before pulling out to a 2 and 1 win.

Canada's remaining strength was shown in the strong representation still left in the tournament from the four man teams in the Willingdon Cup competition won last Saturday by Ontario.

The Ontario team was still intact with Farley, Kesselring, George Eluck of Windsor and Don Varey of Brantford. They also had the support of Bruce Castator of Toronto Summit.

Only one player of the Quebec team was missing, Mike Pyke of the Montreal Country Club who was eliminated in Monday's first round.

Miss Canada IV Ready for Big Race Townsfolk Wish Wilson 'God Speed'

Ingersoll, Ont., July 27 (CP)—Eighteen years ago a stripling from Ingersoll entered the Muskoka Lakes regatta with a 25-horsepower outboard motorboat.

It was young Harold Wilson son's first race.

On Saturday, Wilson—now 36 and an injured right leg attesting to his passion for speed—will drive Canada's first Harmsworth trophy challenger, his $100,000, 2,500-horsepower Miss Canada IV.

Last night this western Ontario town, which has watched Wilson grow from a youth who tinkered with boats in his father's wire and machine works here to one of Canada's outstanding water pilots, gathered to wish him "God speed."

Wilson, Miss Canada IV and two mechanics left their Lake Muskoka training grounds early Tuesday on their way to Detroit. They stopped in Ingersoll overnight to allow the boat to stand on display in the market square for four hours.

Wilson evaded all questions about the boat and its possibilities. His stock answer was "they'll find out after the race."

The sleek, highly-burnished craft is 33 feet long and 10 feet wide. She was mounted on a three-ton trailer for transportation to Detroit.

Miss Canada IV is powered by a Rolls Royce engine, shipped from England with company specialists. Her massive tanks hold 120 gallons of gasoline, burned at the rate of one gallon a mile at full speed.

The craft was designed by Douglas Van Patton of Flint, Mich.

Although Wilson wuold not give any inkling of her power and speed, his father, E. A. Wilson, owner of three main factories in Ingersoll, hinted that 130 M.P.H. had been exceeded by his son's craft.

Three U.S. Entries

Detroit, July 27 (AP)—My Sweeties Tuesday joined Jack Schafer's Such Crust I and Stanley Dollar's Skip-a-Long as the third United States entry for the Harmsworth trophy races Friday and Saturday.

This was decided after a lengthy meeting between Horace Dodge, millionaire sportsman and owner of My Sweetie, and Lou Fageol, a member of the United States selection committee.

Out of the meeting came an official pronouncement by the committee and a decision by Dodge to subject himself to a rigid driving test.

There has been reports that the committee was critical of Dodge's handling of My Sweetie in the trials last Saturday.

Dodge said he would take My Sweetie in the trials last Saturday.

Dodge said he would take My Sweetie out on the Harmsworth course on the Detroit River today. He may go the full route of 42 nautical miles to test himself physically for the grind. After the run, Dodge told Fageol he would decide whether he remains at the wheel for the race or turn it over to his veteran driver, Wild Bill Cantrell. It was Cantrell who drove My Sweetie to its triumph in the Gold Cup here recently.

Zaduk Defeats Jackie Duggan; Rubicini Wins

Belting Pete Zaduk of Guelph fought to a 10-round split decision over Jackie Dugan of Toronto in the main event of a professional boxing card at Toronto Tuesday. Zaduck weighed 159 pounds, Dugan 160.

In preliminary bouts, Gus Rubicini won a six-round decision farom Jesse Bradshaw of Buffalo, N.Y., Jeff Clonton of Erie, Pa., gained a six-round nod over Bill Sauve of Toronto and Vic Eise of Buffalo, N.Y., and Oliver Breton of Toronto fought to a draw.

The legaue-leading Brampton Excelsiors took a firmer hold atop the Ontario Lacrosse Association senior A series when they defeated Owen Sound Crescents 14-12 in overtime at Owen Sound Tuesday.

Trailing by three goals with just over three minutes to play, Excelsiors took advantage of a major penalty to Don Ashbee of Owen Sound to tie the count.

At Manchester, England and New Zealand drew Tuesday in the third match of their five-match test series. The first two matches also were drawn.

New Zealand collected 348 runs for seven wickets in their second innings after England ran its first-innings' total to 440 for nine before declaring. The visitors had 283 in their first innings.

Mrs. Willy Croes Van Rijsel, 31-year-old Netherlands housewife, failed Tuesday in her bid to swim the English Channel after being in the water 14 1-2 hours.

At Philadelphia the Milano Field Club soccer team scored a pair of quick goals in the closing minutes to defeat a picked combination of Philadelphia National and American League players 4-2. The current kingpins of soccer in Italy thus closed out a North American tour without defeat. A crowd of 3,500 saw the match.

Legion won the opening contest 3-0 Saturday and the teams played to a 1-1 tie Monday. Edmonton now will meet the British Columbia champions for the right to advance into the finals for the Dominion Football Association title.

The other finalist will be decided when the winner of the current Montreal Stelcos-Hamilton Westinghouse series meets Winnipeg Scottish.

SIC 'EM, FELLAS

There'll be no love lost nor quarter asked nor given when the two handsome hunks of humanity pictured above clash in Memorial Arena on Friday night. Whipper Billy Watson, Pride of East York, and Fred Atkins, Australia, were not satisfied with the outcome of last Friday's brawl — and they'll settle it this week. And watching over the mayhemic antics of the pair will be no other than that epitome of wrestling color and showmanship "Bunny" Dunlop. And that, kiddies, means action and plenty of it. Hi Lee, towering Ozarkian, will tangle with the rotund 300-pound Cardiff Giant with Billy Stack clashing with Tom Rice in the opener.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Elva Tyme has a pertinent beef. "In your pieces," she points out, "declarer is always in south; the hand that holds the least is seldom in west or north; weakness usually shows up in east."

Let me give her a bit of inside track. In deals shown here, not always was south the declarer when the cards were originally played. Nor was north always the responding hand.

For your convenience the table is sometimes turned around so that the defenders are pictured west and east. There are several reasons for this, mostly influenced by the teaching angle.

It is easier for you to see what should be done if you sit in the key position. South is the position you are sitting when reading a printed deal. It is the hand nearest you at the moment.

When is west presented here as declarer? Only when the east and west pair finally bought the contract after being the defending bidders. I lean toward such standardization methods.

On rare occasions you will notice the reverse here. Why? It may be some important tournament deal in which some of my readers participated. The better for them to remember it.

♠5 4
♥J 10 3
♦10 6
♣Q J 10 8 7 6

WEST	EAST
♠K Q J 9 6 3	♠10 7 2
♥K 5	♥9 8 6 4
♦Q 9 5 3	♦A J 8

SOUTH
♥A Q 7 2
♦K 7 4 2
♣9 6 3

South opened with a heart and west jumped to two spades. North passed and east assisted with a raise to three spades. West carried it to four spades and became the declarer.

When this deal was actually played, the cards you see in south happened to be in the east seat; the west cards you see were in south. I simply turned the table around for your convenience.

The opening bidder and his partner are known as the aggressive side, even if weaker. Opponents of the opener are always known as the defending bidders. Even with the strongest hands. Or feet.

Stewart-Warner Onslaught Sinks Proud Corby's Under 12-4 Score; Houstons Defeat Engineers 6-2

Houston's "Knotholers" wound up their softball season firmly entrenched in second place in the league standings by virtue of their 6-2 win over Provincial Engineers and Corbys' crushing 12-4 defeat at the hands of Stewart Warner. The Alemite lads took over third place on the strength of their win last evening and dumped Corbys into 4th spot. Corbys can bring about a two-way tie for first and third place if they beat the league-leading Northern Electric crew in their postponed game this Friday evening.

Both games were close, hard-fought contests until the late innings when both winning teams came up with big innings to down the opposition.

In the opener Houstons started the scoring in the bottom of the first when Wardhaugh homered with Woods aboard. From then until the fifth it was a gruelling struggle with both teams threatening to take a decisive lead. Two errors, a single, and a double, gave the Knotholers four markers and the ball game in the bottom of the fifth.

Engineers counted both runs in the top of the second when Burley homered with Bawden aboard. They loaded the bases after that but failed to score another run.

Bob Green went all the way on the firing line for the winners, striking out 10, walking two, and being nicked for six hits and two runs. John Bawden went the route for the losers striking out two, walking one and giving up seven hits for the ball game.

Watson and Carr of the losers, and Rollins for the winners. had two for three.

Line Ups:

Provincial Engineers: F. Donovan, replaced by Van Alstine in 5th, lf; Lucas 1b; Balyx 2b; E. Donovan cf; McGuire c; Bawden p; Burley 3b; Watson ss; Carr rf.

Umpires: plate, Leo Goyer; bases, Bawden. Time .52.

Stewart Warner 12, Corbys 4

A ten-run outburst by Stewart Warner in the bottom of the sixth inning broke up a tight pitchers' duel to give the Alemite lads a spectacular victory over the potent Corby crew who skidded into fourth place with the loss.

Both teams battled on even terms until the fateful sixth with both pitchers showing fine form. Harold Dracup, perennial starter for the Alemite, pitched his finest game of the season as he limited the Corby bats to six hits and four runs. He struck out 7 and walked five as he slow-balled his way to his sixth win to become the top winner in the Commercial League.

Corbys opened the scoring in the second frame counting twice on a single, an error, and a double. Alemite got those two back in their end of the second on a walk, a double, and a single. Moon put Corbys into a one run lead in the third with a home run to centrefield with no one on.

A beautiful throw from right field by Keith Bertram cut down Harold Reid at third to nip a threatened Corby rally in the 3rd. Reid was tagged as he slid into third on Storms' double. Storms was called out as he wandered off the bag, and Hunter was struck out to retire the side. An unassisted double play by Snore in the fifth chilled another Corby threat.

After leaving five men stranded in the fourth and fifth frames, Stewart Warner uncorked a potent attack in the sixth that drove Corby starter, Marty Halloran, from the mound. The first six men to the plate hit safely, including doubles by Lewis, Dracup and Burley and a home run by Shore. That was all for Halloran and Baldwin came in to stem the attack. He was treated with little respect being smashed for four runs on the strength of Carr's grand slam home run, before he retired the side.

Corbys managed to salvage their fourth run in the seventh.

Halloran started for Corbys and in five innings struck out four, walked two, and gave up ten hits for eight runs. Keith Baldwin walked two, struck out one, and gave up two hits for 4 runs in one inning of relief.

Best at the plate for the winners was Carr with two singles and a home run in four tries.

Line ups:

Corbys: Downing 1b, Wagar batted in 7th; R. Reid cf; Moon c; H. Reid 3b; Storms rf; Hunter lf; Nolan ss; Mills 2b; Halloran p, replaced by Baldwin in 6th.

Stewart Warner: Shore 2b; Bertram rf, replaced by Burley in 6th; Hammitt cf; Booth 1b; Shaw lf; Lewis ss; Rowbotham c; Carr 3b; Dracup p.

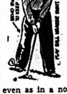
Better Golf

By Sam Snead



BEND RIGHT KNEE TO KEEP BALANCE LEVEL
PLAY BALL NEARER RIGHT FOOT

A down-hill lie is for most golfers a tougher proposition than an up-hill lie. You're apt to have the feeling that the hill is in the way and that your clubhead is going to smack into it on the downswing. But here's the way you should play the spot. On a down-hill lie, have your left leg straight and your right leg bent so that your body, hips and shoulders are even as in a normal shot. Then position the ball well back of center. Use a more lofted club than you would ordinarily use for the distance desired, because you will be swinging down at the ball and therefore, at impact, the club-face will be more vertical than if the ball were positioned forward of center as in a normal shot. Practice with such lies gives you confidence. When you know what to do and do it with more confidence, you'll get results. Be sure the clubhead follows through close to the ground along the direction line. In a down-hill lie, have a bit more weight on the right foot than the left to help maintain balance.

Junior Tennis Stars Now Have Own Show

Ottawa, July 27 (CP) — The Canadian junior tennis championship being run off this week at the Rideau Lawn Tennis Club in suburban Overbrook, is giving the stars of tomorrow a better deal.

And the competitors are doing a lot of the work in the big tournament that attracted more than 150 entries from seven provinces—all but Newfoundland, Saskatchewan and Prince Edward Island.

They reached the quarter finals of the junior men's singles yesterday and the biggest gallery so far this week crowded around to watch lanky Don Fontana of Toronto defeat James Scriven of Halifax 6-4, 6-8, 6-4.

Tournament chairman Eddie Condon said in an interview he believes the juniors have at last come into their own.

"I do the actual directing of the tournament," he said, "but those kids are working their heads off and doing all the run-about work.

"I don't believe the juniors will ever have to play second-fiddle to the seniors again. Usually the competitions are held in conjunction with the senior group, and never before have they been so well represented as in this tournament.

"Much of the credit of the wide representation goes to the Canadian Tennis Development Association who decided in 1946 that it was time the juniors held their own show. At that time an all-junior competition was held—the first in junior tennis history.

Juniors Hold Own Show

"Since then the development association has been busy circulating folders and writing to clubs in every province urging them to give their young hopefuls a chance to represent them in the second-all-junior championships.

"It's just a simple matter of both the Canadian Tennis Association and the Provincial Association getting their heads together to give these hard-working juniors what they deserve."

Another fourth-round men's singles match that attracted attention was a morning contest between Robert Bedard and Peter Constable, both Montrealers. Bedard took the match, 1-6, 7-5, 6-3.

In other singles matches, Raymond Page of Montreal, seeded No. 1, disposed of Michael Armstrong of Toronto, 6-1, 6-1, while the No. 2 man of the tournament, Paul Willey of Vancouver, stopped Ottawa's Ned Rainboth, 6-1, 6-3.

One of the day's hardest matches was a quarter-final in the girls'—under 15—class in which Mariette Laframboise of Montreal defeated Vonnie Davis of Toronto 3-6, 10-8, 6-4.

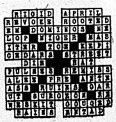
Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle:



Little Benny's Note Book

I wrote Puds Simkins another letter to tell him the news and stuff while he's in the country for vacation, writing, Dear Puds, how are all your freckles from the sun? You must be a great site to see. Please try to stay that way so us fellows can share in the injoyment.

Us fellows were standing around the letter box talking and arguing, and some little guy with glasses came up and asked us if anybody wanted a big tertle free, claiming he wasn't allowed to keep it any longer because his family was going to move and they decided to move without the tertle, and he was looking for a good home for it, and he claimed it was one of the biggest tertles he ever saw and it was affectionate and ran up to you when it saw you and ate out of your hand. So us fellows had a race into our houses to see how our mothers felt about big tertles, and we all came out again slower than we went in, and the little guy with glasses went away sad to look for other fellows to ask.

Lucky Leroy Shooster's ant came to stay at his house a while, so Lucky slept on the sofa in the living room so she could sleep in his room, but his ant is sutch a bum sleeper she woke up every time Leroy banged on the floor rolling off the sofa in his sleep, so she offered to give him his room back and use the sofa herself, but Lucky Leroy wouldn't do it, claiming it wouldn't be polite, so she gave him a doller to be impolite, and now his ant is on the sofa and Lucky is back in his own bed with the doller.

Speeking of sleeping, Shorty Judge felt a mosquito on his nose and woke up and took a puntch at it, and he soaked himself so hard he made his nose bleed, and the werst of it is, he thinks the mosquito got away. Your trusty frend Benny,

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By ERWIN FRICKE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Regina, July 27 (CP)—Remember the stories, mostly originating in the "good old days of sport," of hockey players heaving mattresses out of hotel windows and football players walking bare-footed into dining cars on trains.

That type of rollicking behavior by athletes apparently is on the way out and to Scotty (Regina Leader - Post) Melville it's all to the good.

Scotty says it was easy to tell an athlete in the old days. He'd wear an out-sized windbreaker emblazoned with crests depicting championship deeds in everything from water polo to bull fighting.

It was customary too for athletes to raise "proper hell" wherever they went — on trains, in the street and in the hotels.

"And because they were athletes, they got away with it," Scotty relates. "Now and then a hotel manager would blacklist a club after viewing the wreckage of what he once called rooms but usually there were enough hotels to last a season."

Dapper Dans

"The rowdyism and the sloppy dress are things of the past . . . Regina Caps made their hockey jaunt to Ottawa last year looking like a delegation going to meet the prime minister."

When Chicago Black Hawks held their training schools in Regina, Scotty recalls, first item on the daily bulletin to prospects was the reminder that suit coats and neckties would be worn at meal times in the hotel. The lads also were told to look neat at all times and conduct themselves in a proper manner.

Allan Cup for Quakers?

Saskatoon Quakers senior hockey club this year is going to be an Allan Cup threat, predicts Cam (Saskatoon Star - Phoenix) McKenzie. Speculating on the import - studded line-up, he sees the Toronto Maple Leafs' Don Metz holding down a right-wing spot. Brother Nick, of course, already has been signed as coach.

Locke Barred From Golf's Gold Dust Trail but May Play in U.S. Open

New York, July 26 (CP)—The purse strings of the lucrative United States golf tournaments were closed today to Bobby Locke but the bushy-browed South African may play in the U. S. National Open.

The United States Golf Association, which runs the open, said Monday night it had taken no move toward following the action by the U.S. Professional Golfers' Association in banning the cool money collector from Johannesburg.

"This seems to be a matter strictly between Mr. Locke and the P.G.A.," a U.S.G.A. spokesman said. "We have not been asked to enter into it and until we are Mr. Locke naturally will be eligible for the open."

In Toronto, an official of the Canadian P.G.A. said Locke's suspension by the American body automatically holds true in any tournament sponsored by the Canadian P.G.A., which is affiliated with the American body.

But the ban wouldn't affect Locke's entry in the Canadian Open, premier golf championship in the Dominion, as this is sponsored by the Royal Canadian Golf Association, not affiliated with the Canadian P.G.A.

Blue Ribbon But Little Cash

Like the Canadian Open, the American Open is the blue ribbon event of United States golf, worth only $2,000 in cash to the winner but of infinite value in prestige.

But the rest of the U.S. gold dust tournament trail, from which Locke picked up more than $50,000 the last three years, is blocked to the British Open champion.

George Schneiter, tournament manager of the American P.G.A., announced the ban yesterday in St. Paul .

He said the reason was that Locke "has on numerous occasions violated the P.G.A. tournament regulations and the tournament players' agreement of the P.G.A. of America which he signed."

The act that apparently blew off the lid was the South African's late withdrawal from the Inverness matches at Toledo last weekend.

The American P.G.A. move brought to a boil a feud that has been simmering for months.

Permitted to play in the 1947 U. S. P.G.A. championship, Locke was barred from the meet in 1948 and 1949. The South African felt he was slighted. Sharp words were exchanged.

No international repercussions are expected from the current ban.

The 32-year-old British Open titlist cancelled a Thursday plane reservation to the United States and prepared to play in the Irish Open at Belfast.

Bisons' Pitcher Unsung Hurler In Bid for Title

(By The Associated Press)

Luis Aloma, 26-year-old right-hander, is one of the unsung pitchers in Buffalo Bisons' bid for the International League pennant.

Aloma, obtained from Havana of the Florida International League after he won 19 games and led the league in shutouts last year, has an 8-6 record for the Bisons.

Aloma aided the Bisons in increasing their lead to 3½ games over the pursuing Rochester Red Wings Tuesday night with two nifty relief jobs.

The Bisons, who had won only one of their previous seven starts, took a doubleheader from Baltimore Orioles, 8-5 and 5-4.

Trailing 5-0 going into the sixth inning of the opener, the Bisons staged an eight - run rally that Billy De Mars featured with a three-hit homer.

Aloma pitched the last two innings, blanking the Orioles on three hits and fanning three to protect Bob Hooper's 12th victory. Hooper allowed nine hits in five innings including homers by Butch Woyt and Glen McQuillen.

Steps Into Breech

The Bisons also were behind in the second game, 4-2, going into the seventh. Coaker Triplett then homered with two on, his second homer of the night, to give the Bisons the lead. Aloma took over in the bottom half after Luman Harris faltered and blanked the Orioles on one hit the rest of the way to save the decision for Harris.

Gene Markland also homered for Buffalo while McQuillen and Frank Mancuso performed the feat for the Orioles.

Rochester dropped a 5-4 decision to the last - place Newark Bears on Pat Seerey's two - run, seventh - inning homer. Floyd Boyer went the route for Rochester and Earl Harrist for the Bears.

Montreal Royals snapped their six-game losing streak, beating Syracuse Chiefs 6-2 behind the eight - hit pitching of Pat McGlothin. McGlothin blanked the Chiefs after the second inning and posted his ninth victory.

Rookie outfielder Bob Wakefield poled his third homer in two days for the Royals.

Toronto and Jersey City were idle.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, July 27 — (AP) — This desk has learned that it was a double-barrelled complaint against Bobby Locke that led to his being barred by the P.G.A. . . . The Inverness officials at Toledo didn't receive word from Bobby that he wasn't coming until July 14, a week before the tournament. By that time programs and other printed matter had Locke's name . . . The Western Open encountered a similar situation . . . and the players are burning because Locke asked Dutch Harrison to line up some exhibitions for the week preceding Inverness and Dutch hasn't had any direct word yet about cancelling them. Naturally those sponsors are unhappy, too.

Strain on Credulity

Umpire Red Jones of the American League gets a lot of chuckles by telling about Charlie Strain, who used to umpire with him in the Piedmont League . . . Strain had a fine voice and was soloist at a Richmond, Va., church . . . During a road tour of North Carolina, Charlie was invited to be guest singer at a local church . . . The pastor announced: "Umpire Charlie Strain will sing hymn No. 270," then looked surprised when a titter ran around the congregation . . . Seems when folks opened their hymn books they saw the title: "Open Thine Eyes."

Czech Paper Charges Pope in Alliance With Pres. Truman

Prague, July 27 — (AP) — A Slovak Communist newspaper charged today that the Pope had entered into an alliance with President Truman to "save capitalism from destruction by fighting socialist progress."

Roman Catholic churchmen here interpreted the drumfire press attacks against the Pope as an attempt to discredit the Vatican in preparation for breaking off relations.

Easy, Jocko! Typewriters work best when they get expert attention. So do furnaces. Right now, many furnaces, pipes, chimneys are clogged with soot and fly ash. This is costly because a layer of soot or fly ash only 1/16 inch thick can cut down the heating efficiency of a furnace up to 20%. This means that 5 tons of fuel only do the work of 4. It will pay you to have your furnace conditioned, now, by an expert. The cost is small, and you'll enjoy more efficient heating in the winter. New Type of Screen Personality Has Come Forward in Britain

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, July 26 — (AP) — Don't underestimate the intelligence of movie stars, says Dana Andrews.

This viewpoint came out as he discussed on the "My Foolish Heart" set the public's conception of stars.

"The public seems to think of film actors as a bunch of high-living spendthrifts without a thought in their heads," he remarked. "Well, that might have been true in the old days, but things have changed.

"The past five or six years has seen a new type of screen personality. There's no more of the pretty boy and matinee idol. Even the method of glamorizing women stars has changed.

"I wouldn't say that all movie stars are intelligent; but I think the average intelligence is much higher than it used to be. By the nature of their work, actors have more diversified interests than any other profession.

"Actors now are being recognized as respected members of the community," he said. "More so here than in England, and considerably more so than in France, where they are considered apart from ordinary society."

He agreed that this new type of film star has resulted in greater political activity among Hollywood's famous in recent campaigns.

"I get all kinds of fan mail concerning my political work, much of it on the screwball side." he said. "But it boils down to this: Why shouldn't an actor be able to take part in politics, the same as any other citizen."

Not only have stars changed, but the public has, too, added Andrews.

"That's why the movie industry hasn't been doing good business," he said. "I think pictures are as good as they ever were, but the public is tired of seeing the same thing."

Irrigation Pays Off for Young Air Force Vet

Leamington, Ont., July 27 (CP) — Wally Newland takes his job seriously but doesn't particularly care if it rains or not. He bosses a $100,000 a year business—backed up by his own irrigation system.

The 26-year-old air force veteran recently an recently took over 15 acres of good, sandy soil on the Lake Erie shore near here — including six greenhouses — and maintains numerous men in his market gardening venture.

Supervising the work, along with his father, Wally recently invested $8,000 in a home-made irrigation system that eliminates some 20 per cent of garden uncertainty.

He bought a United States war surplus pump and motor for $450 and then rigged up a six-inch main feeding from the lake. He said he can pipe some 40,000 gallons an hour anywhere on his land.

Results of the system? He figures he can market his cucumbers, lettuce, peppers, tomatoes, etc., several weeks ahead of the average time — bringing better prices. He also produces 1,500,000 seedling tomato plants a year for canning purposes.

Dump Explosion Kills 24 Persons In Spain

Tarancon, Spain, July 26 (AP) — Twenty - four persons were killed and more than 50 were gravely injured early today in an explosion at an army munitions dump here.

Only two of the dead were soldiers. Most of the soldiers stationed here were in town attending the celebration of the Feast of Santiago when the explosion occurred shortly after midnight. Tarancon is a town of 6,000 about 50 miles southeast of Madrid.

The sergeant in command of the guard at the ammunition dump has been arrested for dereliction of duty and has been taken to headquarters of the Madrid headquarters of the military region.

'Tokyo Rose' Faces Treason Trial

San Francisco, July 26 (AP).— "Tokyo Rose" told a Federal Bureau of Investigation man in 1946 that she did not feel her wartime broadcasts from Radio Tokyo were against the interests of the United States.

The jury hearing the treason trial of Iva Toguri d'Aquino yesterday heard a 12-page report of a statement she gave F.B.I. agent Frederick Tillman at Tokyo's Sugamo prison, April 30, 1946.

In it, the 33-year-old native of Los Angeles acknowledged that she knew her program was aimed at lowering morale of allied troops, however she said it showed Japanese sportsmanship by sending messages from allied war prisoners.

Two captured officers, an Australian and an American, took her into their confidence, she said, and told her they were trying to make the program one of entertainment rather than propaganda. However, she continued, "they never directly or positively told me they were trying to defeat the Japanese purpose of the program.

The two officers were Maj. Chas. Cousens of Australia and Maj. Wallace Ince of the United States. The defence contends Miss Toguri and these two conspired to sabotage the Japanese propaganda program.

Guelph, July 27 — (CP) — Elaine Byrne, 17, suffered a broken collarbone and severe cuts Tuesday night when thrown from an automobile when it collided with another vehicle here. Driver of the car, Eugene Martin of Waterloo, escaped injury. The other vehicle was driven by James Hahn of Kitchener.

'Bug' Girls Search Plane Passengers

New York, July 27 — (CP) — The passenger boarding a plane at La Guardia Field needn't be alarmed when "searched" by a pretty young Miss.

No, she's not from the United States District Attorney's office. She's one of the four "bug girls" employed by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Working under the department's division of entomology and plant quarantine, the girls are paid $48 a week to help prevent Japanese beetles from leaving the airport for Western Hemisphere regions not yet afflicted with the bronze leaf - eating insects.

Their job is to see that planes, passengers and baggage leave the airport uncontaminated.

All four girls are college students on vacation. Their counterparts — all men — are doing the same work at 42 other airports within the beetle quarantine belt, which extends north to Maine, south to Virginia and west to Ohio.

They are on duty during the beetle season which runs from mid - July to mid - September. At first. men were employed as bug - hunters at La Guardia. But they were replaced by women after some female passengers objected to search by males.

Beetles aren't active until the dew is off the grass and they retire before sundown. So the girls work from 9 a.m. until 6 p. m.

In addition to plucking stray beetles off passengers — the bugs go for pastel colors — the girls see to it that the luggage compartments are searched.

London — (AP) — The Moscow radio Tuesday went in for beer commercials.

"My beer is Russian beer," the broadcaster said in effect, because Russian beer is better and stronger than American beer.

An official of the Russian brewery industry told the Moscow radio reporter all Russian beer is made from barley but American beer is brewed "from maize, sorghum and even potatoes."

Swoope, Va. — (AP) — Elmer the bull lost 600 pounds in 21 days — no bull.

Elmer got trapped in a railroad culvert pipe, where he'd gone to escape the heat. Rocks washed up behind him, blocking the way out and there Elmer stood for three weeks, up to his shanks in water.

Railroad workers found him in the 36-inch pipe, a mere shadow of himself at an undernourished 300 pounds. Around his famished waist they wound a rope, hauled away, and out came Elmer.

Elmer's astonished owner readily identified him as the 1½-year-old Angus which had disappeared from his farm July 10. Then he put Elmer on a build-up diet of milk, eggs, wheat bran, cornmeal, and other such delectables.

Elmer's doing fine. But his owner won't identify himself for publication.

"It's Elmer's story," he says.

Swanscombe, Kent, England — (CP) — At their four-roomed villa in a working district of Swanscombe, Mr. and Mrs. George Wickenden are preparing to entertain a German prince.

He is Prince Valdemar Zu Hohenlohe, who has accepted an invitation to stay with the Wickendens in August.

During the war Prince Hohenlohe was commandant of a German prisoner-of-war camp at Blechammer, where George Wickenden spent five years after being captured in France.

"The prince did everything possible to see his prisoners got a square deal," said George, a store assistant. "The boys in our camp never forgot his kindness.

"That's why I asked him to spend a holiday with us. Some folk object, but as far as we're concerned, the prince is all right."

Spokane, Wash. — (AP) — Two Bible salesmen, who complained that business was poor, admitted robbing a Deer Park, Wash., residence, police said Monday.

The 23-year-old salesman, William M. Lowery, Detroit and Francis E. Meffort, Holyoke, Colorado, were arrested Sunday on a charge of robbing a service station.

In robbing the station they used a revolver taken from the Deer Park home, police said. In addition to the revolver, the pair took a radio, flashlight, piggy bank, three slices of ham and a rifle.

Sunshine
On Request

Whenever you see "sun-resistant" in an Eaton advertisement you can be sure that it means exactly what it says. We know because we scientifically check such statements with our own sunshine-making "Fade-ometer." Inside the huge, dark exterior of the "Fade-ometer" the light is just as sharp and bright as on a clear day in mid-June and is so adjusted that it concentrates four days of sunshine into 24 hours' testing time. Fabrics, paints, linoleums and tiles are put in it to test the fading effect of sunlight on their surface and chemical make-up. We use it, too, for checking inks; for establishing the fastness of colors to light; to determine when, and under what conditions, plastic shower curtains will become brittle and how long it will be before whitewall tires begin to crack under the aging effect of sunlight. The "Fade-ometer" is one of the many ways in which we utilize the scientific advice of our Research Bureu to ensure accuracy in our advertising. It is just one example of the care and thoroughness behind Eaton statements and services and one of the reasons why it has become a Canadian custom, from coast to coast, to

HELP REARM WESTERN EUROPE ACHESON WARNS

Blown to Pieces Miner Gives Life To Save Workers

Dashes Out of Mine Shaft Carrying Fused Dynamite

Val D'Or, Que., July 28 (CP)—A Polish miner, who came to Canada from a European displaced persons camp, blew himself to bits Wednesday saving the lives of several workers in a dynamite explosion at the East Sullivan gold mine at nearby Bourlamaque.

Another miner died earlier in an underground rockslide.

Watsik Koltan, 28, picked up a charge of dynamite about to explode and ran with it out of range of a group of about 10 men. The charge exploded after he had raced about 15 feet.

The other men were knocked down by the blast but suffered only minor injuries.

Maurice Boucher, 20, was killed in the rockslide earlier.

The explosion occurred shortly after Boucher and Koltan went underground with the dynamite charge. They were to explode a piece of rock obstructing the second level.

Boucher, in charge of the work, had just lighted the fuse when he was crushed under the rockslide. He was believed to have died instantly.

Koltan ran to summon help. Then, apparently remembering the lighted fuse, he dashed back.

Rescuers saw him running away with the dynamite sticks in his arms, with the trailing fuse fizzling. The explosion occurred seconds later. The charge contained 12½ pounds of dynamite.

No fire followed the explosion and mine officials said little damage was done.

Koltan arrived in Canada from Europe only about three months ago. He could scarcely speak English or French. It was not known if he was married. Boucher was single.

A coroner's inquest Wednesday night found the deaths of both men were accidental.

COLORFUL SCENES MARK PAGEANT MARTYRS' SHRINE

Midland, July 28 — (CP) — Three hundred years ago eight Jesuit Fathers met death at the hands of the pagan Iroquois Indians. For the next four nights their torture - deaths will be reenacted on the spot where they fell.

The first production of "Salute to Canada," was given Wednesday night as 500 actors, musicians and dancers unfolded the pageant on a picturesque hillside of Martyrs' Shrine — the highlight of summer - long celebrations for the famous Jesuits.

Some 7,000 spectators sat in a large amphitheatre and watched scenes from the dawn of Canada's history as colored spotlights took the glittering story in sequence on four stages, one above the other.

The famous Fort St. Marie, the Jesuit "abode of peace," was destroyed before the onslaught of the Iroquois, who also set the torch to the Huron village.

Although religion takes its place in "Salute to Canada" it is not a religious pageant but rather a patriotic spectacle.

The Volkoff Ballet, the Canadian Little Symphony, the Madrigal Singers, took important roles in the presentation, along with soprano Louise Roy of St. Boniface, Que., and internationally - known Canadian tenor Joseph Victor Laderoute, formerly of Sault Ste. Marie.

A high spot of the production came with the climax of the first act with the appearance of St. Michael and an introduction of a chorus portraying the eight martyrs. Their names rang out dramatically — Brebeuf, Lalement, Chabanel . . . they echoed back from the hillsides as the cast, representing early settlers and Indians, knelt in reverence.

ENGINEERING GRADS OFFERED MORE MONEY

Ottawa, July 28—(CP)—Science and engineering graduates are starting work at increasingly large salaries, the Labor Department reported today.

During the last four years, a survey showed, the average starting salary had risen steadily from $2,150 to $2,550, the average wage for the science or engineering class of '49.

About 76 per cent of the starting salaries for the 1949 class were $2,400 or higher, while the lowest 10 per cent had a maximum of $2,260. In 1946 only 10 per cent of graduates started at $2,400 or better. This percentage increased to 40 in 1947 and 55 in [illegible]

Galt Man on His Lawn Jumps Just in Time To Escape Automobile

Galt, July 28 — (CP) —Sitting out on his lawn Wednesday night to cool off, E. McPherson had a close call.

A automobile shot across his lawn, struck a bush and then headed for him. He jumped just in time as the car crashed the verandah steps, wrecked a post and carried McPherson's chair against a tree, 27 feet across the lawn.

A. Green, driver of the car, said his gas pedal stuck.

OVER-STEPPED AUTHORITY

Niagara Falls, Ont., July 28 — (CP) — Stamford township council Monday night stripped councilman Arthur G. Bridge, 75, of all committee powers after it was alleged that he had overstepped his powers in authorizing a contractor to proceed with a sewer job without a municipal permit. Councilman Bridge was relieved of his duties as chairman of sewers, sidewalks and property.

Another Hill Will Enter Barrel To Weave Way Through Rapids

Niagara Falls, Ont., July 28 — (CP)—Major Lloyd Hill, 30, will attempt to match feats of his late father and older brother Saturday when he enters a steel barrel to travel the seven miles down the turbulent Niagara River rapids.

Flirting with death in the Niagara river is old stuff to the famous family. Major's father, William (Red) Hill dared the rapids three times before he died a natural death in 1942.

A brother William (Red) Hill, Jr., made the hazardous journey in 1945 in the same barrel used by his father on two trips. And Norman (Corky) Hill, another brother pulling a rowboat with his teeth, swam the Niagara River midway between the American Falls and Rainbow Bridge a few days later "just for practice."

Each time a Hill announced an attempt on the river, local and provincial police moved in to try to stop it.

Major anticipates the same trouble with the constabulary but he is confident he can outwit them as did the other Hills. He plans to conceal the barrel at the bottom of the Niagara Gorge in underbrush until he is ready to begin the trip.

The barrel in which Major intends to make the trip is not yet completed. Under construction at a Niagara Falls welding shop, it will be blunt at one end and pointed at the other.

It will have its first water test when it is placed in the river minutes before the trip is scheduled to start.

WORKMAN KILLED WHEN SAND-SLIDE FILLS EXCAVATION

Rescuers Toil Hour Before Body Recovered

Toronto, July 28 (CP)—Tons of sand fatally smothered Salvatore Bartucci, 60, late Wednesday while his employer and a fellow workman dug desperately to free him from the excavation he had been digging in front of a group of new houses in suburban Scarboro township.

Bartucci had been working alone in a 12-foot-deep excavation dug to make water connections with two new houses. The cave-in occurred after his employer, Alfonso Damico, head of a contracting firm, and Nick Baccangelo had handed material down to him.

A district resident who saw the accident gave this account of it:

"They (Damico and Baccangelo) had just turned their backs when there was a slide of sand. The other two men started to dig for the old man who was down in the hole, but the sand kept sliding back in again."

It took nearly an hour to recover Bartucci's body. Artificial respiration was tried to no avail. Bartucci had no relatives in Canada and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Katzman, with whom he boarded, said he spent most of his time at his work.

Preacher Slain, Youthful Bride's Father is Held

Tampa, Fla., July 28 — (AP) — A former Baptist preacher was shot to death in downtown Tampa Wednesday. A few minutes later police arrested the father of his 15-year-old bride.

Rev. John P. Lane, who eloped in June with the girl organist of his church, fell mortally wounded as his assailant fired five bullets after a street argument.

Police said Ward C. Cornelius, father of Mrs. Lane, was taken into custody for questioning. No formal charges have been filed.

Witnesses told police Lane had stopped his car for a traffic light and that another car drove alongside, then in front of Lane's car, forcing him to stop.

The driver of the car which blocked the minister's vehicle started an argument, witnesses said. Gunfire followed.

Lane, who had been married before, was criticized recently in a resolution by the Tampa Bay Ministers Association following his elopement.

WRONG VALVE TURNED TENANTS REALLY GET HOT

Montreal, July 28—(CP)—It wasn't the humidity so much as the heat that bothered tenants of a mid-town Stanley Street apartment house when they awakened this morning to find the steam heat on. Building superintendent John Baldwin explained that an inspector, looking over the heating equipment, had turned the wrong valve.

Philip Gendron, 29, who operates a nursing home on Walmer Rd., Toronto, is seen after his remand on a charge of murdering Arthur Wickert, 38, department store employee. He's in custody of Det. Sgts. Frank O'Driscoll (beside him at right) and Harold Genno (rear.)—Globe and Mail.

Says Progress in Crime Detection Raises Status of Quebec Police

Valleyfield, Que., July 28 (CP)—Police in Quebec are making such progress in scientific detection and co-ordinated effort "that the time appears not far off when we will be able to boast that our police departments are second to none," Det.-Lt. Emile Joyal of Montreal said today.

Joyal made the statement during the course of his presidential address to the fifth annual meeting of the Canadian Brotherhood of Policemen. The convention brought delegates from 25 Quebec municipalities to this St. Lawrence River industrial city of 12,000.

He claimed that the reported progress was "closely linked" with improvements in salaries and working conditions of policemen. Since the brotherhood was organized five years ago, the weekly wage of a Montreal constable grew from $35 to $55, he said.

"We are at long last professional men in the real sense of the word," Joyal said. "Whereas policemen once worked without much hope of getting anywhere, even when they exposed themselves to danger, they now feel they are in a respected, competitive profession where they can look forward to adequate reward for hard work."

Referring to "constant attacks" made by government authorities "so as to weaken the union by cutting its membership, the Brotherhood Union recommended "prudence tempered with firmness."

"We are a dignified profession" he said, "and we must at all times employ dignity in the struggle for our rights."

HALF CROWD VANISHES

Quebec, July 28—(CP)— Judge Alphonse Garon told a crowd in his courtroom today that since judges, lawyers and court officials have to be properly-clothed no matter how hot it is, there is no reason why spectators should be allowed in shirt sleeves.

More than half the audience vanished.

POLICE DENY HOLDING SUSPECT IN HERN SLAYING

Have Uncovered No Clues in Toronto Case

Toronto, July 28 — (CP) — Inspector John Nimmo denied today reports police are holding one man in connection with the bludgeon-slaying of Leslie Hern, 38-year-old dining car steward whose battered body was found Wednesday stuffed under an east-end beach boardwalk.

Inspector Nimmo said police had uncovered no clues which might lead them to the identity of the slayer.

Movements Traced

Tracing Hern's movements from the time he left his home Tuesday night and later met an older man in a downtown hotel. Hern "probably" met his slayer somewhere in the east-end before going to the beach.

Hern was one of two men slain in Toronto early Wednesday. In the other case, Philip Gendron, 29, was charged with the murder of his brother-in-law, Arthur Wickert, manager of the men's wear department in a downtown department store, and remanded until Aug. 4. Police said Wickert was shot following a drinking party at a nursing home in central Toronto.

When found on an east-end beach, Hern's body was clad only in a shirt. Trousers and a green bathing suit were found nearby, but Hern's relatives said the bathing suit did not belong to the slain man.

Blunt Instrument Used

An autopsy showed that Hern was killed with a "blunt instrument" or bludgeoned with a brick, police said. Investigators said it was possible that he was robbed.

Not for from the body, police found Hern's automobile, a big, expensive sedan. One window was smashed and there were signs that the car had been rifled.

Hern had lived with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Llewellyn Hern; his sister, Isobel; and a brother, George. A cousin, Lulu MacMillan, described his as "a little fellow who acted like a millionaire."

Two men and a woman from Montreal discovered Hern's body. They said they had been sleeping on the beach and about midnight saw a man lying on the boardwalk. They thought he was drunk or asleep. Nearby stood a man, twirling some keys. When the trio drew near, the man with the keys told them:

"Go away. He's my friend, Tommy. He's drunk."

A few hours later, they saw the man still lying on the boardwalk. They looked closer at him and saw that he was dead.

The child was brought here by ambulance July 13 under police escort to have toxic blood drained from his body and replaced with normal blood.

Number of US Polio Cases Running Far Ahead of Second Worst Year

Chicago, July 28 — (AP)—Infantile paralysis cases in 1949 are running far ahead of 1944 — the second worst polio year in United States history.

An Associated Press Survey today showed 6,935 cases in the United States through July 27, with 337 polio deaths.

In 1944 the total for the same date was 4,176. Totals for 1944 eventually reached 19,029, topped only by 27,363 in 1916.

The United States Public Health Service reported the 6,339 cases as of July 23 this year was 38.4 per cent higher than the 4,580 reported through the same date in 1948 — and 1948 was a near-record year.

The polio appeared to be gaining strength with the hot weather. Figures showed 1,444 new cases during the week ending July 23. This was an increase of 47.5 per cent over the same week of 1948, which had 979. In 1944, there were 915 new cases for the week ending July 27.

For the most part the polio upsurge appeared to be fairly evenly distributed over the country. Only scattered epidemic areas were reported.

At least 33 states reported a step-up in the polio rate, while eight showed a decline.

Nearly two-thirds of the polio cases were centred in nine states. The leaders were Texas, 1,123; California 708; Arkansas 488; Oklahoma 440; New York 353; Missouri 302; Minnesota 286; Michigan 270 and Illinois 259.

New York City, which has had 14 polio deaths since July 1, issued an emergency call for nurses. Health Commissioner Harry S. Mustard called the city's 247 cases a "mild epidemic."

Says US Cannot Ignore Aggressive Threat by Russia

Congress Told Europeans In Constant Fear of Reds

Washington, July 28 (AP) — State Secretary Dean Acheson told congress today the United States should begin promptly to help rearm western Europe because "the possibilities of direct military aggression" by huge Russian forces cannot be ignored.

Leading off the administration's drive for congressional approval of a $1,450,000,000 arms aid program, Acheson pictured western European countries as living under the shadow and constant fear of Russian armies which are the greatest the world has known in peacetime.

Approaching Crossroads

He also suggested that Russia is approaching a crossroads in its policies toward the west where it may have to choose whether to continue trying conquest by political means or to resort to "military means."

Acheson appeared before the House of Representatives Foreign Affairs Committee to make his plea for the arms program, already under attack by influential congress members.

Acheson said "the mere presence" of the large Russian forces "has had a psychological effect that has been damaging to recovery and stability, and has been a major influence in the loss of freedom and self-determination in important areas of Europe."

Acheson repeated told the committee that if the United States would back up the pledges of the North Atlantic treaty with military assistance he believes peace would be secured and no aggressor would dare take on the whole combination of western powers.

Mutual Protection

"The fundamental pledge of the treaty, that an attack on one signatory will mean an attack on all, closes the door to piecemeal aggression," Acheson said.

The bulk of the proposed arms aid would go to pact countries.

A provision for procurement of arms on a cash reimbursement basis will be of "considerable value" to Canada, Acheson said.

The weight of the United States effort must be brought to bear in those European countries most vital to United States security and where the threat of aggression is most immediate, he said.

"Nevertheless, there are other areas in which an increase of defensive strength is highly desirable in the interest of our own security. We are bound with our American republic friends and neighbors in the Rio pact of mutual assistance. Under this program we intend to help them in procuring equipment.

Ask for Reimbursement

"The legislation would authorize the President to enter into contracts on behalf of the United States for procurement of such equipment upon a firm undertaking that the recipient nation will make reimbursement before delivery.

Sudbury Suffers $75,000 Fire Loss

Sudbury, July 28 — (CP) — Sudbury firemen fought a battle today in the heart of downtown Sudbury with stubborn flames racing in stores in the St. Joseph building on Elm St. W. Breaking out shortly before 6 a.m., the fire was brought under control shortly after 9 a. m. Damage is expected to run into at least $75,000, but a complete estimate cannot be made until firemen are able to get into the building.

For three hours, the central section of the city was covered with a thick pall of smoke that hindered firemen in their efforts. All off-duty firemen were called to the scene, and were bolstered by reserves of off-duty policemen.

No one was reported injured in the fire, and no smoke effects were suffered by firemen.

Heaviest damage was suffered by City Drug Store, which was gutted. A photograph studio on the second floor was completely burned out, while T. M. Palmer Jewellers and Fashioncraft Men's Wear suffered extensive smoke and water damage. Nearby stores, including S. S. Kresge & Co., also suffered smoke damage.

Eight lines of water were played on the building as firemen strove to locate the heart of the blaze.

Occupants of several apartments were forced to flee the building in night attire as smoke and flames rushed through the building. All were evacuated safely.

Fire Chief William Andrews said, during the height of the fire that the new aerial ladder, recently purchased by the city, "paid for itself" in working on the blaze this morning.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Toronto, July 28 (CP)—Synopsis: Isolated thundershowers in Southern Ontario Wednesday night brought little relief from the sultry weather of the past few days. In central sections more frequent showers were of some help, but only in the drier air over the northern regions did temperatures drop much below seventy Wednesday night.

Much the same conditions are expected today and again on Friday.

Same Lawyer Acts For Both Parties

For the same solicitor to appear in court as counsel for two motorists both charged with careless driving as result of the same accident may be a bit unusual but a local lawyer today did just that—and got both of them off.

The two clients had been involved in a minor accident which occurred at the intersection of two country roads. Total damages amounted to only about $25 but police were called and careless driving charges were laid against each motorist. Both men went to the same lawyer.

Today the court was informed as to the minor nature of the accident with a move from defence counsel for dismissal of the charges. The court agreed and the Crown offered no evidence.

160 Men Arrested In Gambling Raid, $40,000 Seized

Maple Shade, N. J., July 28 — (AP) — Police arrested 160 men and confiscated $40,000 today in a raid on an armed gambling house.

Despite an armored lookout station in which police said they found a revolver and pistol, the 18 raiders captured every occupant of the one - storey concrete - block building without firing a shot.

Listed officially as a plumbing warehouse, officers found the interior to contain "several gross" of dice, several cartons of playing cards, scratch sheets, blackboards listing every major race track in the United States, a ticker-tape system with an underground wire, and slot machines.

Police said most of the players came from Philadelphia and Camden — only 10 miles away —and there was evidence that a limousine service had been bringing many of them here.

Six-Inch Fall Of Snow Reported In Australia

Ottawa, July 28 (CP)—Just a little note of chilling cheer as you fester in the heat: Parts of Australia had a six-inch fall of snow recently.

Kenneth A. Greene, retiring Canadian High Commissioner to the sister Commonwealth, returned to Ottawa with that news today. But he also said that even during winter, now in full stride there, the northern parts of Australia get hotter than Ottawa is today, and that's plenty hot.

15-Pound Pike Caught by Former City Resident

Hopes nurtured for several years, of landing a "real" fish were finally realized by a Montreal vacationist here yesterday.

Mr. Clarewin Martin, formerly of this city, has been returning to his former Bay of Quinte fishing haunts for the past five or six years, but his luck has been confined to a few small bass.

But last evening it was different. Trolling with a "rowing" friend, Martin felt something jerk his line. At first he thought it was a sunken log or the bottom of the bay. He relinquished his trolling pole and grabbed the line.

Some time later he hauled into the boat a fifteen-pound pike. His dream had come true.

Mr. Martin and his wife are the guests of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Martin, 92 South George Street.

Hip Boots Made in 1847 Are Still Serviceable

A Negro named "George" made a pair of hip boots for R. R. Richardson in 1847. In 1897 Mr. Richardson, who at that time was the manager of the Belleville Branch of the Bank of Montreal, gave the boots to bank messenger Frank Sharpe. Today the boots are still serviceable and in good condition.

Mr. Sharpe, who lives at 185 Church Street, brought one of the boots into the newsroom Wednesday afternoon. It is a full length hip boot, with the leg made of seal skin, and the boot of calf skin. The sole of the boot showed a few signs of age, but the seams are good and the leather is in a remarkable state of preservation — kept that way by constant oiling and careful attention on the part of Mr. Sharpe.

Worn Three Years Ago

Mr. Sharpe wore the boots for the last time about three years ago to keep his legs dry "during some bad weather."

The original owner had the boots made for him in Kingston in 1847 by a Negro named "George." Later Mr. Richardson came to Belleville to assume his duties as manager of the Bank of Montreal here, which at that time was at the corner of Pinnacle and Victoria Avenue, and on his retirement presented the boots to Mr. Sharpe. Since then their custodian has receiver several offers for the boots but he will not sell.

"It is no concern of mine what becomes of the boots after I am gone," he said, "but while I live I have no intention of selling them."

In addition to the ageless shoes Mr. Sharpe also collected many old coins while working at the bank.

"The tellers used to put the old coins aside for me," he said.

Included in his collection is a United States shin plaster worth 50 cents, bearing the legend, 'By the Act of March 3rd, 1863," and 'By the Act of June, 20th, 1864," on the reverse side, and the notation that it is good for sterling in 1875 on the front. A William H. the left hand side of the face of the bill, which bears the name of Jos. R. Carpenter, on the bottom.

Paper 'Dime'

A paper "dime" with George Washington's picture on the front is another of his possessions.

The oldest coin which Mr. Sharpe showed was a George the Third specimen dated 1790. A United States coin of 1798, ran it a close second.

Other coins in his collection include a Bank of Montreal token half-penny, dated 1844; a South African two shilling piece of 1896, and a Columbian half dollar, minted in 1898 to commemorate the four hundredth anniversary of Columbus' discovery of America.

Two Men Admit Bank Robbery

Kirkland Lake, Ont., July 28 — (CP) — Leo Martial, 24, and Victor Desmarais, 23, of Noranda, Que., pleaded guilty in court today to charges of armed robbery of the branch of the Imperial Bank of Canada at Larder Lake, 18 miles east of here.

The two, who previously had elected trial in a higher court were remanded one week for sentencing.

Desmarais told Magistrate Seigfried Atkinson that the $1,560 produced in court as having been taken from him on his arrest was only one-half of the actual amount he had given his captors.

The bank loot totalled more than $10,000. All of it was reported recovered after the hold-up.

Both Martial and Desmarais admitted in court that they planned the robbery. Desmarais said they both were "under the influence of drink."

Tht robbery took place July 19. The men were arrested after a daring escape attempt in which they stole a seaplane at Larder Lake but crashed up on shoreline rocks.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, July 28—(CP)—Trading took a large dip downward in one of the dullest days of the past month on the Toronto Stock Exchange today. The advance of industrial issues was stopped and they declined slightly. Golds started to move upward along with base metals while western oils took a small loss.

Simpson's A and preferred declined fractions in an easier industrial list. Others lower were Dominion Steel B, down ⅛ at 16¾, Fanny Farmer, Walkers New, Laura Secord, Winnipeg Electric Common, Canada Steamship preferred, Celanese and Acadia Atlantic Sugar. Included in higher issues were Seagram's, Great Lakes Paper, Kelvinator, which gained a full point, United Fuel B and C.P.R.

Wright Hargreaves, a senior producer, gained five cents in a stronger gold list. Another senior producer, La Luz, took a five cent loss, but in the complete list gains outnumbered losses by over two to one. Among the stocks ahead were Cochenour Williams, Giant Yellowknife, Joliet Quebec, Mining Corporation, a holding issue, Yellorex and Pickle Crow, a four cent gainer.

Noranda added ¼ in a higher base metal group while another member of the big four, Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting gained ¼ at 46. Sherritt Gordon was up 2 cents but profit taking depressed Steep Rock and it dropped seven cents.

Golf Notes

Dr. George Faulkner, and T. A. Carruthers, successfully defended the Branscombe Trophy against a strong challenge from the Cobourg Golf Club team of Lloyd Austin and H. Haines, when they downed the visitors by one hole last Sunday afternoon, at the Bay of Quinte Club.

A large gallery followed the men as they battled evenly over the local course.

T. A. Carruthtrs moved into the final round of club championship play against Murray MacIntosh, by defeating Ernie Pugh.

Names of contestants for the Graham Handicap Trophy have been posted on the clubhouse bulletin board.

The ladies invitation field day is scheduled for August 6th, and an invitation has been extended to all players of all clubs in Ontario to take part.

The fourth annual men's invitation field day will be held August 13.

The course at present is in excellent shape.

Drowns At Fort Frances

Fort Frances, July 28 — (CP)— A 56-year-old member of the Minnesota Senate, C. A. Dahle of Duluth, was drowned Wednesday in Lake Namakan shortly after he and five other members of the state senate went for a launch ride. Lake Namakan is 40 miles southeast of here.

Police said Senator Dahle and his companions had just left the shore when Dahle jumped overboard for a swim. He failed to reappear and police recovered his body soon afterwards.

Earlier reports said the victim was former Senator Joseph Hurst Ball, a Minnesota Republican. However, Sheriff Adolph Johnson of Orr, Minn., investigating the drowning, confirmed it was Dahle.

C.S.U. Must End Shipping Strike Before Talks

Ottawa, July 28 — (CP)— A seven-man delegation of the Canadian Seamen's Union today was told by Arthur MacNamara, Deputy Minister of Labor, that the Union must end its four-month shipping strike before the department could again consider entering discussions.

The Deputy Minister said in an interview that he had advised by telegram Wednesday that he saw "no good purpose" in the delegation coming to Ottawa unless there was a change in the strike situation.

However, he allowed the delegation an audience after Charles MacDonald of Cornwall, leader of the delegation said the telegram had not been received.

Mr. MacDonald and his delegation, representing the "rank and file" of the allegedly communist-dominated union, placed before Mr. MacNamara proposals for ending the strike.

The proposals, which included an offer to call off the strike if C.S.U. members were returned to their jobs without discrimination previously were rejected as unfeasible when presented by Harry Davis, President of the C.S.U., and T.C. McManus, Secretary-treasurer.

Although these officers have stepped out of the negotiation picture to make it easier for the C.S.U. to effect a settlement with ship-owners, it was understood Mr. MacDonald told the Deputy Minister the strike would be carried out under the terms made by the C.S.U. executive.

"AMPLE WARNING" OF STORMS

Typhoons have struck in the Pacific, at Okinawa and Shanghai. At the former one child was killed and sixteen persons were injured. At Shanghai there were 29 deaths and early reports were that 200,000 houses were wrecked. This gives some idea of the violence with which these storms strike.

The typhoon has earned a reputation for terror but man's growing knowledge of these violent demonstrations of nature has served to protect him in some degree against damage. Of the storm which hit Okinawa it was said that "ample warning of the storm's approach apparently prevented heavier casualties."

Those words indicate progress of man's control through intimate knowledge of the ways of nature. New York Times refers to this terrifying phenomenon of the Pacific which forms as a rule in the equatorial region east and south of the Philippines and characteristically moves in a northwesterly direction. Areas of considerable of population are usually in its path. In the 1945 typhoon at Okinawa, the whole bow section of a warship was blown away.

"The defense against this danger lies in the adequacy of the warning system. That system has been well developed in the Philippines and in outlying stations such as Yap," says the Times. "The maintenance of that system is now part of the United States operations in the area. It is good to know that in this latest disaster the warning was ample."

These facts indicate how data gathered scientifically can be used for the safety of human beings against the rage of the elements.

Gathering of information of weather conditions is carried out on a vast scale today so that people may have the knowledge hours or days in advance so that they may prepare their plans in view of the conditions of the weather. What benefit this is to everyone can be realized, say in winter, when storms are forecast and men are able to time their travels and their work so that the storm may not too greatly interfere.

Success in getting at the heart of the typhoon is an outstanding example of what sufficient warning may mean to people in the equatorial regions where the typhoon has so bad a record.

WINGLESS FOWL

A man in Iowa has achieved something which would have taken Mother Nature, working according to the natural law perhaps many thousands of years to accomplish by slow degrees. A man has suucceeded in developing a breed of chickens without wings. This condition will have its advantages for the Iowan, who will be able to promise larger legs and plumper breasts on the wingless birds which will not be able to roam as poultry can roam now by using their wings to get over a fence, two feet will be the highest possible fence these new birds will be able to overcome.

Anything referring to chickens, that popular table fowl, makes good reading for newspaper readers and so the New York Herald Tribune, referring to an article in the Des Moines Register, comments that there are drawbacks: "One remembers, for instance, that in the case of chicken every Sunday — when tradition and economy make one chicken serve six people — wings have always had an important part in the sex-angular dissection of a resistant rooster. A wing and a slice or two of white meat ranks as an accomplished plate."

The Herald-Tribune has an idea that there may develop a square chicken in Iowa, "that would set firmly for the amateur carver. A chicken with two gizzards, more richly filling the gravy bowl. A chicken with four legs to compensate for the locomotive loss of wings. In the world of modern agriculture, there is no reason, we believe, why man should rest content with the same styles in chickens which sustained Jonathan Edwards on New England Sabbaths, or fluttered in cock-fighting pits in Virginia when Patrick Henry was a boy."

It is likely fowls will continue somewhat as they are. But breeding has played a great role in these birds and in ducks and geese. Man has developed new breeds and has in the chickens of today breeds which serve humanity well.

LIFE UNDER A DICTATOR

Observe his every mood and whim,
Remember to say "yes" to him,
Or if it's "no" he'd have you say,
Be sure his bidding to obey.
For no dictator fair will be
To those who dare to disagree.

No nonsense a dictator stands.
Be sure to do as he commands.
If you but hint that wrong is he,
You won't get home that night for tea.
He'll send you to the wall to die,
Nor let you bid your wife good-bye.

Be careful not to put in ink
A single word of what you think.
Dictators always live in fright
Of thoughtful men who like to write,
And writing men from year to year
Mysteriously disappear.

Dictators patient will not be
With slaves who beg for liberty.
Such men in silence they will keep
In dungeons damp and dark and deep.
A happy life? Who'd choose today
To live the years in such a way?

PITCHING HORSESHOES

By Billy Rose

Recently, a doctor in Maine sent me a story about a courageous kid and, unless I'm getting soft in the heart, it's the most touching tale of heroism I've come across in a long time . . .

Three weeks ago, the medico got a hurry-up telephone call to come out to a small summer camp 20 miles west of Bangor. There, half an hour later, he examined a six-year-old girl and found that one of her legs was broken and that she had lost a lot of blood from a gash in her thigh.

The story, as he got it from the mother, was that the girl and her brother, aged 7, had gotten into the loft of an abandoned barn and, when a rotted plank had given way, she had fallen, broken her leg and ripped her thigh on a piece of rusty farm machinery.

As the doctor was cauterizing the cut and setting the leg, the boy — his name was Peter—kept watching from the doorway with worried interest.

"Is Molly going to be all right?" he asked when the splints were in place.

"She's lost a lot of blood," said the doctor, "but if she gets past the crisis tonight, everything will be okay."

"What's a crisis"?

"It's — well, I guess it's the time when a person is sickest."

"When people lose a lot of blood, do they die?"

"Sometimes. You see, the heart needs a certain amount to keep going. In a way, it's like the motor of a car — it stops running if it doesn't get enough gasoline."

"I see," said Pete.

Later that night, the little girl's pulse began to slow up.

"I'm afraid your daughter needs an immediate transfusion," the doctor told the father, "but there is a complication. She has an unusual type of blood, and I doubt whether the blood bank in Bangor has it in stock."

"Her brother has the same type," said the father. "I know, because the pediatrician who examined the kids last year told me so . . ."

Pete looked startled a minute later when his dad asked him if he would give up a cup of blood to help his sister get well.

"How can I" the boy asked.

"The doctor does it with a little rubber tube."

"Can I think about it "

"Sure," said his father, "but don't take too long."

Pete went to his room, and his parents heard him close the door. Five minutes later, he was back, looking very earnest. "All right," he said.

When it was over, the doctor bandaged the boy's arm and told him to lie down and take it easy. But instead, the kid went out on the porch and, when his father found him there at midnight, his face was white and his fingers were clenched.

"What's the matter, Pete "

"Oh, nothing," said the boy.

"Look here," said his father. "There's something going on in that head of yours. What is it "

"I was wondering how long it will take."

"How long will what take "

"How long it will take me to die."

"To do what?"

"To die," repeated the boy. "It's like the doctor said — when there isn't enough blood, the motor stops running."

"I see," said the father. "When you gave your sister a cup of blood, you figured you were going to die yourself."

"Sure," said Pete. "That's why I wanted to think it over."

Salazar Says Russia Capable of Smashing Attack

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

Premier Antonio De Oliveira Salazar of Portugal advised his National Assembly Tuesday that under present conditions Russia could, if she wanted to, "carry her armies in a smashing march as far as the English Channel and the Pyrenees."

During his 20 years of dictatorship the 60-year-old Salazar has established the reputation of being one of the world's most astute rulers. Therefore when he makes a public statement, which he rarely does, he merits attention.

Of course he was putting pressure on his legislature to ratify the Atlantic Pact (which it did Wednesday by a vote of 80 to 3).

The Premier might have added, I believe, that while Russia may be capable of such a drive, she isn't likely to undertake it as things now stand.

Battle Line-up

The allied rearmament plan for Western Europe is based largely on the potential combat strength of the five countries comprising the Western Europe Union—Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg. That totals about 1,500,000 men. They would hold the fort until American troops could be thrown into action.

As opposed to these forces, Russia is said to have a total of more than 4,000,000 men, including 2,500,000 in the ground forces. The Soviet is reported to have some 350,000 men strategically located in Germany, and perhaps another 20,000 scattered about in Eastern Europe.

Russia, however, is encountering grave resistance to her domination of Eastern Europe from the peoples of the various satellite countries. President Truman called attention to this in blunt language during his Chicago speech the other day. He said that within its inner circle the Soviet orbit "manifests the fatal weakness of all dictatorships."

Significant

Well now, with all this being true, is Moscow likely to launch any military drive to overrun Western Europe? Such an offensive would be a wide-open invitation to discontented satellites to rise and strike for liberty. It would only be undertaken as an act of desperation.

However, this doesn't warrant any complacence on the part of the democracies, for they still are faced with the fact that Russia's immediate striking power might be suffcent to carry her to the channel, and must be matched quickly.

RUSSIA DEMANDS YUGOSLAVS RELEASE 31 SOVIET CITIZENS

London, July 27 — (AP)—Russia has demanded that Yugoslavia release 31 Soviet citizens she charges have been jailed, beaten and "doomed to starvation" in reprisal for Moscow's critical attitude toward the Yugoslav premier, Marshal Tito.

A protest note "insisting" on release of the Russians was broadcast Tuesday night by Moscow radio. It was another demonstration of the wide rift between the two countries, resulting from Tito's quarrel with the Soviet-led communist Information Bureau (Cominform).

Plastic Bag May Save Pop's Paint Brush

(An Editorial In The Hamilton Spectator)

Among the lesser domestic frictions is the paint brush—after it has been used and forgotten, that is.

The man of the house is perhaps a methodical fellow who likes everything ship-shape in that sacrosanct retreat of his known as the tool room in a corner of the basement. There, above his bench, hanging in orderly rows are his chisels, his brace and bits, screw-drivers, hammer, saws; most of the instruments of joinery in fact. On the shelves are the numerous jars each containing its own size of nails or screws. Over by themselves are his paint brushes, graduated from one-inch to four-inch, and each hanging from the corded sling passed through the drilled hole in the handle. Their bristles are soft and ready for use.

• • •

Pop is never done exhorting the household to show some regard for paint brushes, but his expert advice is really intended for only one pair of ears. Give a brush a bit of care, he goes on, and it will last for years. No mystery about it. Just a little turps as soon as you've finished a job, then a good cleaning with warm water and laundry soap. It's an intelligent way to treat a brush; also economical. Take that one he'd bought only two weeks ago to do the front verandah with. You'd never know it had been used. Please don't touch it, any one.

Then he announces casually at supper one evening that he thinks he'll go up North for a few days of fishing. Mother gets that glint in her eye and decides what she'll achieve with that new brush when the good man is trying to land small-mouthed bass and battling mosquitoes on Lake Choke-a-smoke-a-smog-a-haw-haw. She'll give the bathroom a coat of enamel, that's what, and also the kitchen chairs and table if she has time.

Pop has pretty good luck up North. He forgets all about the paint brush when he gets back. So does Mother. Nobody thinks about it until November when the hall stormwindow requires some touching up to withstand the winter.

Where's that new brush? Mother flees upstairs to her sewing room. She has found it to be the safest place when thunder begins to rumble and lightning threatens to flicker. Pop finds the brush after a search. Just as he expected. All hard, rusted and deformed in a solid inch of what remains of a quart tin of ivory, quick-drying.

It was always thus: but it needn't happen any more. A plastic bag has been produced that will keep wet paint brushes soft and pliable for long periods. It should have its uses, sure enough. As Pop laments, you just can't teach a woman how not to abuse a perfectly good paint brush.

Find Skull, Bones Of British Sailor Killed in 1814

Collingwood, July 27 — (CP)—A skull and bones, believed to be the remains of a British sailor killed during the Battle of Nottawasaga 135 years ago, have been found by two girls in the Nottawasaga River near this Georgian Bay town, it was learned today.

A small, heavily - corroded brass button was found with the bones.

It is believed the sailor was one of the casualties when three American ships blew up the S. S. Nancy in 1814. Parts of the ship were found in the river recently.

THE PACKSACK

OF GREGORY CLARK

The thing that is most irritating about flies is their persistence. Doubtless, among flies, persistence is regarded as the highest virtue. But the way a common house fly or a mosquito or one of the deer or moose flies met in the woods will bore in to the assault and continue to attack despite the most dangerous swipes and slaps of his adversary, rarely if ever inspires any feel- of admiration in us humans. And, recollect, we are gifted with the capacity for admiration of such qualities...

The worst flies I ever encountered are the common house fly to be found in Italy and North Africa, and the other Mediterranean countries. It is both persistent and stupid. Our American flies at least pay us a compliment of dodging and ducking when we go for them. But the Italian fly seems to have acquired a sort of fatalistic attitude common to the Mediterranean people themselves: if it dodges at all, it is a very half-hearted dodge. Where a Canadian fly will jump a yard or two when attacked, an Italian fly will merely move six inches, and return immediately to your nose or your bald head or slice of had an entirely fresh attitude towith it. The stupidity of its persistence is curiously infuriating. For the first couple of weeks, I tried to demonstrate that I was a newcomer in their midst, not an Italian; and that I hand an entirely fresh attitude towards flies: and I flicked and slapped and swatted vigorously. Then I realized that in all probability, this characteristic of the Italian flies was ingrained for centuries; and it would take more than one reformer to make much impression on them. Besides there were an awful lot of them.

It was in Italy that I conceived a little respect for our Canadian flies: they may be persistent, but they are not stupid. It takes ten times the speed and skill to kill a Canadian fly. And what is more, after a couple of swats, they seem to possess the power to learn.

THE BLUE-EYED CHILDREN OF BROWN-EYED PARENTS

If any sophomore has not yet instructed me about the "laws" of genetics (inheritance, heredity) will he or she kindly do so within the next few days. It is nearly a fortnight since I have received a lesson about it and without frequent reviews I am likely to revert to my normal state of ignorance.

It is naive for a sophomore to cite Mendel's "law" against brown-eyed parents having a blue-eyed child.

Mendel's discovery is applicable to guinea pigs, fowl and other species but not to man.

By the color of the eye we mean the color of the iris or ring that surrounds the pupil.

The color of all eyes is brown—for that is the color of the pigment, the quantity of which determines the depth of eye color. If little or no pigment is present in the iris the individual is called an albino and the eyes look pink or red from the color of the interior showing through the pupil.

If a little more pigment is present in the iris the eye is called "blue". Still more pigment makes the eye look gray or hazel. Still more pigment makes the eyes look brown. The greatest amount of pigment makes the eyes look "black." But all eyes that have any color at all are actually brown, for that is the color of the pigment, and never "blue" or "black."

I cannot recall that I ever saw a brown-eyed child born of parents both of whom were blue-eyed. So I'll leave that question to readers who may have known of blue-eyed parents bearing brown-eyed children.

I have seen many blue-eyed children born of parents both of whom were brown-eyed, notwithstanding any "law" to the contrary.

In fact it is well known to many observers that when both parents are brown-eyed either all the children will be brown-eyed or three fourths of the children will be brown-eyed and one-fourth will be blue-eyed.

When both parents are blonds most of their children will be blonds, not all. In general about 77 percent of children born to blond parents are on the brunet side, or at any rate not so blond as their parents.

When one parent is blond and the other is darker, half of the children will be blond, half darker, but rarely darker than the darker parent.

This rule applies when one parent is Caucasian and the other Negro.

When one parent is as purely "white" as the average (say 98 percent Caucasian with 2 percent black, yellow or brown) and the other parent has a larger admixture of black, yellow or brown, the children will only rarely show more color than the more colored parent, and never, so far as I have been able to determine, as much color as the pure Negro.

Please spare me more gossip and yarns about this. It makes no difference how well your cousin knew the "parties" or whether you yourself knew them. Only instances which afford an opportunity to corroborate or invalidate interest me. I believe but can't prove (because it is a negative) that atavism or "throw back" never occurs in the human family.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Prematurely Gray Hair

I am 36 and my hair is turning gray. (Mrs. W. R. H.)

Answer—Include in your diet plenty of soya bean, wheat germ, wheat bran, liver, roasted peanuts, oats, eggs, cauliflower, broccoli, dried beans, lamb. These are the richest food sources of pantothenic acid, deficiency of which in the diet may be a cause of premature graying of the hair. Send stamped self addressed envelope and ask in writing (no clipping, please) for the pamphlet The Iodin Ration.

Shingles

Please write an article on shingles. Can't do me any good now because I've got 'em, but might help others. (Mrs. M. B.)

Answer—Chapter on shingles (herpes zoster) in booklet Save Your Skin, which deals with many skin troubles. For copy send twenty-five cents and stamped self addressed envelope.

Move Over, Auntie

My aunt aged 70, has conceived the idea that it makes her a little sick to get into the bathtub. She says she washes herself enough without actually wallowing in the tub, but I don't think that is sufficient. Please print in your column how important it is to. (G. B.)

Answer—Me, too. The very thought of getting into a tub that has been used by some one else is unpleasant. Wallow if you like, but for goodness sake leave your aunt alone. Her method of washing is as healthful and maybe more healthful than yours.

Shower

Is it good to take a fresh water shower after swimming in the ocean or not? (Mrs. B. M.)

Answer—Suit yourself—so far as health is concerned.

TODAY'S TALK

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

SQUARE AWAY!

You who have taken a ship and noted its movement, out of its harbor, remember well how it squares away and heads out to sea. And when we enter upon a new job, or an entirely new proposition, the first thing to be done is to square away, with no strings tied to past performances. A clean start.

To square away may suggest many other things — getting your life organized to carry on smoothly and efficiently, preparing yourself to meet all events and emergencies squarely and courageously, and seeking at all times to square up to your friends and to be square with yourself.

You have heard the terms "square shooter" and "four-square" as applied to anyone. It's something worth hanging to throughout life. You can forgive and overlook a great many defeats and annoying characteristics, when you know, and feel, that the one you deal with is square in all dealings and associations.

Each day of your life, as soon as you open your eyes in the morning you can square away for a happy and successful day. It's the mood and the purpose at the inception of each day that are the important facts in charting your course for the day. We can always square away for a fresh start, no matter what the past has been. It's today that is the paramount problem always. Yesterday is but history.

Every marriage is a squaring away to meet the many confusing and eventful problems of life. And if this is done by all concerned, the voyage is certain to be both a pleasant and a successful one. Going into business for oneself is also a squaring away—self-reliance put to the full test, and all the imbred faculties of the mind challenged. It's all this that creates incentive, forever driving us forward.

If we make this a motto of life, to keep squared away to meet all times and circumstances we need have little worry as to the outcome of our efforts. There will be outcomes aplenty to inspire us ahead.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

LET THE TIDE DO IT

Many years ago when the Hell Gate bridge was being built over the East River in New York, engineers discovered the hulk of a derelict ship sunk deep in the mud just where one of the piers of the bridge was to be located. Try as they would, they could not dislodge the hulk, and apparently all the tugging in the world was never going to raise it from the bottom.

At last one of the engineers had a bright idea. He took an old flat boat and, when the tide was low, fastened it to the sunken ship. Then he waited for the tide to rise. What tug boats could not do, the great energy of the sea did with ease. When the tide swept in, the derelict was loosened from the bottom of the river, freed from the mud in which it had been imbedded for generations.

There is a spiritual truth here which must be apparent to us all. We have sins and weaknesses in our lives at which we have been tugging for years in an attempt to get rid of them. The message not only of the incident related above but the whole revealed Word of God is that if we let the tidal energy of the divine sweep into our lives, it will raise out of our souls the derelicts that have become imbedded there.

We fight a losing fight against sin when we try with our own efforts alone to dislodge it. It is only when we give our lives into the hands of God that He does for us what we cannot do for ourselves.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMIESON

Get Your Beauty Sleep, Young Lady

Late-to-bed seems to be the habit in many families, especially those who are city dwellers. Young people seem to fancy that sleeping is a waste of time. This sermonette is addressed to the girl who prowls around the house at all hours, decides to shampoo her hair at midnight; also to the pretty little cutie who must ever be going places, whose eyes are brightest when the bright lights glimmer, whose late hours cause her parents anxiety and worry.

So here goes! You may fool Mom and Dad when you creep quietly into the house and tiptoe to your room, but you can't fool old mother Nature. She is always awake, knows precisely and exactly what you are doing. She will punish you by putting circles under your eyes, by taking the ginger out of your steps and by removing the pleasing, attractive coloring from your complexion.

You are not made of wire and fiddle strings, even if you are in your late teens. You are subject to ills the same as adults and, chances are, you have a nervous system even less steady than older individuals have. You need eight hours of sleep every night; if you don't manage to get them there will be a penalty to pay of one kind or another.

It isn't just the physical frame that needs rest, but the nervous system, and the eyes. During every wakeful moment the eyes are on the job, energy is being expended, the mind is at work. Sleep is the vital phenomenon of life; it is not only restful and refreshing, but it is re-vitalizing. We have to have it so our batteries will be recharged.

During sleep the body casts off poisonous waste products; when they are retained in the muscles and the blood streams during a state of fatigue, they are a menace to the health.

Every act of the senses depletes our forces to a certain extent, even our emotions, pleasant and unpleasant. Every waking hour we are wearing out a little bit; every sleeping hour we are picking up again, being mended and repaired.

If you keep on wearing out without giving nature a chance to make restorations, you are not going to feel very peppy or look any too well.

There is magic in dreams—and beauty, too. Plan your life and organize your activities so that you will have sufficient rest at night. If you go to bed at the same time every night, keep regular hours, the chances are you will drop to sleep like a baby, not tumble and toss and hope that the sand man will hurry along. Relax body and mind.

R Harback.

The bride looked lovely in shell pink moire taffeta with a corsage of cream roses and white accessories.

The bride's only attendant was Miss Cynthia Stocks, dressed in ice blue taffeta with a corsage of white gladioli.

The groomsman was Mr. Ross Wilson, a friend of the bridegroom.

The reception was held at the home of the bride with only the immediate relatives present. The bride's mother received in a flowered grey dress with a corsage of red roses. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother who wore a grey dress with a corsage of red roses.

For the wedding trip, the bride chose a navy silk dress with white accessories and white coat.

The happy young couple motored to Ottawa, and other eastern points.

Harrowing Sea Experience Does Not Dampen Enthusiasm

Vancouver, July 27 (CP).—Two Vancouver girls, who recently went through a harrowing nautical experience, are just as enthusiastic as ever about the sea.

Anna Ozol and Bettie MacKenzie, radio operator and stewardess respectively, told Tuesday in a telephone interview from Tacoma, Wash., of a hectic night aboard the Norwegian motorship Skaubo.

The Skaubo bound for Vancouver, limped into the Tacoma port after her cargo of copper concentrate shifted and threatened to capsize the vessel.

Miss Ozol manned her post at the ship's radio, and Miss MacKenzie calmed the eight passengers.

"I'm sore all over from being knocked about by the heavy pitching," said Miss MacKenzie.

Miss Ozol added "for a long time we thought the ship was doomed. It was tilted over so far that water was swirling up to the hatch."

Ghost Monk Tolls Disaster Warning

Elm, Cambridgeshire, England —(CP)—When Mrs. Irene Bradshaw heard the mysterious bell of Ignatius the Monk "tolling" in her husband's vicarage, she expected to be told that one of their parishioners had died.

"Next day I learned of the death of Mrs. Alice Mitcham who lived in our village," she said. "I have never heard the bell without learning afterwards that someone had died. The odd thing is no one hears it but me."

Police said Mrs. Mitcham was found dead in her house. A gun lay near the body.

The vicar confirmed that, always within a few hours of his wife's premonition, he had been notified that his services would be needed for a funeral.

Mrs. Bradshaw said she once met "the ghost of Ignatius" in a corridor soon after they went to the vicarage two years ago.

"He was wearing sandals and a monk's brown habit. He told me he was Ignatius, the Bellringer, and that he had lived in a monastery here 700 years ago.

"It was his job to ring the bell when there was danger of floods rising in the fens. Once he fell asleep and did not ring the warning. Some monks were drowned and he was in disgrace.

"Since then," Mrs. Bradshaw said, "I have talked with Ignatius many times. Once before when I heard the bell I woke my husband in the early hours. We found that a water tank had overflowed and was flooding the house."

Casual Clothes For Teen-Agers Western Choice

Winnipeg — (CP) — If Winnipeg is an indication, western girls dress more casually than their eastern sisters.

It's not unusual here to see girls dressed in slacks and jackets—or even shorts — strolling along Portage Avenue, the city's main street.

Miss Doris Griffiths, assistant manager of one of Winnipeg's largest store's teen department, says "it's all a matter of comfort."

"The girls here, particularly teen-agers, are great addicts for slacks, shorts and bathing suits during the hot weather."

However, women do dress for heavy dates, parties and shows. When time comes around for stepping out with their beaux, dainty cool cotton dresses do the trick in the summertime.

"They dress plainly, without much jewelry, and often dispose of stockings in favor of a good leg-tan," Miss Griffiths said. Ankle socks are strictly out with most girls.

Shoes Colored

Shoes are usually in the category of loafers. Flaties, rather than high ankle shoes, are the rule. Colored shoes, to match their dress, are usually worn.

In wintertime, ski slacks and jackets are favorite day-to-day wear.

"They are very style-conscious," said Miss Griffitns, "but do not go in too much for frills."

Miss Griffiths thinks the casual-wear fashion mode was set many years ago, and is not just a recent whim taken up by the new generation.

Girls read fashion magazines extensively, she said, and turn out in large numbers for fashion shows in the city. At teen-age fashion previews the girls themselves model clothes they will probably be wearing the coming season.

WAS FIRST WHITE BOY

Alberni, B. C. — (CP) — William Thomas Wenborn, the first white baby born in Alberni, died recently in Vancouver. He was 86. His birth was recorded in the family Bible and a few Indians brought birthday gifts. Soon after hostile Indians forced the family to flee to Victoria.

Glamor Returns to British Weddings This Summer

By MURIEL NARRAWAY

London, July 28 (CP)—Glamor has returned to British weddings. With the ending of clothes rationing it's a "white wedding" summer.

And big weddings, with lavish preparations on the pre-war scale, are the thing—for those who can pay.

Color concentration is in the bridesmaids' dresses. It is no longer fashionable to have them all the same.

10 Bridesmaids

One recent bride had 10 bridesmaids with dress solors ranging from the pale shell-pink of the tiny trainbearers, through flush and rose pinks, to the deep clover of the last two.

A bride in white lace had bridesmaids dressed in flowing tulle—two mushroom pink, two golden yellow, two sea-green, two cafe-au-lait.

The vogue for "separates" has greatly helped brides who want to use their dresses afterwards.

A wedding dress by Pemberton is composed of ivory satin skirt with waist-length jacket held by a wide belt of self-material. The jacket is embroidered in tiny pearls and fastens down the front with single pearl buttons. Satin gloves and juliet cap of catin embroidered with seed pearls and a tulle veil complete the ensemble. Alternately the jacket can be made of lace over stain with lace cap to match.

After the wedding the skirt can be used for evening wear combined with decollete lace blouse on top of gold or silver lame or brocade, while the jacket makes it into a dinner dress.

A bridesmaid's dress by Pemberton has eau-de-nil skirt of taffeta and separate bodice top, with gloves of pink and grey silk damask and belt of grey taffeta. It makes a charming dinner or evening dress and can be combined with high-to-the-neck velvet jacket for colder days.

Elaborate Gown

One of princess Elizabeth's bridesmaids, Lady Elizabeth Lambert, has her wedding gown, designed by Clive Duncan, in mushroom bloom" angel skin with a draped wreath neckline and hip drapery gathered at waist-back to form a long, cascading flared train. The tulle veil is held by side bunches or orange blossom.

Her sister, Lady Joanna Lambert, has a bridesmaid's gown of peony-rose-pink chiffon. The circular skirt is cut from a front V and falls into soft folds. A three-tiered fluted frill at each elbow matches the frill trimming of the square neckline.

The general trend in headdresses is towards simplicity. The elaborate halos of pearls and orange blossom are being replaced by little circlets of flowers, dainty caps or single rows of aiamante.

Lady Directors Arrange Prize List For Fall Fair

Tweed, Special—The lady directors of Tweed Agricultural Society met in the council chambers on Thursday night to arrange for any changes in the prize list for the coming fall fair, which is to be held this year on September 13th and 14th.

President Dennis Fleming and secretary John Sager, were also present to assist the ladies with any suggestions they had to offer to make Tweed Fair this year the best ever.

Mrs. Harry M. Coulter, president of the lady directors, was in the chair to conduct the meeting. She also gave a report of the 40th annual convention of Ontario Association of Agricultural Societies held in the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, which convention she had the honor of attending. She said "there were 252 delegates registered in the ladies division and they were welcomed at the registration desk by Mrs. Hume and Mrs. Lowe."

Delegation Welcomed

The president, Mrs. Alex McKinney, of Brampton, said in her opening remarks that "it was an honor and a pleasure to welcome such a large delegation of women at the 13th annual meeting, adding that the little country fairs did much to raise the standards of agriculture in those early days, and it is easy to understand why so many fairs were organized in small communities. "The prize list should feature the work that is being done in the district," and, asked, "are we offering enough prize money?" "The fairs should include the school children, which nearly all fairs do now, and provide a place for the young people not only in exhibits, but in the organization and the management of the fairs, for they are the ones to take our place in the future."

Mrs. Winder, of Aylmer, in her address said, "There is only one way to have a successful fair, and that is to be fair minded from one fair to the next."

Mr. Carroll urged all ladies to attend the annual meeting and plan with the men where improvements to the grounds and buildings could be made. He also said "that we should revise our prize list each year, and add new items of interest to suit the different contests, and that we should try and encourage new lady members to join the fair, and many would help, if they were asked to do so.

Mrs. Coulter remarked that "We are fortunate to have in our own district the president of the Ladies Division of the Ontario Association. Mrs. Henderson, of Napanee, and Mrs. Hume, of Campbellford, as second vice president, and I know that both of these two ladies will give us any help they can."

The following officers were elected for the year:-

Honorary Lady Directors: Mrs. Chas. Rush and Mrs. L. Ketcheson.

Honorary President: Mrs. H. M. Coulter.

President: Mrs. T. C. Graham.

Vice President: Mrs. Robert Wheeler.

Secretary: Mrs. H. Countryman (re-elected).

Directors—Mrs. D. Fleming; Mrs. Clayton Fisher; Mrs. Wm. Keilty; Mrs. James Jeffrey; Mrs. Wm. Woods; Mrs. Arthur Albert; Mrs. H. Rush; Mrs. E. Hodgins; Mrs. S. Bateman and Mrs. Vincent Healey.

Junior Tennis Final May be East-West Event

Ottawa, July 28 — (CP) — A ceremony is being arranged Saturday for presentations to the winner of the junior men's singles event in the Canadian junior tennis championships being played this week at the Rideau Lawn Tennis Club in suburban Overbrook.

The final is expected to be an east-west affair, with first-seeded Raymond Page of Montreal and No. 2 man Paul Willie of Vancouver, favored to fight it out for the championship.

Both advanced into the semi-finals Wednesday along with Robert Bedard of Sherbrooke, Que., and Andre de Chavigny of Quebec.

Early plans called for the finals to be finished on Thursday in order to send the top-notchers in the tournament to the United States championships next week at Kalamazoo, Mich. However, the schedule was re-arranged so that the finals would precede the ceremony Saturday.

R. N. Watt of Montreal, honorary-president of the Canadian Lawn Tennis Association, will present the Bob Watt trophy, awarded annually to the winner of the junior men's singles.

The trophy is presented in memory of his son who was killed overseas in the Second World War. It was first presented to Lorne Maine of Vancouver in 1946.

The two top-seeded men drew large gallerys Wednesday as Page took a 6-2, 4-6, 6-2 decision over Toronto's Don Fontana and Willey, on an adjacent court, smashed his way to a 6-1, 9-7, 6-3 victory over Mike Jamieson of Calgary.

In the other men's quarter finals, De Chavigny was extended to 6-1, 4-6, 6-3, 6-2 by Jim Bentley, an unseeded Toronto player, while Bedard won a long-drawn-out struggle with John Milliken of Ottawa, triumphing after a 11-9, 8-6, 6-3 marathon.

Meanwhile, Ottawa's Pat Love, favored to retain her women's singles crown, breezed past Therese Helte of Montreal and her clubmate, Joyce Felix, to reach the semi-finals. She lost only three games to Miss Helle and one to Miss Felix, winning both matches in straight sets.

TASTES WATER 50 TIMES DAILY

London, July 28 (CJ)—Water taster S. Barwick is the only one of his kind in London. Fifty times a day he takes a mouthful of water and he isn't happy unless it's tasteless.

That goes for every drop of water flowing through the city's 8,000 miles of fresh-water mains.

To keep his palate in shape he doesn't smoke. "And while alcohol isn't so bad I don't approve of it."

Latta Defeats Shannonville 8-6 To Enter Finals

Latta baseball club last night earned the right to enter the South Hastings Baseball League finals when they defeated the Shannonville nine by a 8-6 score. The Latta lads now meet Cannifton in the trophy series with the first game scheduled tomorrow night at Cannifton.

Glass started on the mound for the winners but was relieved by Hall who got credit for the win. Reid and Juby toiled on the mound for the losers with the latter being tabbed for the loss.

Hart paced the Latta eleven-hit attack with two doubles and a single. Empson got a triple and single and Hazard, two singles.

Shannonville's Lewis connected for three safeties, all singles while Reid got a pair.

The teams:- Latta:- Hart, rf; Hazard, ss; O. Glass, p, c,; Empson, 2b, lf; McCreary, cf; Sullivan, 1b; Meeks, lf; Flindall, 3b; Marsh, 2b.

Shannonville:- L. Maracle, 2b; Reid, 1b, p; Marion, lf; Lewis, ss; Juby, p, 1b; Smith, c; Hall, 3b; Barnerstock cf; Hill, lf.

Shots That Started First World War Fired 35 Years Ago

Sarajevo, Yugoslavia, July 28 —(AP)—Thirty-five years ago today the First World War broke out as an indirect result of a double slaying in this ancient town.

On July 28, 1914, Serbian student Gavrillo Princep fatally shot Archduke Francis of Austria and his pretty young wife.

Result: Austria declared war on Serbia. Germany invaded France. Russia invaded Germany. Then a British expeditionary force landed in France.

Two Alta. Cities Vie For Honor Of Oil Capital

Edmonton, July 28 (CP)—It's a good thing Edmonton and Calgary are 180 miles apart or who knows what the long distance squabble over which city is Canada's oil capital might develop into.

Never on the best of terms, the two cities have been eyeing each other more askance every day since oil was discovered almost inside Edmonton's city limits.

Calgary, whose Turner Valley fields were the first oil fields to be developed in Alberta, fired the first gun of the current dispute in a letter to the Regina Chamber of Commerce.

Claims Title

The Regina Chamber wanted to know whether Calgary or Edmonton could be considered Alberta's oil capital. In a letter, the Calgary Chamber's secretary, Eric McGreer, promptly claimed the honor.

He said that headquarters of most of the oil companies and the stock exchange are located in the foothills city. In addition, he said, a 16-storey, $3,000,000 oil centre building will be built in Calgary shortly.

Edmonton Chamber of Commerce men and civic officials had no sooner read reports of Mr. McGreer's statements than their hackles rose. They loudly denied Calgary's claim.

Executive secretary Don McKay of the Edmonton Chamber said Calgary may claim oil company buildings but Edmonton is definitely the centre of the producing area with such vast fields as Leduc, Redwater and Golden Spike within easy driving distance.

Calgary, without oil or expansion of oil development, cannot claim oil supremacy, he added.

Sneer at Rival

But the most indignant protest came from Edmonton's city fathers who commented:

"The cowtown might as well say it's the diamond capital of Canada, too, because they probably sell diamonds in Calgary, and that's about as close as they come to being an oil centre—by selling Edmonton oil in their filling stations."

52-Year-Old Bicyclist Starts On Last Lap

London, Ont., July 28—(CP)—A lean and bronzed 52-year-old man from Akron, Ohio, straddled his bicycle here Wednesday and started the last lap of a 5,100 mile trip from San Diego, to Plymouth, Ind.

Earl Hattery, the intrepid cyclist, describes himself as a migrating canning factory worker, with a relish for travelling. He expects to cross from Sarnia to Port Huron today.

His equipment includes an ingenious little wrist compass that looks like a wrist watch. He has a light-weight sleeping bag, bad-weather clothing wrapped in a bag and hung over the rear carrier, and a bag hanging from the front handle-bars containing a few personol items. He spends his nights in tourist camps or any place he can get a bed.

BOY ILL FROM MENINGITIS

Toronto, July 28 (CP)—Dennis Ingersoll, 4, believed to be suffering from Meningitis, was taken by ambulance from Rama Indian Reserve to Sick Children's Hospital here Wednesday. Dennis was given a provincial police escort. Hospital authorities said "he was a very sick little boy."

BRITAIN PUTS FIRST CIVILIAN JET AIRLINER IN AIR

Race to fly the world's pure-jet civilian aircraft was lost by Canada when British deHavilland Comet took off into history. Canada's bid for aerial fame is the Avro Canada 40-passenger C-10 Jetliner, seen in drawing. The Canadian craft, shown here, is expected to fly soon. The four-engined British aircraft was lifted for a 500-yard test hop six feet above the ground during taxiing trials at Hatfield, Eng. CIO Head Wants 30-Cent Package Boost From Steel

Demand Includes Wage Hike, Insurance, Pensions

New York, July 28 (AP) — President Philip Murray of the United Steelworkers (C.I.O.) announced today his union wants a package increase of 30 cents an hour in their current dispute with the steel companies, including a fourth-round wage increase of 12½ cents.

Murray revealed the demands for the first time at the opening session of the fact finding Board appointed by President Truman to avert a strike in the dispute.

Murray was the first speaker for the union before the board.

The demands also include 11.25 cents an hour for pensions and 6.27 cents an hour for social insurance.

$1.65 Basic Rate

The union says that the current average basic wage rate of steel workers is $1.65 an hour. In the previous three rounds of post-war wage increases, the union got 18½ in 1946, 115 cents in 1947. and 13 cents in 1948. The figures for the last two years include some fringe benefits.

As the hearing opened the fact-finding Board ruled that it would consider evidence on pensions for steel workers along with the two other issues at stake.

This was what the steelworkers had asked at a preliminary meeting on Tuesday of the three-man Board set up to hear the case for and against a fourth round wage increase.

Board asked to decide

The companies, led by United States Steel, had asked that the Board hear evidence and then decide whether the pension issue was a proper matter for consideration.

The fact finding Board, set up by President Truman to head off a threatened strike July 16, will hear evidence for 16 days.

The Board must take its recommendations to President Truman at least 15 days before the union's new strike deadline of Sept. 16.

Recommendations of the Board are not binding but they have behind them the weight of the presidential request for the inquiry.

THE COLONEL REPRIMANDS

Princess Elizabeth, a colonel of the regiment, criticized the officers of the swanky Grenadier Guards regiment for "unbecoming conduct." The Princess, shown here in the uniform of the regiment, said that the display of bad manners occurred when several after-dinner speakers, at the Guards annual dinner, were subjected to cat-calls and interruptions. She received an apology from the regiment. —Central Press Canadian.

Woman is Swept To Her Death In Sewage Culvert

Hasbrouck Heights, N.J., July 28 (AP)—A violent and freakish thunderstorm Wednesday swept a woman down a gutter and into a sewage culvert to her death.

Witnesses said the unusual drowning occurred when Mrs. Edna Michel, 54, tried to cross a deep torrent of water in a gutter.

The speed and depth of water were enough to knock her down and carry her for two blocks downhill into a drainage culvert.

Horrified spectators told police the woman struggled against a swirling current four feet deep.

Persons who rushed to the rescue were unable to catch her or to release her body until it had been wedged in the culvert for a quarter of an hour, police said. By that time she had been drowned in the pouring rain-waters.

'Useless Nonsense' Threats of Reds Against Priests

Vatican City, July 28 (AP)—Communist governments seeking to prosecute Roman Catholic priests for excommunicating pro-Communists have run up against a stone wall, because rarely if ever will an individual priest be called upon to do so, a Vatican informant said today.

The informant described as "useless nonsense" the threats of the Polish and Czechoslovak governments to take action against priests on these grounds.

The indication was that the excommunication decree of the Vatican strikes primarily at the consciences of Roman Catholics. Priests will spread the word of the decree but probably will not be called upon to excommunicate publicly.

St. Catharines, July 28 (CP)—Unofficial returns from the Thorold township local option vote held Wednesday reveal that in four out of seven polls more women wanted liquor made available than men.

The vote was kept separate and showed that 500 men voted in favor of liquor and 1,071 against. Of the women who voted 521 wanted liquor and 1,043 were against. The township first went dry under local option in 1913.

The official figures will not be available until late today.

Britain's 'Secret' Airliner Called Best Thing in Civil Aviation in Quarter of Century

(By NORMAN CRIBBENS)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, July 28—(CP)—Aviation correspondents for London newspapers enthused today over Britain's "top secret" airliner, although none of them watched the first trial flight of the De Havilland Comet, the world's first all-jet passenger liner.

De Havilland invited more than 100 newspaper men to watch the Comet's first taxiing trials at Hatfield Airdrome Wednesday. The four-turbined plane made two 500-yard hops, rising no more than nine feet off the ground.

Not until the newspaper men had returned to Londan from the Hertfordshire Airfield did officials decide to give the liner her first real flight.

"This was a last-minute decision,' a De Havilland spokesman said. "We thought it unwise to fly the Comet before preliminary taxiing tests had been made. These proved so satisfactory, however, that later we decided to give her a trial flight."

The Comet was flown by Group Captain John Cunningham, De Havilland's chief test pilot. He soared to a height of 8,000 feet and continued flight for 31 minutes

"The flight was entirely successful," Cunningham said later. "She was very nice to handle."

Courtney Edwards, air correspondent for the Daily Mail, said the Comet "looks like the best thing that has happened in British civil aviation for a quarter of a century."

The Times' aviation correspondent said reservedly: "undoubtedly she represents a major technical advance in design of fast airliners."

Air Commodore L. G. S. Payne, writing in the Daily Telegraph, said the Comet, designed for cruising speed of between 500 and 550 miles an hour, must fly at 40,000 feet to achieve maximum fuel economy.

He added: "the plane is not revolutionary in appearance although the makers say it probably has the purest aerodynamic form yet attained in a transport vehicle."

Dope Smuggling Into U.S. Grows

By CHARLES MOLONY

Washington, July 28 — (AP)— "Extremely disturbing" increases in the smuggling of the drug cocaine into the United States were reported today by the Narcotics Bureau.

Up to now, it said, there had not been any considerable traffic in cocaine, or the use of it, in this country.

In a report on "traffic in opium and other dangerous drugs" during 1948, the Bureau said:

"Quite reliable information is at hand indicating that cocaine is available in large quantities in Peru, Chile, and Bolivia, and that American seamen are smuggling it regularly to the United States.

"In the Harlem district of New York City there appears to be sufficient cocaine available to satisfy demands in the illicit traffic and it is indicated that a portion of this cocaine is smuggled from Peru to cut-of-the-way ports in South Carolina and Alabama and then transported overland to New York."

Control Peru's Factories

The United States recently got from Peru a promise that steps would be taken to control the cocaine factories in that country so the drug would not be diverted into underworld channels in the United States.

Shanghai, Rangoon, Calcutta and Singapore were described in the report as "hotbeds of narcotics activities" on the basis of advice the Bureau said it obtained from incoming merchant seamen.

In detailing an increase in heroin seizures, the Bureau observed there is "definite indication that the far east is again a source of supply of heroin." At another point, it remarked:

"The trends in the illicit traffic in narcotic drugs in the United States indicate that some of the old sources of supply, such as Turkey, France and Italy, were active as in pre-war years."

Chinese Red Forces Seize Areas in Honan

Canton, July 28 (AP)—Chinese Communist troops seized new areas of Hunan Province today. Nationalists conceded the Communists were astride the Canton-Hankow railroad between Changsha and Hengyang.

An official dispatch acknowledged loss of Chuchow, 25 miles south of Changsha, capital of Hunan and a central China strongpoint. In taking the rail town, the Reds not only severed Nationalist communications between Changsha and Hengyang but gained control of the entire Chekiang railroad.

Chuchow is the junction of the two railroads 315 miles north of the refugee Natianalist headquarters in Canton—which the Communist high command has ordered captured by Aug. 15.

GMC Reports High Earnings

New York, July 28 — (AP)— General Motors Corporation Wednesday reported net sales and earnings for the quarter ended June 30 were the highest in the company's history, sales of $1,595,349,652 cmpared with $,145,554,234 in the like quarter last year.

G.M.'s net income for the three months ended June 30 totalled $166,915,305, equal to $3.72 a share on the average number of common shares outstanding. This compared with $110,282,260, or $2.43 a share for the like period last year.

Sales of G.M. motor vehicles produced in the United States and Canada totalled 791,596 for the quarter. This was a record "made possible by availability of additional steel and other materials chairman Alfren P. Sloan and President C. E. Wilson reported to stockholders.

Record Unit Sales

The record unit sales compared with the previous peak of 757,505 in the second quarter of 1941, with 560,542 in the first quarter this year and with 520,538 units in the second quarter last year.

The report cautioned against projecting volume and profits over a long period on the basis of results for the second quarter or the first six months of the year. It noted that there were no model changes to restrict production during the second quarter, and that sales had benefited from a continued large backlog of deferred demand.

Demand for G.M. cars, trucks and diesel locomotives remains strong, stockholders were told, but sales of diesel engines for other purposes have declined somewhat. The supply of household appliances substantially meets demand and sales of automotive replacement parts have tapered off from the abnormally-high levels of earlier post-war years.

Possible New Deal Seen for Mining Municipalities

Timmins, July 28 (CP)—Intimations of a possible new deal for the mining municipalities of Northern Ontario were given here Wednesday by Hon. Welland S. Gemmell, Minister of Mines. He arrived in Timmins at noon and proceeded immediately to a luncheon tendered him by members of the Porcupine Chamber of Commerce, the Prospectors' Association and civic leaders.

In his brief address Mr. Gemmell said he felt assured he would receive "every co-operation possible in the interests of Northern Ontario."

"I honestly feel that with a spirit of co-operation from all we can bring to a happy conclusion some of the problems that are bothering the mining municipalities of Northern Ontario," Mr. Gemmell declared. "Mines taxation is a considerable worry," he continued. "And while it doesn't come directly under my department, as the minister representing Northern Ontario in the cabinet, the executive body of this province, I want to assure you that I am alive to the problem and that I will do everything I can do to assist in its satisfactory solution.

"As Minister of Mines, and a member from Northern Ontario, I hope to be able to bring these problems to the attention of my colleagues in the cabinet in a more intimate and effective way and to suggest a solution to some of them."

The gathering, included mine managers and their representatives from all the producers in the Porcupine.

Priest Asks More Religious Spirit Among Unions

Valleyfield, Que., July 28—(CP)—A soft-spoken Montreal priest today called for more religious spirit among labor unions and urged the Quebec Government to kill private bills preventing policemen of "certain municipalities" from joining the independent Canadian Brotherhood of Policemen.

Rev. Pierre Trudel, chaplain of the Brotherhood which is bargaining agent for 2,050 policemen of 25 Quebec municipalities, told the Union's fifth annual meeting that only with the help of the Church's social doctrine "can all employer-employee problems be justly and durably solved."

The Priest did not refer by name to the municipalities involved in the private bills, but Brotherhood officials said there had been four instances of private bills being opproved by the Quebec Legislature. They said the bills either forbade policemen to join the Brotherhood or forced them to withdraw from it.

Girl, 18, Freed of Murder Charge May Become Missionary or Ball Player

Waukegan, Ill., July 28 (AP)—Joyce Schumaker, an 18-year-old blonde girl, was released from the Lake County jail Wednesday night, freed by a jury of murdering her 53-year-old paramour.

There was an outburst of cheers from the courtroom crowd as the clerk read the circuit court jury's verdict, which was reached after about 40 minutes deliberation. Many bobby soxers, former schoolmates of Joyce, were among the courtroom crowd of 200.

"I was really worried until I heard the verdict," Joyce said as she embraced her mother. "I feel wonderful. It is a wonderful surprise. I have never stopped praying in four months."

Spectators crowded around Joyce to shake her hand as her mother combed her daughter's hair before newspaper photographers snapped her picture.

Joyce, 17 pounds lighter after her four months in jail awaiting trial for the slaying of Carl Reeder, a school clerk, said she was uncertain about her future. She said she may become a missionary or, perhaps, a professional softball player.

Her mother, Mrs. Edna Schumaker, said the family will leave Waukegan so her daughter can start life anew and finish high school. She quit attending Waukegan high school, where she met Reeder, last September and worked in a towel laundry.

Defence Attorney Sidney H. Block, in his closing statement to the jury, termed Reeder a "moral degenerate, a big brute, a pure moral leper." He said Joyce was an "emotional happy-go-lucky kid of 16 before Reeder entered her life."

Joyce testified she had sexual relations with Reeder during her early courtship with him, before she learned he was married. She said Reeder pursued her despite her repeated demands that they end their affair.

Joyce told the jury that on April 4 she drove with Reeder and a girl friend, Joyce Kirkpatrick, 17, to the lake front "to see if she could persuade Reeder to leave me alone."

She said she pointed an empty gun at him and then loaded the pistol with three cartridges. She said Reeder took the gun away from her and when Miss Kirkpatrick asked for it he returned it to Miss Schumaker.

"I held the gun loosely in my hand," she testified. "He grabbed it. I could feel the pressure of the gun on his body and the gun went off."

She then told how she drove Reeder to a hospital where he died shortly afterward. She surrendered to police.

British Press Not Surprised at News Of Dollar Deficit

Times Asks What Further Aid Needed to Hold Position

London, July 28 — (Reuters)—Britain's warning that her dollar deficit in 1949 - 50 will be greater than expected met with a mixed reception in the press today, though most agreed that the news was no surprise.

The independent Times of London warns that "this drastic revision naturally raises some important issues."

The paper says that it must be asked what hope there is of obtaining the agreement of the other European countries participating in the organization for European economic co-operation to the increased share of Marshall aid which Britain was implicitly seeking; whether in any case anything like $1,518,000,000 could possibly be obtained; and whether the probable amount of aid could be sufficient to safeguard the sterling area's dollar position for another year.

Must Weigh Disillusionment

Saying that American public opinion had been led to expect that the four years of the Marshall Plan would see Europe able to dispense with dollar aid by the middle of 1952, the Times warns that "the risk of disillusionment must not be lightly weighed."

The Liberal Manchester Guardian charges the government with "stirring up righteous indignation on the continent" with the announcement of its increased dollar estimate.

The Express says that, second only to the ideal of empire, the people of all parties should keep before them the conception of companionship with the United States, but said that if such companionship were to be realized "it must be an association of equals. if not in strength, at any rate in character and independence."

Not New Development

The Financial Times says the British estimate was not a new or startling development. It was not a "cri de coeur" for more dollars at the expense of the other Marshall countries. The main object was to get the record straight.

The communist Daily Worker says the increased British application could only have "the effect of intensifying the rivalry between the jostling European supplicants for dollars."

WATCH OLD SCHOOL RAZED

Hamilton, July 28 — (CP) — Hamiltonians, lump - throated, watched the old Caroline Street grammar school razed Wednesday. The school was demolished after 80 years of service. It was the city's first high school, and a forerunner of the present modern secondary schools. A $2,500,000 Federal building will be erected on the site.

CSU Members Will Negotiate For Settlement

Montreal, July 28 — (CP) — The Canadian Seamen's Union announced Wednesday it has turned over to its rank-and-file the thorny task of negotiating a settlement of its turbulent, four-month dispute with Canadian shipowners.

In a prepared statement, the Union said "as a genuine move to overcome all obstacles that will lead to a conclusion of the strike, the National officers have voluntarily stepped out of the picture and recommended that the rank-and-file membership carry on negotiations."

The statement said this action was taken because the shipowners stated they would not negotiate with the union's present leadership.

Will go to Ottawa

Charles MacDonald, named chairman of the rank-and-file negotiating committee, was quoted in the statement as saying "this committee will leave for Ottawa in an attempt to meet with the government and arrive at a settlement of our strike."

The strike, which originally affected 80-odd ships, began March 31, when shipowners dropped the allegedly communist - led C.S.U. and signed an agreement with the rival Seafarers' International Union (A.F.L.).

Spokesmen for the Shipping Federation of Canada here could not be reached for comment but labor sources in Ottawa intimated that no matter how the government received the latest proposal, it would still be a matter of what the employers want to do.

The Shipping Federation had previously announced that it considers its contract with the S.I.U. "a firm contract which will not be broken."

Most Ships Active

The owners also claim that most of their ships now are sailing normally with S. I. U. crews, which, they say, include seamen who deserted the C. S. U. and went over to the rival S. I. U.

The strike originally affected 2,500 men and C. S. U. officials claim not more than 300 of these have switched over to the rival union.

The statement issued Wednesday gave no details of the proposals which the rank-and-file committee intends to present to the government, but it said they "were drawn up and approved by the membership of the union."

Many School Dentists in U.K. Seek More Lucrative Work

London, July 28 — (CP) — Many of Britain's school dentists are leaving to take up more lucrative private practice under the National Health Service.

So great has the drain become that it is hurting the school dental service which in this country is still in its infancy. Thousands of school children are said to be going without adequate dental care.

J. N. Macrea, president of the British Dental Association, says that in many areas facilities for treatment of priority cases are so inadequate that a large number of children are leaving school with grossly septic mouths and carious teeth.

Newspapers have placed as high as 2,000,000 the number of youngsters lacking dental treatment. School authorities are unable to offer dentists salaries to compete with what they can earn in private practice under the National Health Service.

Some school districts pay more than £1,000 ($4,000) a year for an assistant dental officer. But this does not begin to compare with the average of £3,328 ($13,321) earned by dentists enrolled in the National Health Service.

Many private practitioners earn much more. One dentist in Lanarkshire recently was disclosed to have been paid more than £25,000 ($100,000) in 11 months. Another in Renfrewshire received between £1,300 and 1,400 pounds a month. At least two others working single-handed got more than £800 a month.

Altogether Britain's 9,000 National Health Service dentists cost the country £30,904,000 a year. This compared with £45,800,000 to the 19,000 doctors enrolled under the scheme.

So bad is the condition of the average Briton's teeth that dentists have long waiting lists now the service is free. In some areas dentists decline to accept new patients unless they are paid.

Denounces Vicar's Refusal to Wed Actress, Designer

London, July 28 (AP) — The refusal of a London vicar to marry actress Angela Lansbury and Hollywood designer Peter Shaw in his church was denounced in a Daily Express editorial today as a "callous and cruel" decision of the Church of England.

The editorial pointed out Miss Lansbury had flown 6,000 miles especially to be wed in her grandfather's church, the old Bow Street Church of Miss Lansbury's childhood.

"As years roll on the Church of England makes no change, no alteration, no variation at all in rules which belong to the dark ages," Lord Beaverbrook's paper said. "Thereby it forfeits leadership among the young people it should love and cherish."

The Vicar, Rev. G. F. J. Ansell, said he could "not find it in my conscience to marry someone in my church who has been married before."

Miss Lansbury was married to actor Richard Cromwell in 1945 and divorced a year later.

The Church of England discourages church marriages of divorced persons, but leaves the final decision to the Bishop of each Diocese.

After the Vicar's refusal to perform the ceremony, two other clergymen offered to marry the couple.

Says Europe Would Help Self More If U.S. Aided Less

New York, July 28 — (AP) — Bernard Baruch, financial and long-time presidential adviser, came back from Europe with these ideas on things in general.

The Marshall plan is effective "but not as effective as it should have been."

"There's a heap of sense" in the idea that Europe would help herself more if the United States helped her less.

Britain is spending too much time on nationalization and "not devoting sufficient energy to developing the country and its production."

There is no "slump" in the United States and "if we happen to lose a little money — and we've suffered this before — we'll tighten our belts and go ahead as we have done."

Manhattan Love Song

By Kathleen Norris

"One hour never made a difference to anyone. Chris'll be there; I'll tell them I forgot the notes and had to go back for them . . . What's the truth, anyway? I might as well tell them that."

She opened her suitcase; the long manila envelope was safe. Fanny closed the case carefully; presently she left the train holding it tightly.

"They can't kill me and Chris will survive it, and if he's really as good as they say, they'll have forgotten the whole thing by tomorrow or day after tomorrow.

"I wish it was the day after tomorrow!"

"Chris dear," her thoughts ran uneasily, "this is the most ridiculous thing. I was uptown to see Mack about the radio thing, and returning your book . . ."

The memory of the book and of the note that had dropped from the book stabbed her, and she reflected that if Chris had come home instead of secretly meeting Madge none of this would have happened; they would have had their happy Saturday lunch, and gone to the train together . . .

She looked vaguely about Scarsdale: what was the next step?

"Taxi?" a man asked, touching a yellow cap.

"Oh, yes . . wait a minute, please! Do you know where the Mockby's live?"

"You mean Jesse Mockby's place?" the man asked, after consideration.

"I guess so. Anyway it's the lawyer."

"Sure, that's him. It's quite a ways. It'll cost you," the taximan said, interpreting her look correctly, "about eighty cents."

Fanny looked in her purse; the fare was there, and with it some twenty cents more. But her tickets to Scarsdale had been an unexpected expense, and this taxi trip would cut her down to pennies.

"Madam, you were so kind to me on the train," said a nice, old voice apologetically, at her side. The old man who had been sitting next to her was addressing her. They had been talking of hard times. Fanny had blithly observed that she knew no other, and he had said that his destination was also Scarsdale, but she had not noticed his presence on the platform until now. Little cars had been scuttling away busily; the scene was almost deserted. "Did you say," said the old man humbly, "that you were going to Jesse Mockby's? That . . this is my friend. Or rather we used to be friends. I had hoped to see him tonight."

"I have to go out there," Fanny said a little dubiously. He was not an especially impressive companion; he was a nice old man, but he looked poor and forlorn; she had been only a shade too shy to offer him twenty-five cents for his dinner on the train. If he were really a friend of old Judge Mockby that would have been an embarrassing mistake.

But perhaps he wasn't. In any case, it would be a little trying to arrive late with profuse apologies and explanations, and with this rather disreputable old citizen in tow. However, there was no help for it. He had told her his name was Eugene Towler and that he came from Sydney, Australia; she said now politely:

"I'd be glad to have you come with me, Mr. Towler."

The old man immediately climbed into the waiting cab, and Fanny got in after him, and they set off with a great sweep through the quiet streets.

It was just half-past six, and Fanny was conscious of very much wanting her dinner. It was a relief, after about fifteen minutes of fast driving, to find themselves entering big gates, and approaching a rather formidable mansion, whose front door gushed light. Fanny rushed across the gravel, up the shallow steps, addressed the butler, smilingly:

"Mr. Mockby?"

"One moment, madam; I'll see if he's in," the man said repressively. An elderly man and woman were at that moment descending the stairs with great dignity. The butler spoke to them. The woman came forward to the open doorway, and said mildly:

"You want Mr. Mockby?"

"My husband was to meet me here," said Fanny; "he's in Mr. Mockby's law firm . . ."

"Oh, then it's Gerald Mockbys you want. They're at the other side of town, quite near the station. They're . . . relatives of my husband. But we-we-we . ." She hesitated, and over her delicate, middle-aged face a flush spread.

"But you've let your taxi go?" she asked concernedly.

Fanny was experiencing the horrible sensations of the sleeper who must run from some overpowering terror and whose feet are firmly glued to the ground. A great weariness began to envelope her, a great need to see Chris . . to hear his voice and feel his arms about her.

"I'm . . I'm afraid I did."

"Wait," Mrs. Mockby said thoughtfully, looking at her. "Come with me. I'll have Jake . . Jesse," she said to the old man, "have Jake bring the little car around. We'll send this young lady to Ger . . to Judge Mockby's"

"Jake," the man expostulated in a low voice, "will be just having his dinner, my dear."

'His dinner can wait!" Mrs. Mockby persisted mildly, and after a minute her husband reluctantly went after the butler, shaking his head. "Come upstairs with me . . it'll be a few minutes; our old Jake is very slow." the woman said then. "It's just he time I usually go to see my daughter putting the children to bed. Her husband is a naval officer, so we're fortunate enough to have them with us a great deal."

Such beautiful spacious softly warmed halls; such a pleasant comfortable house, with a hint of dinner preparations under way, and a suggestion of books and music and hospitality and old-fashioned home life. Fanny, weary and grimy and nervous, saw beauty and luxury on all sides, was presently introduced into a nusery, where a wood fire was leaping, reflected in a hundred white tiles, and where three small children in woolly pajamas were running and shouting in the warm glow.

"You're . . .?" Mrs. Mockby said, with a glance at Fanny.

"Mrs. Thring."

"Mrs. . . ?" Her pleasant, faded smile again. "You seem so young! This is my daughter Mrs. Bull, Mrs. Thring. And these are John and Kenneth and Melissa.

"You see them at their wildest," Mrs. Bull said, in unconcealed pride. "Here's Gram, now Jackie, so stop sucking it and let me throw the horrid thing in the fire. Their latest," the young mother went on, with a glance for Fanny, "is to save their chop or chicken bones . . oh, finish their suppers, apple sauce and cookies and all . . and then bring forth these disgusting bones and go on with their gnawing indefinitely. Sweet heart, it's all nassy . . let me throw it in the fire!"

"Oh, mummy," mourned John, leaning against her knee, watching the incarceration regretfully.

"Come on now, Ken, you're all unbuttoned down the back!" She buried her face in the three-year old's neck for a kiss as her right hand moved busily down the line of buttonholes. "Mutton fat all over your face!" she said.

Fanny sat in a deep chair and watched; she was the instant slave of all children, and these were exquisite children. The baby, fourteen months old, with scarlet touches of tooth rash, on her small face, and mutinous dark eyes bright under dark curls, had tottered to a safe distance and had been watching the visitor from cover suspiciously. Now, suddenly abandoning all caution, she gave a wild shriek in which only the word "yoddy" could be distinguished, and dashed forward into the centre of the group drunkenly.

Her wants her dolly," John said soberly, even momentously. He glanced expectantly at his mother.

"Oh, yes, poor yoddy. Where is 'at baby's yoddy?" Mrs. Bull took it up sympathetically.

"Gone!" Melissa pronounced, at her mother's knee, in a little liquid voice of grieving.

"This is acting," said the mother. "We dramatize everything Has Kate got her?"

"No, Kate," Melissa said, shaking her curls.

"Maybe we left her in the garden!" exclaimed Mrs. Bull, dramatizing it suddenly in her turn. "Oh, dear, dear, dear!"

"No gargon," the baby mourned, with the same business as before. "Dee, dee, dee!"

"She's trying to say garden," crooned John. He laughed exhaustively, and Kenneth, watching his face, laughed with tremendous gusto and affectation. "She's trying to say garden," he added loudly, tugging at his mother's elbow as she sat in a low chair by the fire. And immediately he began to shout angrily: "She's trying to say garden, Mother, she's trying to say garden, she's trying to say garden!"

"Jackie, hush, not so loud! Darling, you're deafening us! Baby, let mum wipe your little face . ."

"Were you tryin' to say garden, honey? Were you tryin' to say gar den honey? That was good, Baby . . that was good . . that was good . . aw, you little honey . ."

"Jackie, take your arms from right around her head when I'm trying to wash her face, dear. It makes her nervous to be hugged when she's getting her face washed. That's right, go show Mrs. Thring how you can almost stand on your head. Not so close to the fire, dear, your feet might fall right in and get burned, like poor Peter's in the book. They choose the strangest moments for showing affection," Mrs. Bull observed to Fanny, in an aside.

John was now tugging at Fanny furiously and shouting oves and over again: "Do you want to see my Peter book? Do you want to see my Peter book?"

"Jack, if you can't be quiet you'll have to bring your chair and sit here nicely for a while . . My darling, what is it?"

This last was in sort of a scream and as, putting Melissa down hastily, and pushing John aside, the mother caught at the shrieking Ken, whose deep cries brought his grandmother to her feet, to bend anxiously over him, and brought the nurse running from the adjoining room, with a crib sheet in her hands.

"What did he do--what is it--what did he do?" the agitated voices chorused. "My precious, show Mommy. My poor darling . . . . ah, a-h-h-h! Look Gram, he touched his darling little finger to the hot andiron . . show Gram just where . . poor old scrap!"

"This goes on for an hour every night, and more or less all day," said Margaret Bull, when Ken had been borne towards unguents by the sympathetic Kate, and comparative peace had once more descended.

"I love it!" Fanny said, her face radiant.

"Have you any children of your own, Mrs. Thring?"

"No. We-we were only married last spring."

"Oh?" said Margaret, laughing and confused. "Then it's a little soon . . ."

Fanny's eyes, laughing too, fell upon the mantel clock.

"Good heavens . . seven o' clock!" she stammered, getting to her feet, "I ought to be . . good heavens!"

"Jake has been downstairs waiting some minutes," Mrs. Mockby said, with an air of faded graciousness.

"Oh, I didn't know it!" Fanny took the other young woman's hand. "I'll never forget your babies," she said. Mrs. Bull quite impulsively kissed her, and said, "Then come see them again."

Mrs. Mockby went with her to the top of the big staircase, talked kindly as they descended.

"You're friends of Gerald Mockby's Mrs. Thring?"

"No. I've met Mrs. Mockby, and of course I've met Mr. Gerald Mockby in the office. But my husband is just one of the . . the young lawyers in the firm."

"And you live in New York?"

"Yes we do," Fanny said, finding it hard to make the statement interesting.

"Keeping house? Where are you in the city?"

Here're Those Amazing A's Again, Con Mack's Crew Surges Upwards With Five-Game Winning Streak

By JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Maybe Connie Mack was right when he said his Philadelphia Athletics still had a chance in the American League race.

They laughed when he spoke with optimism in St. Louis as his A's floundered close to the second division. They had lost 12 of their last 14 on a sorry road trip.

When he let Carl Scheib pitch the entire nine innings at Chicago last week, absorbing an 18-hit, 12-0 drubbing, many figured Mr. Mack was conceding. That drab evening the Mackmen fell 10½ games behind the leaders.

Then the A's turned. A doubleheader sweep over the White Sox Sunday and now three straight over the wobbly St. Louis Browns and they have a new five - game win streak. Furthermore they are only 7½ back of the leading New York Yankees and only a half-game behind the sizzling Boston Red Sox.

To cap this turn - about - face, Scheib went the route again Wednesday night, despite a five-run first inning assault by the Brownies.

Roy Sievers and Dick Kokos hit homers in that first inning and Bob Dillinger smashed a triple. After that frame, Scheib allowed only two more hits.

Philadelphia won the opener of the twilight - night doubleheader for Lou Brissie, 7-3, with a four-run spurt in the fourth when Eddie Joost cleared the bases with a double.

Pull One Out of Fire

The A's pulled the second one out of the fire for Scheib on a two-run rally against Red Embree in the eighth inning for an 8-6 edge. A walk and two singles loaded the bases. Sherm Lollar's error on a double steal attempt yielded one run and two more walks, one intentional, shoved across the second.

Mel Parnell, the solid man of Boston's suddenly - potent pitching staff, held the Chicago White Sox to three hits in a 6-0 victory. It was his 14th victory and his 17th complete game in 21 starts.

Washington finally broke its 11-game losing string by edging Detroit 7-6 in the first of a twi-night doubleheader but the Tigers smothered the Senators 11-0 on Freddie Hutchinson's four-hit pitching to break even. Johnny Groth led the Tigers' 15-hit blast on Joe Haynes, Lloyd Hittle and Al Gettel in the second game, with four hits, including a double.

Rain postponed the second game of the New York — Cleveland series with the score tied 4-4 at the end of four innings. The crowd of 47,596 fans waited for an hour and 57 minutes before the game was called off.

Cards Run Wild

St. Louis Cards continued to run wild in the National League, preserving their 1½ games margin over Brooklyn, by smashing Philadelphia Phillies 7-3. It was their seventh straight victory in a string, interrupted by Monday's tie at Brooklyn.

The only runs off Red Munger came from homers by Buddy Blattner and Willie Jones.

Brooklyn ended its longest losing streak at four games by routing the Chicago Cubs 7-3. Starting pitcher Don Newcombe failed to last the route. Manager Burt Shotton brought in Erv Palica to retire the side in the 9th.

New York Giants saved fifth place by trimming Pittsburgh, 8-3, on the flashy relief pitching of Kirby Higbe. Wes Westrum's three-run homer in the seventh was the big blow of the game.

Marv Ricket bashed a homer with a man on in the 13th inning for Boston's 9-7 triumph over Cincinnati. Bob Elliott accounted for four earlier runs with two homers before he was run off the premises by umpire Frank Dascoli.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEORGE H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Bulging "Bunny" he of the Dunlop clan, and in this corner's opinion one of the best showmen ever to disport his wrestling talent, in all its phases, here, will be the third man in the ring when Whipper Billy Watson and Fred Atkins clash in the main bout in Memorial Arena on Friday gloaming. The rotund "Bunny" who hasn't glimpsed his dimpled patellas for the past ten moons still has a trick or two up his sleeves and you can bet your granpapples store molars the big boys will not be fooling too much come fish-day evening.

• • •

The fans were in a mild furore last Friday when the match between Atkins and Watson was terminated at one fall each, after the prescribed sixty minutes had flown by. The Whip awaited his foeman who was nonchalantly showering, under the impression the bout was over. It was, so Referee Ernie Powers said. And that was that.

• • •

But the Whip was far from satisfied, as was the crowd. A --ll went up for a return bout—and here it is. The Whipper agreed and Atkins proved no shrinking violet when the matter was mooted. So, all in all, it looks like a bang-up ripsnorting battle when the pair meet. There has never been too much love lost between the pair and last week's episode served to add fuel to the flames. So, at it, me hearties. On with the dance.

Cardiff Giant

Towering Hi Lee, he of the Ozark Mountings where they breed men a foot shorter than the highest pine tree, tangles with the barrel-built bewhiskered Cardiff Giant in the semi-final. This, too, will not be any pink tea, and something should explode before the gong rings or one or the other says "uncle" in his own cute way. Tom Rice meets Bill Stack in the opener.

• • •

Corbys, still smarting from their unexpected 12-4 setback at the hands of Stewart Warner Tuesday evening, will be gunning for a win when they tangle with the league leading Northern Electric crew Friday evening. This tussle, which was postponed due to vacations at both plants during the week when the game was originally scheduled, will wind up the regular season of scheduled play and could affect the playoff positions of four teams.

• • •

Should the Corby crew break up Northern's undefeated string they would produce a tie for first and third places in league standings. A win from them would put them into a third place tie with Stewart Warner and drop Northern into a tie for the top slot with Houstons. Otherwise the league wil lfinish up with Northern, Houstons, Stewart Warner, and Corbys in that order in the top four places.

• • •

Down at the other end of the scale three teams stand a chance to cop that sixth playoff berth. Provincial Engineers have finished their season with a 4-6 record, while Howe and Hagerman and CNR Nationals each have three wins in nine tries. However, this evening both teams see action with CNR meeting Anti Tank in the first game, and Howe and Hagerman tangling with Energetic Club, in the nightcap. Wins here would force a three-way playoff for the sixth spot.

SPORT POURRI

Now they tell us, the powers-that-be have ordered the postponed baseball game between Kiwanis Juniors and Point Anne to be played Saturday night at Exhibition Park. . . Ye Gods, what do they expect, a Yankee Stadium world series crowd? . . . Of all nights, with Monday the tail-end of a long weekend holiday. . . Quick, Murgatroyd, the aspirin. . . A long-distance phone call from friend Bunny Morgansen of Ye Tely, pink and otherwise, reminding us of the baseball school being held here Friday, August 5, under the sponsorship of the Philadelphia Phillies, the Toronto Maple Leafs and the Tely. . . Bunny says as how he would like six reliable baseballers of the city to assist in the operation of the school which starts at 11 a.m. through 5 p.m. . . Any volunteers? . . The school is doing a grand job in all other parts of Ontario and its sponsors are anxious that as many young fellows as possible of this city and district take advantage of the opportunity to learn "Better Baseball" under an experienced veteran coach. . . There's no charge, fellas, so come early and bring your gloves, spikes and uniforms, if any. . . There'll be two sections, 17 years and under and the other in the opposite direction. . . Every boy and youth will be welcome no matter where he gets his mail. . . County papers, please note. . . Reports say the school is excellent. . . Allen Kelleher attended one, gives it his okay. . .

• • •

Top-flight Canadian Press officials, writers and newspaper columnists, all well-known, staged the Second Annual Bass Derby off Wellington last Sat-Sunday. . . Swapped typewriters for fishing poles with the usual excellent results. . . Prediction;- If Miss Canada IV hits 120 M.P.H. on Friday and Saturday, she'll romp back to Canada with the Harmsworth Cup bacon. . . Roger Peckinpaugh (remember?) former major league star, caught himself a muskie near Madoc the other day. . . Corby's softball team are still wondering if it was a car or a blockbuster that hit 'em in that game with the Stewart-Warner crew the other night. . . They're sizzling, we're told, and that augurs well for the important tilt booked with Herbie Henn's Northern Electric Friday twilighting. . . Fan asks, "Who wrote the softball and baseball rule books?. . . Was it the guys in the know—or some of the clucks around this neck of the woods?". . . . Adds he's beginning to believe the rule-book makers are a bunch of screwballs, and some of the "sideline umpires" here, should be with the National League. . . By sideline umpires, he doesn't mean the blokes wearing the mask and pad, but those bench-referees in the stands, and with some of the teams, you see at every game. . . And that's it, with the exception of the fact that the Kiwanis Junior trek to Point Anne Friday evening for a twilight tussle with the Ox-Pointers. . .

Corbin Gold Trophy

Gold Trophy Tournament Attracts Ontario's Star Bowlers Here Aug. 1

Blue-ribbon classic of Ontario lawn bowlers, the Seventh Annual Corbin Gold Trophy Men's Rinks Tournament, gets under way on the spacious greens of the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club on Monday, August 1st (Civic Holiday).

The tournament will attract sixty-four rinks of the cream of Ontario bowlers as well as those from Quebec and parts of the United States, Florida included. This means that 256 lawn keglers will be in the city on Monday, and together with their wives, sweethearts and friends, will cause an influx of 350 visitors to the city.

The Corbin Gold Trophy was donated by the Corbin Lock Company of Belleville seven years ago for annual competition in men's rinks. The popularity of the tournament sprang up practically overnight. Since the first competition, applications for entries have been of such volume many late aspirants have been turned away. This year the entry list of 64 rinks was filled long before the date of the event.

Seventeen handsome prizes, exclusive of the Gold Trophy, have been donated by merchants and others of the city and in addition the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club has donated a silver cocktail shaker for the winner of the "Spider."

The prizes now being shown in the windows of the Public Utilities office here are attracting the admiring gaze of hundreds of Front Street pedestrians.

Entry List Representative

The entry list of the tournament is thoroughly representative of the Provincial Lawn Bowling Association. Rinks will be here from Ottawa, Peterborough, Lindsay, Kingston, Trenton, Cornwall, Toronto, Montreal, Campbellford, Brockville, Windsor, Havelock, Stirling, Cobourg, Madoc, Elora, Verdun Que., Brighton, Sarasota Florida, Buffalo and Port Hope.

General chairman of the tournament and vice-president of the Provincial Lawn Bowling Association Cliff Argue stated today that six Belleville rinks will participate in the tournament. These will be skipped by A. E. Wonnacott, president of the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club; A. E. McLean, general manager, Corbin Lock Company; E. W. Vanner, F. G. Harper, A. Watson and W. Price.

The Corbin Trophy went to the Campbellford rink in 1948. It was skipped by W. S. Wiggins.

The tournament gets under way at 9.30 Monday morning when the first draw rinks take the greens. The second draw starts at 11.30 a.m.

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Vancouver, July 28 (CP)—With people generally all "het up" now over amateur athletics of one kind or another, it seems a shame to introduce what some think is a seamier side of those pastimes.

But Eric (Vancouver Province) Whitehead is irked over what he calls the "quaint old custom of panhandling . . . a gigantic gimme-game spawned by the feeble, disorganized machinery of our national and provincial amateur athletics."

What's Meant

British Columbia for one, Eric says, has developed a crackerjack track squad as well as a fine swimming team — both of which as ambassadors at the British Empire Games could create publicity worth quantities of money to the province.

Colossal except for the fact that the B. C. Amateur Athletic Union hasn't the proverbial bean — not a sou — to call their own," says Whitehead.

With no set allocation of any kind to support their voluntary organization, he adds, "A. A. U. officials in B. C. and most across Canada turn shamefacedly to plain old-fashioned panhandling to get funds . . ."

Only $15,000

It would only cost $15,000, Whitehead says, to send the track team to the games.

He says officials now "are unhappily scrounging about town making the usual embarrassed passes at the good citizens who have become wejily resigned to tossing a few charitable dollars into the well-worn hat."

The solution as offered by A. A. U. treasurer Art Jefferd, includes several possibilities.

The provincial government, civic organizations or even service clubs could support the entire provincial A. A. U. annual program "without blinking an eye" at $5,000.

The money, says Whitehead, might be raised by assessing all B. C. sport gates — amateur and pro — one per cent.

Records Broken As Swimmers Vie For Empire Team

By JOHN ORMONDE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Vancouver, July 28 (CP)—Canada's mermen and maids kicked, stroked and dived their way to places in the Dominion's British Empire games swim team here Wednesday night, breaking one more and likely two records on the way.

Although it will be a day or two before the official competitors are announced the judges lost no time in scribbling marks opposite at least two names.

These were Vancouver's blue-eyed speed queen, Irene Strong whose time of 1:13.4 set a Canadian record for 100 yards breast stroke and Pete Salmon of Victoria, B.C., who made a clear sweep of the same event for men as well as the freestyle finals.

Miss Strong set the former record of 1:15.2 last year.

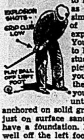
Salmon came within two-tenths of the Canadian record in the breast stroke, clocking a time of 1:02.1.

In the team events the Vancouver amateur swimming club, led by Miss Strong, churned up the pool for a record in the 400 yards freestyle relay with a time of 4:28.2. This mark officially noted as a "club team" record, will probably be announced as official Friday.

Better Golf

By Sam Snead

Many readers have asked me to again discuss the explosion shot. Okay. I have taken special pains with our artist in today's picture, to make as clear as possible the simplest method of making the explosion shot. You may be able to learn a lot by studying this picture. When you step up to the ball, wiggle your feet around until they are anchored on solid ground and not just on surface sand. Then you have a foundation. Play the ball well off the left foot. The stance is open, which as you know, means that the left foot is drawn back further away from the desired line of flight than the right and the left toe points pretty well toward the flag. The right foot is at right angles to the line of desired flight. Your eyes are almost perpendicularly above the ball. You grip the club low on the leather. The straight left arm and firm wrist carry the clubhead back in a three-quarters perpendicular swing. A pause at the top—then swing smoothly down, taking the sand back of the ball from slightly outside-in and follow through. That does it. We'll follow through an explosion shot again tomorrow. — (Copyright 1949, John F. Dille Co.)



Ont. Amateur Baseball

(By The Canadian Press)

It still is a nip-and-tuck battle for the lead in the Senior Intercounty Baseball League and near-riot actions by fans at Waterloo have given it an added touch.

A king-size fracas was in the making last night as Waterloo Tigers moved into first place in the league when they were awarded a 9-0 forfeit victory over the seventh-place Guelph Maple Leafs.

Plate Umpire Al Langford of Waterloo halted the game in the first half of the fifth inning after ejecting Guelph left-fielder Andy Barb and Coach George Boniface. He said the game was forfeited and walked off the field.

The irate fans crowded around the box office demanding a refund of admission prices and police were summoned to restore order.

In three other Intercounty games, St. Thomas Legionnaires lost their 13th straight game by bowing 7-0 to the third-place Kitchener Legionnaires in an afternoon tilt. London Majors bested the Legionnaires 9-3 in a night game and the fifth-place Brantford Red Sox registered an 8-4 victory over the second-place Galt Terriers.

In a Nickel Belt senior game, Creighton Cubs defeated the Garson Greyhounds 9-3 while in the Temiskaming League Porcupine Combines remained in first place with an 8-6 win over the second-place Hollinger Greenshirts.

At Waterloo, the dispute started when Barb hit a triple with two men on base and was called out at the plate when he tried to stretch the hit into a home run. Langford said he called Barb out for pushing and banished Boniface for arguing too strenuously.

London Majors Win

At St. Thomas, pitcher Pat Boehmer of the Legionnaires limited St. Thomas to six hits and fanned five to score an easy victory.

Opposing hurler Elmer Cook, Negro right-hander, lasted until the seventh inning. Jack Cabot took over and he was replaced by Lefty Garton. Cook was charged with the loss.

The Majors had little trouble defeating the Legionnaires in the night game. Tommy White went the distance on the London mound. Although nicked for 11 hits, he was only in trouble in the second inning when the Legionnaires got four hits for three runs.

Kitchener sent three pitchers into the game. Bobby Schnurr, first of the three, was charged with the loss.

Brantford Red Sox were backed by the steady pitching performance of southpaw Alf Gavey who kept Galt hitless for the first six innings. The Terriers started Bert McCrudden on the mound, then sent in Hoffman and used first-baseman Con Waite on the mound in the last frame.

At Garson, the Cubs gained their 17th victory in 22 starts and gave pitcher Snug Mynerick his third victory. Howard Hemphill was the losing pitcher.

The Combines rallied for five runs in the seventh inning that Rolly Bussier quelled a Hollinger threat by striking out the last two men with the tying runs on base.

One game is scheduled in the Nickel Belt League tonight: The Greyhounds clash with Copper Cliff Redmen.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

In coffeehouse bridge the strength of your hand is shown by the loudness of your voice. Perhaps the word lewdness describes it better. But we will not go into that.

In legitimate bridge there is a list of bids from which to select the one that shows your holdings. These bids are made up from among the words in the legal bridge vocabulary.

Only 15 words make up the bidding language. They are: One, two, three, four, five, six, seven, clubs, diamonds, hearts, spades, no-trump, pass, double, redouble.

The list of bids for an opener is always a number and some denomination. The numbers are from one to seven. The denominations are clubs, diamonds, hearts, spades, no-trump.

Opponent of the opening bidder is known as defender. The defender also has a list from which to choose his first call. His list includes the word double.

The list of bids for an opener follows an order of preference. Starting with the strongest, such bids are known under group names of two bids, three bids, one bids, four bids.

To show the same types of hands, the first defender also has a list with an order of preference. The group names in this list are much more picturesque as descriptive titles.

Starting with the strongest, defensive bids are referred to as: Overcall in opponent suit, jump overcall, double for takeout, simple overcall. The word overcall is a label for a defensive bid.

South opens a heart and west says one spade with this hand:

♠A Q J 6 2
♥8 4 3
♦K 7 5 4
♣6

The one spade bid by west is a simple overcall. This is weakest of all defence bids. The word simple in bridge means without a jump. No reflection on the player.

The Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, July 27 (AP)—Buxom blonde Marilyn Maxwell is faced with the task of portraying a "bump" on the screen.

"For those not familiar with such things, I explain that a bump is a violent forward movement of the lower torso. This is a manoeuvre common among dancers of the burlesque type. It is also forbidden on the screen under Section VII, Parts 1 and 2, of the Production Code.

That's Marilyn's problem. She is playing a bubble dancer, in "Key to the City" and she was puzzled on how to give a convincing performance sans bumps.

"I was in New York when I heard about the role," she said, "so I went down to Atlantic City to watch the girls in the burlesque houses. I got the walk down pretty well — they all walk the same.

Bored Bouncing

"They bounce around, bored and blase. One of the gals had a fascinating act. All she wore were little pieces of fruit at the strategic places. Every time she whistled, a cockatoo would fly across the stage and bite off a piece of fruit. It was fascinating."

Marilyn is billed as the atom-bomb dancer in the picture and her costume is a flock of balloons decorated with atomic symbols in sequins.

"Of course, it's established early in the scene that I'm wearing a scanty, flesh-colored outfit underneath," she added. "The Johnston office wouldn't have it otherwise."

Locke Trails By One Stroke In Irish Open

(By The Canadian Press)

The ketch Valkyrie out of Marblehead, Mass., and skippered by John MacDonald Wednesday was announced winner of the 366-mile Marblehead - to - Halifax yacht race.

The Valkyrie was first over the finish line—the breakwater at the entrance to Halifax harbor—a few minutes after midnight Monday. Total time was just 57 hours from start of the race Saturday and the handicap Valkyrie a corrected time of 53 hours, 16 minutes and 17 seconds.

In second place in Class A was J. P. Maddon's yawl Brenda out of Danvers, Mass., with a corrected time of 58 hours, four minutes and 26 seconds.

The navy's sloop Grilse led the seven Canadian entries with a time of 63 hours, 47 minutes and 38 seconds. The Grilse was skippered by Captain E. W. Finch-Noyes, commander of the navy's Shearwater base in Halifax.

At Riverside Golf and Country Club, Saint John, N.B., the Royal Canadian Golf Association executive Wednesday decided to pay the Professional Golfers Association of the United States the $1,500 golf clinic guarantee withheld last month at the Canadian Open championship in Toronto.

Disappointed at failure of the P.G.A. to supply promised players for the pre tournament, the R.C.G.A. held the cheque pending assurance that the clinic wouldn't suffer similarly in the future.

There was no comment by the executive on Wednesday's decision.

The Canadian Lawn Tennis Championships, being held in the Maritimes for the first time this year, is expected to get under way with approximately 150 starters, tournament officials said at Halifax Wednesday night.

Among the starters for the week-long event, Aug. 1-6, is the Hon. Robert Winters, Federal Minister of Reconstruction.

Great Britain's Walker Cup golf force lost a dress rehearsal to a team of crack British professionals Wednesday on the eve of their departure for the United States.

Captain Percy Lucas and his amateurs leave on the Queen Elizabeth today. Their mission is to recapture the Walker Cup from the United States at Winged Foot, near New York, Aug. 19-20.

In the tune-up match at London, Wednesday, with the pros, the British amateurs lost eight individual matches, won one and halved another. Tuesday they lost three and won two foursomes, finishing behind the pros, 11½ to 3½.

Battling on a rain-soaked Tohouse Wednesday night won the ronto field, Hamilton Westingeastern Canada soccer title by defeating Montreal Stelcos 6-3 in the final game of the best-of-three series.

Montreal won the first game 1-0 and Hamilton the second 5-0. Westinghouse now will meet Winnipeg Scottish in the Canadian semi-final.

Bobby Locke of South Africa, the tournament favorite, ended up one stroke behind the leaders Wednesday in the first round of the Irish Open golf championship at Belfast.

Locke, who detoured to the tourney when the United States P.G.A. banned him from competing in its tournaments, shot a 71.

Harry Bradshaw of Ireland and Flory Van Donck of Belgium shared the lead with 70. Tied with Locke were three British professionals—Sam King, Alf Padgham and E. C. Pope.

Kerr is Favored To Win Coveted Millar Trophy

Toronto, July 28 (CP)—Headed by Bill Kerr of Montreal Beaconsfield, 63 of Ontario's and Quebec's professionals tee off today in quest of the Millar Cup and some $750 to the winner.

Kerr has been established a 5-to-1 favorite to take the leading money on the strength of his good showing in the Canadian open recently and a 69 that he registered on the par-73 Islington golf course yesterday.

Three other professionals from Quebec are not to be forgotten, however. They are defending champion Stan Horne of Islesmere, Jules and Rudulphe Huot and Damien Gauthier.

Ontario's hopes are pinned mainly on Bobby Gray of Scarboro and Gord Brydson of Mississauga.

Two rounds of the match play will be played today, with losers moving into a consolation event, to be played Friday.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was watching pop smoking and thinking in his private chair, and she said, William, there are 2 kinds of people in the werld.

Do you mean rite and wrong? pop said, and ma said, I mean some are fortunate enough to be able to give money in the cause of charity, while others do their bit by giving time and effort. That's the way we feel about it in the Current Events and Bridge Club. Some of the ladies are donating money to the annual charity bazaar, while the others are baking cakes and making candy to be sold, using the club funds to pay for the materials. In othe. words, you have your choice of putting your hand in your purse or your shoulder to the wheel. Naturally the less money you take out of the fund compared to the amount of candy or cake you tern in to be sold, the more your contribution rebounds to your credit. I'm only asking for 50 cents, and that's all I'm going to spend to make 5 pounds of my famous peenut brittle, she said.

Isn't sugar fairly expensive? pop said, and ma said. Oh no, only 10 cents a pound.

Then there's your 5 pounds rite there, pop said. Are you going to make it out of sugar exclusively? he said, and ma said, Certainly not, I'll need peenuts and butter and corn sirrup. But I alreddy have the butter and the sirrup in the house so that's no expense, and I always buy shelled peenuts periodically for one reason or another, so that's no change in my usual routine either. In other werds there's nothing in the expense sheet but the sugar. What are you laffing at, William? she said.

Oh, w sal laffing? pop said. I suppose it just occured to me that it's a woman's werld, he said.

Being what he allways claims.

Modern Hospital To Serve Indians At James Bay

Ottawa, July 27 — (CP) — A modern, 120-bed hospital to serve to Indian population around James Bay will be completed and ready for use next spring.

A health department official said the hospital, being built at Moose Factory at a cost of $1,500,000 will be used as the centre of a health program for the whole area.

One part of the building has already been roofed and exterior construction is expected to be finished before the fall freeze-up. During the winter months interior work will go on and the hospital is scheduled to be opened next spring.

The up-to-date institution will have three floors, one of them half below and half above the ground. There will be accommodation for a staff of 25.

It will have its own power plant, laundry and sewage disposal facilities.

The institution, construction of which began last fall, will be of use only by the many Indians in the James Bay district. The comparatively small white population is already served by a 30-bed Roman Catholic Hospital at Moosonee and a small Church of England Cottage Hospital at Moose Factory.

Immunization, maternity cases, tuberculosis treatment, surgery and general hospital care will be handled at the new centre.

Brighteners

London — (AP) — The hard facts are, the Moscow radio said today, that Russia was the first country to produce cement.

The broadcaster declared this was solidly proved by documents found in the state archives.

Turning from the abstract to the concrete, he said the archives show the first cement works were built in Russia at the start of the 18th century.

He said this was at least 70 years earlier than the first production of cement in Britain, which had been credited with priority.

New York — (AP) — A professional football tryout was offered to a 28-year-old shoe clerk whose flying tackle helped frustrate a $365,000 jewel robbery.

Coach Red Strader of the New York - Brooklyn team in the All-America Conference invited the clerk, Bill Van Zandt, to the Yankees' training camp at Cheshire, Conn., "all expenses paid."

Van Zandt gave chase to two men who held up a jewelry store Monday near his own establishment and brought one of the men down with a flying tackle. Both men were caught.

"We're weak in tackling," said Strader.

Middletown, N. Y. — (AP) — Judge J. Allan Ballman, trying to take a defendant's mind off automobiles, recently told 21-year-old William B. Lawlor to get himself a girl.

"Leave automobiles alone," the court told Lawlor, who was accused of driving without a licence.

Tuesday Lawlor was back in court on a drunk charge. He told Judge Ballman he took the advice and got himself a girl. But she jilted him.

"That's why I drann Your Honor," he explained.

"Seeing that the girl friend was my idea," Judge Ballman sighed, "I'll suspend sentence. My advire to yoh now is to leave both ahtomobiles and girls alone."

Pasadena, Calif. — (AP)—Soon pedestrians wearing putty suits may bounre off auto bumpers and not even sprout a bruise.

This was indicated by Gabriel M. Giannini, expert on instruments for rockets and supersonic planes, who has just received from White Sands, N. M., a movie heliograph. The delicate "sun camera" was recovered undamaged after being shot to an altitude of 100 miles in a V-2 rocket.

Why undamaged?

Because, explains Gianini, it was encased in a new shock-absorbing "putty" made from silicone, a sand derivative. Not only special cameras, but also a variety of recorders are coated with an inch or more of the substance before being shot aloft.

Upon hitting the ground after their long aerial trip, the instruments "hardly feel" the impact.

Now what's that about pedestrians?

DESERTED CHILDREN

Syracuse, N. Y., July 28 (AP) — Donald Frazier, 30, who left two of his three young children on a deserted, mosquito - infested island for about 24 hours, Tuesday was committed to an institution for the criminally insane. Frazier has been under observation in hospital since July 5.

Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Moore and sons of Arnprior spent a recent weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Ray Sine.

Miss Yvonne King has been holidaying with Mr. and Mrs. Eugene King, Campbellford.

Mr. Gordon McInroy, West Huntingdon, attended a birthday party in honor of his grandmother's 75th birthday and he also celebrated hos own birthday on the same date. The party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Clancy in honor of Mrs. Richard Haggerty.

Mrs. Osborne Smith, Peterborough, spent a day last week at Mount Pleasant.

Picnic and Meetings Cancelled

The president and directors of River Valley Women's Institute decided on Monday to cancel the basket picnic planned for August. This was done as a precautionary measure against polio. Health authorities are anxious to have children and teen-agers avoid crowds until the situations is cleared up. The Institute will not hold any meeting or gathering in the month of August.

Miss Sandra Stewart is holidaying with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Herb. Taylor of Hilton.

Sir Stafford's Worries Have Not Taken Edge off His Tongue

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, July 28 — (CP) — When the world's greatest buyer runs short of money, the man responsible for the buying naturally feels the greatest strain.

And the strain has been so great on Sir Stafford Cripps, Chancellor of the Exchequer, that he has gone to Switzerland for treatment of a stomach ailment.

Before he left, two weeks ago, nobody in Whitehall was surprised when Sir Stafford showed signs of edginess. Beneath the bitter-sweet smile he habitually wears in public, Sir Stafford has been frankly worried.

Big Responsibilities

Sir Stafford doesn't deal in petty cash. As keeper of the financial keys for what is loosely called the sterling bloc, he has final say on drawings from the sterling pool by Burma, Iceland, Ireland, Iraq and all Commonwealth countries except Canada.

His worries are sharper now because the reserves are down to £400,000,000 ($1,600,000,000), and about £100,000,0000 below safety level. He has to find a way out.

He is usually cool but civil at press gatherings. He indicates that newspaper men aren't his favorite people, but he manages to do it without offending.

Lately his manner has been more abrupt.

"How do you account for the fact that the dollar drain has doubled in the last three months?" a reporter asked at a recent conference.

"I don't account for it, because it hasn't happend," said Sir Stafford, proceeding to reel off the figures. "According to my arithmetic, that isn't double."

Asked whether his statement on the dollar problem wasn't a trifle optimistic, he answered crustily:

"The answer is no, or I should not have made it."

Tart Repartee

One touch of tart repartee enlivened the conference.

Using the fable of the donkey, the carrot and the stick, a correspondent wanted to know whether Sir Stafford's remedies for the financial crisis weren't really the same stick and the same carrot as before.

"I should say no," the Chancellor replied.

"A larger stick or a larger carrot?"

"I think you must ask the donkey to answer that."

"Aren't we all part of the donkey?"

"Put yourself where you like."

Bride-Elect Receives Shower of Cups, Saucers and Linen

Marmora — Mrs. Ellery Stubbs and Mrs. H. A. Burwash were hostesses at a cup and saucer, and linen shower at the latter's cottage at Crowe Lake on Monday evening, in honor of Miss Eva Johnston whose marriage takes place on Monday, August 1st.

More than 20 guests were present and an enjoyable evening was spent. The bride-elect thanked her friends for the beautiful gifts received. Delicious refreshments were served by the hostesses.

Minus One Arm Does Not Bother Crack Rifle Shot

Kentville, N.S., July 28—(CP)—A man who refused to give up shooting after losing his right arm walked away from the Nova Scotia Rifle Association meet at nearby Aldershot Wednesday with five prizes in his possession.

Maj. Cyril Kennedy of Hilden, won five events and trailed the grand aggregate winner by only four points. He took the Merchants Cup, most famed trophy up for competition, by four points.

A three-time placer in the King's Hundred at Bisley Shoots, Maj. Kennedy lost his right arm 32 days after landing in France with the North Nova Scotia Highlanders.

Returning to Canada, he refused to give up his love of shooting, inherited from his father and grandfather. He had a local blacksmith fashion a unique fork-shaped "shooting rack".

KIDNEYS DISTURBED SLEEP MANY TIMES EACH NIGHT

Had Sharp, Shooting Pains in Arms and Legs, Backache and Bad Headaches. Tried Many Things. Got No Relief Until He Used Syntona.

All around us are grateful men and women who have used Syntona and found it to be just what they needed to help build up run-down system and relieve common ailments of stomach, kidneys, liver and bowels. Syntona produces these results by cleansing the system of excess acids and waste matter and by promoting better assimilation of food to help build up strong, healthy nerves and sound bodies.

"My kidneys were giving me trouble for several years," said Mr. Lindsay T. Irvine, St. Thomas, Ontario.

"I would have to get up several times each night and in this way lost considerable sleep. I had sharp, shooting rheumatic pains in my arms and limbs, backache and frequent headaches that often made my stomach feel sick and nauseated.

"I had tried many different things but nothing really helped me until I began taking Syntona just a short time ago. Now I am able to sleep pretty well through the whole night without having to get us, the shooting pains are gone and I am free of headache and backache. I feel so much better that even my work seems easier now."

Let this pure herbal compound help you, too. Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST.

Cooler Weather in Sight After Prolonged Warm Spell

(By The Canadian Press)

Eastern Canada can expect relief during the weekend from its second major heat wave of the summer. Cool, dry air is moving slowly eastward from the western prairies.

That's the word from the weather observers, who say southern sections of Ontario and Quebec must endure the moist heat for at least another day. Northern areas of both provinces should see temperatures dropping late today.

The hot spell which set in early this week, when tropical air from the southern United States flowed northeastward into Ontario and Quebec, has spread out until now it stretches from the Great Lakes to Cape Breton Island. Temperatures throughout that area have been ranging from 85 degrees to more than 90.

Scattered thunderstorms have broken over some sections in the grip of the heat wave and more are expected today. But so far, they have done little to relieve the oppressive heat and, in some cases they have added moisture to the already-humid air.

Montreal weathermen blame the hot weather for three minor tornadoes which hit Quebec communities during the last 10 days.

Another development traced to the hot weather of this week and last month is the rise of the grasshopper nuisance in Quebec.

The heat wave led three Ottawa office girls to report for duty wearing shorts. Their office manager pronounced their garb undignified and distracting and sent them home to change into skirts.

In Toronto, where the temperatures Thursday reached 93 degrees, sweltering citizens were dismayed by news that two public beaches on the Lake Ontario waterfront had been temporarily closed. For two weeks, huge oil slicks of mysterious origin have been polluting the shoreline with sticky, smelly slime. Now bathing has been banned in two main swimming areas until the source of the oil patches is found.

The hot weather was held at least partly responsible for the death in Toronto Thursday of three elderly women. Investigating coroners said the heat and humidity helped to bring on attacks of coronary thrombosis which killed the women.

Half-Nude Girl Startles Driver

Atlanta, July 29—(AP)—The hot weather in Atlanta was apparently just too much for a 21-year-old girl early today.

Clad in slacks, nothing more she jumped into an ice delivery truck and almost caused the driver to wreck the vehicle.

Shortly before, police said, she had turned in a false fire alarm and brought firemen from every downtown station speeding to the scene.

Police said the girl gave her name as Ann Warren of Blue Ridge, Ga. When the officers stopped the ice truck, the girl borrowed a towel in an effort to fill the uncovered portions of her hot weather costume. She was charged with disorderly conduct.

A high of 95 degrees was forecast for today after Thursday's 94.

Toronto Bans West-End Bathing As Oil Shifts

Toronto, July 29 — (CP) — The Toronto Harbor Commission today banned bathing in west-end Sunnyside beaches because oil dumped in Lake Ontario has shifted from the suburbs to Toronto's waterfront and polluted the beach district.

Harbor Commissioner H. G. Snelgrove ordered all available life guards to form a cordon about the western beaches and keep bathers from the water. At the same time, the Commission appealed to the Civic Parks Department for more men to patrol the beaches.

Announcement of the swimming ban came when Toronto was sweltering in the second heat wave of the summer with temperatures hovering about the 90-degree mark.

Two weeks ago a Vancouver girl was drowned. Oil was believed to have plugged her nostrils.

Authorities still are trying to definitely locate source of the oil which has polluted swimming areas and killed hundreds of ducks this summer.

70 TONS OF HAY BURNED

Toronto, July 29 — (CP) — A $40,000 fire in the barn of Harry Addison Thursday night destroyed some 70 tons of hay and 2,000 bushels of wheat on his suburban Sullivan's Corners farm.

Firemen from Toronto and 3 suburban municipalities worked together in fighting the blaze but were forced by lack of water to confine their efforts to preventing it from spreading. Cause of the fire has not been determined.

NAPANEE YOUTH TO STAND TRIAL FOR GUN MURDER

Court Crowded at Preliminary Hearing

Napanee, July 29 — (CP)—Alfred Childs, 16-year-old farm laborer, will stand trial here next fall for murder in the hayfield shooting of Elijah McQuaig, 57, at Selby, 20 miles west of Kingston.

Childs, also known in this district as Johnny Nelson, was committed for trial Thursday after a five-hour preliminary hearing before Magistrate J. B. Garvin.

Residents of this Eastern Ontario farming section crowded the little courtroom to hear witnesses describe how McQuaig, a popular district farmer, was blasted from his hay rake June 29 by a fusillade of rifle shots fired from a barn. McQuaig's helper, Donald Ross, 18, was wounded twice by bullets while trying to flee.

Ross said that after he, himself, was hit the second time, he lay down in the hay and saw the person who was doing the shooting. He said he watched the marksman for about two minutes and could identify him if he saw him again.

Asked if anyone in the courtroom resembled the sniper, Ross pointed to Childs and replied: "That fellow there—Childs."

Harry Thompson, who had been working near Ross, said three bullets came close to him. One smashed two windows of his automobile.

Mr. and Mrs. Eph Robinson, who employed Childs on their farm, said they recalled the ordering of a rifle for Childs, whom they knew as Johnny Nelson. Mrs. Robinson said she took delivery of the weapon at the village post office.

The Robinsons said that the day before the shooting of McQuaig, two watches, an electric razor, and pair of boots and other articles were stolen from their farmhouse while they were in Kingston for the day. They notified provincial police of the theft and told them that Childs had disappeared from the farm.

At the time of Childs' arrest, two hours after the shooting, neighbors recalled the youth's prowess as a marksman and his fondness for reading blood-and-thunder fiction of trigger-happy days on the western frontier. They said he could toss a bottle into the air and shatter it with rifle fire before it hit the ground.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Toronto, July 29—(CP)—Synopsis: A break in the current heat wave is imminent today. Cooler air from northwestern Ontario is moving southeasward behind a disturbance moving across northern Ontario. This cooler drier air will cover the entire province by Saturday morning.

Meanwhile today will be hot and humid in southern and eastern regions. Thunderstorms will occur in a few localities this morning and in most localities this afternoon and evening.

Saturday will be sunny and cooler in all regions and little change is anticipated for Sunday.

Court Takes Young Girl From Father That She May Not be 'Beast of Burden'

Sarnia, July 29 (CP).—A 10-year-old girl whom the court called a "beast of burden" was taken from her father Thursday as Magistrate C. S. Woodrow fined district farmer Arthur Levoy $200 and $55 costs after convicting him of wounding the girl with a pitchfork.

Annie has been driving a tractor since she was five years old, the father said. She was given to the temporary care of grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Podolinsky at Alvinston.

Magistrate Woodrow said that Levoy missed a prison term only because he has a 300-acre farm and considerable livestock to maintain.

"We want this girl brought up like a Christian—not like a beast of burden," said the magistrate. The girl was not asked to give evidence.

Levoy admitted strapping his daughter several times after he had come home and found her visiting relatives. Her chores included feeding the chickens, bringing in the cows, doing housekeeping and cooking meals.

Levoy said his wife died three years ago shortly after her return from hospital where she underwent a major operation.

Asked by Magistrate Woodrow what he had done when his wife returned to the farm from hospital, said she had been out in the field working.

It was brought out in evidence that Levoy's first wife died three years ago following a major operation, and shortly after her return home she had started to do farm chores again.

Magistrate Woodrow commented: "Then she came home and you had her working in the fields. She practically died working in the fields."

Canada Tightens Restrictions On Export Atomic Equipment

Ottawa, July 29—(CP)—As far as government officials know, Canada hasn't lost any atomic secrets to foreign powers since the espionage probe three years ago, but the Dominion isn't letting up her efforts to tighten export restrictions on any materials used in atomic research.

Working in co-operation with United States and the United Kingdom, the Dominion is plugging any loopholes through which atomic equipment might have been shipped without authority to another country.

This means that every case of export of these materials will be handled through Canada's-export-control machinery.

Prior to the order-in-council thre was lack of uniformity in regulations covering movement of atomic materials.

All export was under control of the Atomic Research Board which hasn't its own machinery for enforcing the regulations. For a number of materials there were individual regulations requiring that export permits be used.

The Order-in-Council, passed July 20, rounds up all the regulations and adds anything that wasn't covered previously. It places al. regulations under the export-control machinery which is in a position to handle atomic materials along with other every-day things which require permits for export.

One reason for the tightening is that more private persons have access to atomic ores now than before. Until the beginning of last year all prospecting for uranium-bearing ores was under government control.

Since then it has been open to individual prospectors, and although the government still buys all uranium ore and processes it, there is always the possibility of attempts to export the raw ore has been no report of smuggling of without authority. While there high-grade pitchblende, it could happen.

Kelley Says Water Not Main Cause of Dysentery Outbreak

Toronto, July 29—(CP)—Health Minister Kelley of Ontario said Thursday that in five of 12 wells tested in the northen Ontario lumbering town of Mattawa "sufficient contamination was found to class them an unfit for domestic use"

His statement was based on a report from representatives of the Provincial Department of Health who investigated an outbreak of dysentery, reported to have taken the lives of 12 infants in the town and district.

Mr. Kelley said the report "makes it most difficult to make a definite statment that water was the cause of the outbreak."

He said, in the statment, that samples were taken from 12 of the wells used by the families of patients suffering from the outbreak of "so-called dpsentery."

These showed, on examination, "no evidence of contamination in seven samples, while five samples showed sufficient contamination to class them as unfit for domestic use without first boiling or chlorinating."

"Since five children used contaminated water and contracted the disease and seven used uncontaminated water and also caught it, it is impossible to attribute it definitely to the water."

Meanwhile, it was learned at the Hospital for Sick Children here that seven of the eight babies brought here from Mattawa for treatment are making a good recovery. The eighth is still listed as "critical" but showed improvement Thursday.

A doctor at the hospital, who declined use of his name, said Thursday that the ailment from which the babies are suffering is not dysentery.

"This is a form of summer flu," he said. "In adults, it attacks the nose and throat. But a baby's digestive system is his weakest point and the summer flu strikes there. It is not a disease carried in food or water and breast-fed babies are almost immune."

Mattawa, Ont., July 29 (CP).—Work will begin here next week on a $125,000 waterworks and sewer project approved Thursday by the Ontario Department of Municipal Affairs.

A special meeting of the Mattawa town council, called Thursday night by Mayor Albert Huot heard a letter from the Hon. Geo. Dunbar, minister of municipal affairs, who "urged" the council to "proceed immediately with a $125,000 water and sewer program".

Mayor Huot said today the council has decided to follow that advice.

"I had asked the government to approve a project that would cover the whole town with water and sewers," Mayor Huot said. "But they're only going to let us spend $125,000. Anyway, I'm glad that we can do something because it will at least give us a start on what we want."

He said five tenders are on hand for the work. Contracts will be awarded at another meeting of the council slated for next Tuesday.

Tri-Country Atomic Talks Are Planned

Ottawa, July 29 — (CP) — Canada will send representatives to tri-country atomic talks in Washington in late August or early September, informed sources said today. The talks may produce a new version of the wartime agreement on exchange of information.

A source close to Acting Prime Minister Howe said he doesn't wish to make any statement until something more definite develops about the Anglo-American-Canadian talks on sharing information and allocating supplies of uranium ore.

Since 1946 information has been exchanged on a limited bases in certain secret categories, none of them directly affecting the A-bomb. However, Mr. Howe said Canada is not interested in the bomb.

Present plans do not call for the minister himself to go to Washington but these may be changed.

Army Officers Complete Course At R.M. College

Kingston, Ont., July 29—(CP)—Young army officers completed a course today designed to teach them "how the other fellow works," with an address from General H. O. Graham, Vice-Chief of the General Staff, Army Headquarters, Ottawa. The course, common to all arms, opened in June at the Royal Military College here. The students who come from all the corps of the army now will be assimilated into the permanent active force.

Major E. G. Brooks said object of the course was to expand and develop the candidate's knowledge of the organization and employment of all corps in the army, and thus to broaden their military background.

"In addition, the course was designed to give instruction in many of the subjects required by the young regimental officer," said Major Brooks. "The curriculum covered man management, organization of sports, physical training, military law, unit administration and the principles of good instruction."

"Army Headquarters directed us to run this course to broaden the young officers education. Hitherto the young officer often had little knowledge of the scope and effects of other regiments work," he observed.

The course first of its kind has supplemented the training the newly commissioned officer received under the officers training corps program.

A number of full lieutenants and captains also passed through it.

PET ROBIN SHOWS APPRECIATION

Kitchener, July 29 (CP)—Billie a baby robin, appreciated being rescued from a cat. Today he is the household pet of Jimmy Baird—the rescuer. When called by name the bird will fly from nearby trees and perch on Jimmy's hand. The robin takes little notice of the family's dog.

ANCO'S DISMISSAL WILL BE SUBJECT TO ARBITRATION

Massey-Harris Strike Settlement Announced

Toronto, July 29 (CP)—Employees of the Massey-Harris Company today accepted terms proposed for settlement of a dispute which led Local 439 of the United Auto Workers (C.I.O.) to call a strike at the plant last Tuesday. Some 4,500 men were idle.

The settlement plan, proposed by Louis Fine of the Ontario Department of Labor, provides for arbitration of the chief point at issue—dismissal by the company of Steve Anco, Local 439 president. The men return to work next Tuesday.

Accepted Plan

The company accepted the plan Thursday night. Mr. Fine, chief councilliation officer in the government department, put it forward after an all-day conference with union and company representatives.

Union officials said that representatives of the union from the Massey-Harris plant at Brantford attended today's membership meeting and concurred in the settlement which provides for arbitration of the chief issue in the dispute—dismissal by the company of Steve Anco, Local 439 president.

Terms of settlement are:

1. All employees return to work on their respective shifts at 7 a.m., Aug. 2.
2. Steve Anco, president of the Local, remains discharged from the service of the company, and the union grievance regarding his dismissal will be submitted to arbitration.
3. The company will not impose the penalties on union security provided in the contract.
4. The company waives the requirement to work Friday, July 29, to qualify for Monday's Civic Holiday pay.

Ignored Rules

The dispute arose from the dismissal of Anco, for what the company called "repeated and flagrant infractions of the rules laid down in the union contract."

Anco said he was discharged because he refused to order men to work overtime when the company was laying off workers due to lack of business. Company spokesmen said Anco told two union members to disregard orders given them by the management.

The workers walked out Tuesday, demanding Anco's reinstatement.

Royal Marines' Band To Make First Visit

Toronto, July 29 — (CP)—The band of His Majesty's Royal Marines will make its first appearance in Canada this year. It will play daily during the Canadian National Exhibition Aug. 26 to Sept. 10.

While known primarily as a military band, the Royal Marines also maintain a full symphony orchestra. They have served the King since 1903, have played aboard the royal yacht and accompanied the royal family on the tour of South Africa.

Vicar Hopes to End Feud of Villages Which Arose out of Cromwell War

Wheaton-Aston, Staffs, England, July 29—(Reuter)—A vicar is trying to make peace between two villages in his parish where the residents, divided into "Roundheads" and "Royalists," still keep up a grudge arising out of the English Civil War 300 years ago.

During the war, "Roundhead" was the nickname given to the followers of Oliver Cromwell and the "Royalists" were the supporters of King Charles I.

But in spite of the vicar's efforts the feud still goes on between the two Staffordshire villages of Lapley and Wheaton-Aston.

H. E Weate, a member of one of Wheaton-Aston's 10 Weate families, all staunch "Roundheads" says:

"When I am in Lapley I can feel the hair on the back of my neck stand on end.

"Ever since I can remember the two villages have been against one another. When we organized a flower show Lapley organized one on the same day. When we wanted street lighting, Lapley was against it."

The vicar, the Reverend W. D Williams, tells the villagers:

"A little healthy rivalry is a good thing, but I can only say it is time people grew up."

It was in 1645 that Cromwell's Roundheads set out from Wheaton-Aston to capture Lapley, one mile distant, from Royalist forces, and Lapley has not yet forgiven Wheaton-Aston.

Plans to Relieve Housing Shortage Under Discussion

Federal, Provincial, Civic Officials Hold Conference

Ottawa, July 29 (CP). — The capital is buzzing with talk about Canada's housing shortage.

Indications are that tangible evidence of the Federal government's plans to east the shortage may be forthcoming within a few weeks, following a series of conferences between Federal, provincial and civic officials.

Reconstruction Minister Winters—head of the Federal department that handles housing — Thursday met one provincial premier and made an appointment to see another one about housing. He talked, too, with the mayor of one of the cities hardest hit by the problem.

Today he is scheduled to discuss Manitoba's woes with Labor Minister Greenlay.

Wants Housing Subsidized.

The Community Planning Association entered the picture, too, Thursday, with a call for a subsidized, low-rental housing program as the only solution to the nation-wide shortage of homes.

Mr. Winters and Premier Johnson of British Columbia talked for 2½ hours in what Mr. Johnson said was a "general discussion" of the problem. There was nothing more specific he could say about the conference, the premier said.

Mayor Hiram McCallum of Toronto and members of the Board of Control also saw the minister and the mayor said he found Mr. Winters "very much disturbed" about Toronto, regarded as one of the cities with the most crucial housing problem.

Mr. Winters also said he will meet Premier Frost of Ontario in Toronto Aug. 8 to "discuss all phases of Ontario's housing problems".

The statement by the Community Planning Association—a group of some 500 architects, welfare officials and town planners — was timed to coincide with the conferences.

Decisive Opportunity.

The Association said Federal, provincial and municipal governments "now have a decisive opportunity to lay the foundations of a housing program for all Canadian families."

"That program should include families of below-average income. Our efforts so far have left half our tenants out of the picture."

Only 70 Britons Have Net Income $24,000 After Taxes

London, July 29 (AP).—Britain is down to its last 54 millionaires, the government reported today.

The inland revenue commissioners consider a man a millionaire if he has an annual income of 100,000 pounds ($400,000) or more.

Their report for the year ended March 31 showed a decline of two in this class compared with the 56 of the preceding 12 months.

Only 70 persons in Britain were left with a net income of more than 6,000 pounds for the year, after paying taxes.

Lives of Two Men Of Same Name Oddly Tangled

Detroit, July 29 — (AP)—George Newton, Jr., of Plymouth Mich., has never met George Henry Newton, 29, of Rochester, N.Y.

But their lives became fantastically tangled. Let postal Inspector Donald School go on with the story:

The Rochester Newton was rejected for military service, but he decided to become a serviceman anyway. He was arrested several times for impersonating servicemen and in September, 1947, was sentenced to two years for fraudulently obtaining another's mail.

Shortly before that arrest, the Rochester Newton appeared at the Wayne county clerk's office and applied for photostatic copies of the Plymouth Newton's navy discharge papers.

The Plymouth Newton later complained he had not received his state veterans' bonus cheque. Investigation showed it had gone to the Rochester Newton, by this time in prison.

After he was paroled May 1, the Rochester Newton obtained the Plymouth Newton's notice of separation from the Great Lakes Naval Training Station. Then he applied here for compensation in the name of the Plymouth Newton's discharge papers at the county clerk's office. But the office had been tipped off and notified Federal agents.

The Rochester Newton collected the Plymouth Newton's Victory medals at the navy recruiting office and sought to enlist in the naval reserve.

The Rochester Newton was on his way today back to prison. Judge Arthur F. Lederle yesterday sentenced him to 11 months in prison for fraudulently obtaining the Plymouth Newton's mail.

'Private Fight' For First Drink At Fountain

Toronto, July 29 (CP).—Thirteen "zoot-suiters" who were carrying on a "private fight" over who should have first drink at a drinking fountain, tied up traffic on west-end Bathurst street for more than 15 minutes Thursday night. The youths were taken into custody and later released one by one when they refused to press charges against each other.

Passengers Get Pins and Needles

London, July 29 — (CP)—Too many passengers on London trolley-buses are getting pins and needles. And that leads to accidents.

Safety engineers blame the way the seats are laid out. As a result, the buses may be redesigned.

"Many accidents in which people fall from bus platforms are caused by numbness, the result of compression of the popliteal artery at the back of the knee," the safety engineers said in their report.

CAR SPATTERS WATER ON PEDESTRIAN

In a time of drought it may seem a bit queer for a pedestrian to complain of being splashed by a motorist but just such a complaint was received this morning at the local police station.

It seems a resident of Bridge Street was waiting for a bus at the corner of Front and Bridge Streets just after the street flusher had passed leaving puddles of water at the curb. A motorist turned the corner rather sharply and the muddy water was splashed over the pedestrian's clothes.

The irate pedestrian quickly noted the licence number of the offending vehicle and reported the matter to police.

POST OFFICE HOURS ON CIVIC HOLIDAY

There will be no letter carrier delivery in the city on Civic Holiday, it was announced by Postmaster J. C. Waddell, today.

However, there will be a full delivery by rural letter carriers; street letter box collections will be made and mails received and dispatched as usual. Wickets will be open from 8:00 a.m. to 12:00 noon, and lobby from 6:30 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Special delivery service will also be available.

DOG OWNERS WARNED TO BUY LICENCES

Nearly 200 dog owners in the city have failed to procure their dog licence for the current year, it was stated this morning by Thomas Thorne, city pound keeper. It was estimated there are nearly 1,100 dogs in the city and licences sold thus far total only 915.

Mr. Thorne warned dog owners who have not yet secured their dog licences to do so immediately as delinquents would receive a summons for failing to register their pets.

SLIGHT DECLINE IN TWEED TAX RATE

The 1949 tax rate, struck last Thursday night by the Tweed Municipal Council, is 62 and one-quarter mills—a decline of two mills over the rate for the previous year.

Reason for the reduction is a lowering in the high school rate.

FOUR SPEEDSTERS GET SUMMONS

That local police will not tolerate motorists using city streets as speedways was strongly indicated last night when no less than four drivers were checked for exceeding the speed limit.

Two of the motorists were checked at 40 miles per hour on Dundas Street; one was clocked at the same speed on Yeoman's St., and the other on Station Street.

Police Chief Walter Probert particularly warned motorists against exceeding the speed limit in the city and in built up areas where congested traffic conditions existed.

Air Personnel Leaves Mohawk Training Field

All personnel of the Mohawk air station, Deseronto, with the exception of a skeleton guard, moved out of the camp this week, according to camp commandant, Squadron Leader L. Gervais.

During the past three months, the camp has been used as a training base for four classes of Reserve Royal Canadian Air Force personnel. Squadrons from Quebec City, Montreal, Toronto and London, have received summer instruction at the Deseronto airfield.

About 55 full-time men have been on the station since it reopened last spring. Squadron Leader Gervais, who is returning to his home in Montreal, expressed his appreciation for the cooperation and hospitality shown him and his men during their stay there. He also praised the camp as a training base for jet planes, a function it has been performing for the past few weeks.

Furriers Report Good Sales Despite the Heat

Local furriers mopped their brows this week as the temperature climbed along with the sale of furs. Many local buyers, as well as tourists from the United States, are keeping business moving briskly during this sweltering weather.

This year's stock of furs, while one of the richest in recent years, is also one of the lowest priced in many a long day. Reason for the reduced cost of coats this season is the lower prices paid for skins on the spring market. Further reductions would have been possible except that increased labor costs have been added since this time a year ago.

Hastings County Centennial Next Monday in Tweed

Plans are proceeding for the Centennial celebration of Hastings County, to be held at Tweed Memorial Park on Civic Holiday, Monday, August 1st. The affair will commemorate the 100th anniversary of the county.

Warden S. A. McCarey, of Tweed, issued 200 invitations this week to many former reeves and county officials. The energetic committee in charge met in Tweed on Monday afternoon and final plans were completed for the big event.

Hon. George Dunbar, Provincial Minister of Municipal Affairs, will be the chief speaker while Warden McCarey and other county officials will be heard during the afternoon. The committee has the co-operation of the Tweed branch of The Canadian Legion who are sponsoring power boat races during the afternoon. Entries have been received from many distant points, including Alexandria Bay, Fisher's Landing, N.Y., Pittsburgh, and other places.

PICTON

Injured When Car Hits Tree

Picton — Harold Lightfoot, 32, was admitted to Prince Edward County Hospital yesterday following a car accident. His car side-swiped a tree at Woodrous Corners and was badly damaged. Lightfoot suffered an injured hip and abrasions. He told police he had swerved to miss a mud-puddle. Constable James Lovelace investigated.

Home from Hospital

Terribly burned early in February, Margaret Ann Carnahan, 5, returned home from Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto this week. She had been a patient there since Feb. 4 and a great deal of skin grafting was done on her body. She will return in September for further grafting on the arm and face. The fractured hip has healed. Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Carnahan, Athol Township, the child was burned when her clothes caught fire after she has been playing with matches.

Local Peaches

Several locally - grown peach trees are bearing good crops of peaches. One, grown from a pit planted four years ago on the lot owned by Robert Cockburn, will yield more than a bushel. Another near a local seed house is also heavily laden with fruit.

Many Tourists

There has been a great influx of tourists to Prince Edward County this week and most places are well filled. The season was not as good as usual during the early part of July, according to resort proprietors, but vacancies may have been accounted for in part by the greatly increased accommodation this year.

Attends Race

Reeve J. C. Cooper left for Detroit last night. He is Canada's representative on the Harmsworth race committee, at the request of Harold Wilson, the challenger. Wilson will race under the colors of Prince Edward Yacht Club in this international event. Many local residents yesterday wired good wishes to Wilson in Detroit.

Exhibition Game

Philadelphia Colored Giants played an exhibition game here Wednesday afternoon. Frank Dyer hurled two-hit ball for Picton Athletics and led the locals to a 2-1 win over the visitors who have won 60 and lost five games on their current road trip. Dyer's single also scored the tying run.

Miss Doris Calnan is visiting Miss June Ridge in Neepawa, Man. The girls have been pen pals for eleven years.

Mother Finds Baby Bitten by Rats

London, Ont., July 29 — (CP) —Mrs. Ernest Parker of nearby Thorndale heard her four-month-old baby boy screaming Thursday and rushed into a bedroom to find his head covered with blood from rat bites. The child was brought to hospital here and was released after treatment.

Peak Travel on Highways Expected Holiday Weekend, Motorists Urged to be Cautious

Vacationists, tourists, holidayers, and motorists out for a week-end drive, are being advised by the Ontario Department of Highways that the coming Civic Holiday week-end will see a record number of motorists on provincial roads, adding to the hazards of driving and increasing the likelihood of accidents.

The year's peak in Ontario's tourist travel from the United States, probably the largest in history, coincides with the year's peak in holiday travel by Ontario people themselves, Highways Minister Doucett points out. Add to these vacationists the crowds that will go on long weekend trips, and the numbers on vacation from factories and places of business and the traffic situation for the coming weekend looms as the heaviest of a heavy season.

Eight persons were killed in traffic accidents on the last major holiday weekend, Dominion Day, and drivers are asked to reduce the risk of fatal accidents to themselves and to others, by exercising greater care on the road, by planning alternative routes and changing the time of departure to avoid congestion. Only foresight and unceasing vigilance can reduce the number of highway fatalities this weekend.

Local CNR officials have stated that no extra trains will be run through this point over the civic holiday weekend.

A few extra sections may be added to one or two trains but they do not expect that traffic will warrant the routing of extra trains.

Bus and motor traffic, however, is expected to reach a new peak over the coming weekend, with tourists and other visitors swelling the total.

Landmark Burned Near Kingston, Loss is $50,000

Kingston, July 29 — (CP) — Fire of unknown origin Thursday night destroyed the Golden Slipper, on Highway No. 2, 10 miles east of here. The damage, according to Harry Rosen, part owner, is about $50,000. Mr. Rosen said the property was owned jointly by his father and himself.

The fire which was first noticed by Helen Rosen, apparently started in the rear of the large frame structure, Mr. Rosen said. He rushed to the scene of the blaze. He tried to put it out with a fire extinguisher but failed. The flames spread quickly. "I rushed out of the building," said he, "and some people who were having a meal did likewise."

No Fire Equipment

Lack of fire fighting equipment resulted in the fire spreading. "We were unable to get any fire fighting equipment from Kingston as there is no agreement between the corporation of the City of Kingston and Pittsburg township for fire fighting equipment to respond to fires in the township," he said.

The fire department from Vimy Barracks responded after about one hour's negotiations between Reeve Colin Woods and the military authorities. Lack of water made the fire department's work difficult. One well was soon emptied and the emergency tanks on the fire engine were also expended.

Linemen from the Gananoque Light, Heat and Power Company responded and cut the electric wires leading from the transformer to the building. For a time it was feared the fire might extend to the hydro lines.

Reeve Woods said it was impossible for him to summon the Kingston fire department. "We have no agreement between the city and the township," he said, "and I am forbidden by resolution to call the Kingston brigade. It took me about an hour to get permission from the military authorities to get the Vimy fire department to respond."

The Golden Slipper has long been known as one of the social centres of the county and a landmark along the highway. The property was owned by Ernie Swaine, and was acquired by the Rosen family about three years ago.

Bag 500 Starlings In Shooting Bee

London, Ont., July 29 — (CP) —Two London men who scoff at new-fangled gas attacks for killing starlings, Thursday night bagged 500 of them with a tried and true method — shooting them.

Leo Mathews and John Eichler told police the had the backing of neighbors when an investigation was made into a complaint registered by a woman that dead birds were cluttering up her yard.

They also had received permission from Chief Earl Knight to shoot the pests, and were gathering up the dead ones in baskets.

Many Applications For US Currency Made in City

While thousands of Americans are spending their vacations in Canadian summer resorts to escape the current heat wave, a record number of Canadians are planning to spend vacations in the United States during the next few weeks.

This was indicated by a local bank employee today who stated that applications for United States currency were never so great as during the past few days.

One local bank employee stated today that he had spent practically the entire morning making out travel permits and "H" forms, permitting travellers to take United States currency out of Canada.

"And this is just one bank in the city," he commented. "The other banks in the city undoubtedly have been just as busy in comparison."

JUDGE ACCUSED IN SHOOTING

An Atlanta, Ga., judge, Robert Carpenter, has been arrested in the shooting of Attorney John Lockwood, counsel for the judge's wife in a divorce suite. Lockwood was shot in his car by the occupant of another car that pulled alongside. The judge was released on $500 bond after hospital authorities said Lockwood was in "fair condition."—Central Press Canadian.

Others higher included Dominion Coal, International Paper, Dominion Steel B, Walkers New, Gatineau Power, Canadian Wire B and Canadian Celanese. Lower in the group were Cockshutt Plow, Cosmos, Distillers Seagrams, Dominion Bridge, Massey Harris, Acadia Atlantic Sugar A.

Pend Oreille, Torbrit Silver, International Uranium and Sherritt Gordon were all lower in a slightly easier base metal list. Quemont was a gainer in the list, adding ⅛. Others higher were Reeves McDonald, up six cents and Osisko. Consolidated Smelters gained ½ in early trading but lost it later.

Golds held steady as gains and losses were about evenly divided. Hollinger was a loser in the senior group, dropping five cents. La Luz, another senior, took a small loss of one cent. Still another loss was chalked up in this group by Wright Hargreaves which dropped 4 cents. Highest in the junior list were Eldona, Frobisher, up nine cents, Negus, the same amount, Kirkland Lake and Giant Yellowknife, a twenty cent gainer.

French Scouts Retrace Course Of Explorers

Sault Ste. Marie, July 29 (CP).—Four French Rover Scouts, retracing the adventurous role of Jesuit Priest Father Marquette and Voyageur Joliet in the discovery of the Mississippi in the 1670's left here today to start the next leg of their freighter-canoe voyage through Lake Michigan.

They left Three Rivers, Que., on May 25, and expect to complete the trip to New Orleans within the next four months.

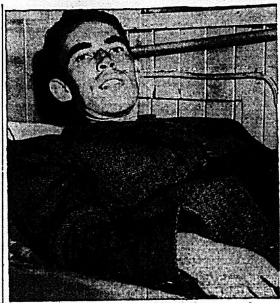
In the past two months they have traversed the St. Lawrence, Ottawa and Mattawa Rivers, Lake Nipissing and northern Lake Huron. The foursome, Jean Razpail, Philippe Andrieu, Jacques Boucharlat, and Yves Korbendau, were guests of both the Michigan Sault Chamber of Commerce and the Canadian Sault Kiwanis Clubs at receptions here. Purpose of their trip is to compile data for lecture tours and books ,and to prepare several motion pictures.

USE HELICOPTER FOR PATROLS

Toronto, July 29 (CP)—A helicopter is to be used for regular patrol of Ontario Hydro Commission transmission lines. Robert Saunders, commission chairman, announced Thursday that the commission bought a helicopter after recent tests proved satisfactory. It was found during the tests that, in 18½ hours' flying time, the helicopter did a job that would have required 600 man-hours of ground patrol.

HOGS

Toronto, July 29—(CP)— Hog prices at Stratford were unchanged this morning. Grade A, delivered, paid $32.85 to farmers and $33 to truckers. At Hull, hogs were unchanged at $33.



PIRATES' VICTIM

Skipper Bob Findlay of Vancouver reported he was bound and gagged by two pirates in the bunk of his fish boat, Alco. He told police the pair robbed him of $3,500 as he lay helpless while the Alco was docked at Rivers Inlet, 180 miles northwest of Vancouver. No trace of the two men has been found.—(CP Photo.)

Motorists Ignored Parking Tickets, Pay Extra Fines

[illegible] IGNORED

Local motorists who failed to recognize parking tickets placed on windshields for overtime parking paid off in local police court today with no less than ten drivers handing over $3.50 instead of the $1 that would have squared accounts at the time the ticket was issued.

Ten such motorists paid the $3.50 each rather than put in a personal appearance at police court, while five others who failed to answer their summons will pay additional costs of personal service.

Two motorists paid $5 each for failure to observe city "stop" signs.

Allan Cameron, Carrying Place, appeared on a charge of drunk driving with Magistrate T. Y. Wills reserving judgment until August 5th.

A charge against a local resident of failure to file an income tax return was also included on the morning court docket.

Jack Williams Given High Post In Excise Duty

Ottawa, July 29—The Minister of National Revenue, Dr. McCann, announced today that the Civil Service Commission has approved the promotion of John K. Williams to the post of Assistant Director of Excise Duty at Ottawa.

Mr. Williams has been with the Revenue Department for twenty-four years and is now District Inspector of Excise Duty with headquarters in Kitchener, Ont. His promotion becomes effective October 1st.

As assistant director of excise duty Mr. Williams will succeed S. D. Yeo who was recently promoted from Assistant Director to Director of Excise Duty.

Educated at Oakville

Mr. Williams, 48, received his education in Oakville, Ontario and Toronto and then moved to Belleville with the C.N.R. He joined the Department of National Revenue in the latter city as a Customs Excise Examiner in 1925.

His new duties will include the supervision of special investigations, repsonsibility for the inspection of distilleries in Ontario, Quebec and the Maritimes and direction of the Branch in the absence of the Director.

Mr. Williams' twenty-four year association with the department includes periods in Niagara Falls and Toronto as well as Kitchener and Belleville and service in a number of progressively responsible capacities.

He was selected for the post of assistant director of excise duty through promotion competition.

Veteran baseball fans of the city and district will recall Mr. Williams. He played with former Belleville Central Ontario Baseball League in the good old days when the district produced the best senior teams in Ontario. He was affectionately dubbed "Crock" by his team-mates and fandom as a whole. His wife is the former Margaret (Puss) Thompson of this city.

SENT UP FOR TRIAL

Crystal Beach, Ont., — July 29 —(CP) — Victor Russo, 17, of Buffalo, was committed for trial today on a charge of assaulting a 17-year-old Buffalo laundress in a summer cottage at this resort 10 miles west of Fort Erie.

The girl told police she met the youth on the beach and accompanied him to his cottage. There she said the youth and five other companions, believed to be from Buffalo, attacked her.

The identity of the other youths has not been established.

Before the letters SOS were adopted generally as a distress signal at sea, the letters CDQ were used.

COURT TAKES

Levoy answered: "My mother-in-law says I killed her working in the field with me—I just couldn't keep that woman in the house."

"And since then," said Magistrate Woodrow, "you've got yourself another wife. You married her in Czechoslovakia and left her there?"

Levoy said he was trying to get a divorce because of difficulties in bringing his wife to Canada.

On the charge of wounding his daughter, Levoy pleaded not guilty and claimed he "slipped" on a hay wagon July 5 and his pitchfork struck his daughter accidentally. He admitted that he made no effort to give the girl medical attention.

"You are not human—not even human," declared Magistrate Woodrow.

Provincial Police Cpl. R. J. Whiting said that later Levoy confessed to him that he had thrown the pitchfork at the girl's back but said he was "very sorry" about it. At the time, Levoy said, he was "mad" at his daughter.

SPIRIT OF FREEDOM

People from a number of lands in Eastern Europe have given a demonstration these past few months, they have shown their fearlessness of danger and the love of freedom for themselves and their families. Some have crossed in small boats the Atlantic, encouraged by the spirit within them to endure all for liberty's sake.

Their coming to Canada is a proof of their high faith in the Canadian people, one of the best evidences of their worth as citizens-to-be of the Dominion.

They took chances with the mighty deep and this they have done because having once felt the spirit of liberty they cannot submit to having their lives dominated by oppression.

Now more of those people who risked passage in a small vessel will be allowed to remain in this country. The tribute they paid us in taking the chance against the seas in their frail craft stamps them as heroic and as people with the fire of freedom in their veins.

It is no wonder that the New World has shown so much enterprise and has so developed the principle of freedom with all the long lists of those who decade after decade and generation after generation have given up their homes in other lands, emigrating to the West, to Canada and the United States and other New World nations.

DREADFUL AWAKENING

Jennie Lee, member of the British Parliament and wife of Health Minister Aneurin Bevan did the rest of us, if not her country, an unintentional service recently. She made a revealing speech on the exchange crisis.

This 44-year-old woman, long an outspoken Socialist left-winger, provided us with a vivid picture of the Socialist mentality.

According to Miss Lee, or Mrs. Bevan, the cause of Britain's present trouble is the United States. It was the absence of a welfare state in America that was creating the difficulty. If U. S. wages were higher, and social services were broader, the crisis wouldn't have happened.

This same sort of thing is being trumpeted by the New Statesman and Nation which recently declared:

"The difficulties in which we (the British) find ourselves are primarily due to the wilfulness of Congress. It is its abject failure to counter the American slump which is the prime cause of our export difficulties and the drain on our gold reserves . . . Congress solemnly pledged itself not to adopt policies which lead to unemployment. This pledge has been violated time after time . . . Now by seeking to cut allocations for foreign spending and by economizing on the stockpiling of raw materials, it is exporting the American slump to Europe.

We can't imagine that this tune from Jennie Lee or the New Statesman is likely to help Britain's cause in America, where the taxpayers are getting pretty tired of "aid to Europe" and where isolationist sentiment is heard more and more frequently.

To us both Miss Lee and the New Statesman talk like the zanier characters of Alice in Wonderland. Their view of the crisis sounds as if it came from people who habitually stand on their heads.

That sort of stuff should be the best that prominent spokesmen for British Socialism have to offer in the present emergency is just appalling. Miss Lee is merely expressing a view widely held in Britain. That's one reason why the recent Commonwealth talks were so discouraging.

The sickness of mind which believes there is a bottomless pool of wealth from which all can draw while they do less work and get more pay is Britain's curse.

The welfare of our free world, and of Canada especially, is very dependent on British recovery.

But helping Britain would be more pleasant if we saw signs that the British masses were determined to help themselves.

What a dreadful awakening awaits them when the time comes, as it inevitably will, that they can no longer avoid facing up to realities and pretending that they don't exist.—(From the Financial Post.)

TIME-RESISTANT PLATES

We notice that many American states have adopted the practice of putting a small metal clip, stamped with the number of the current year, on their licence plates, instead of replacing a complete set of plates every year, comments the Brockville Recorder and Times. This must be an economical measure, and one that could well be copied by the Province of Ontario, or isn't Queen's Park interested in economy?

UNFORTUNATE

When a poor man passes by,
Though in silence, wish him well.
None so wise the how and why
Of misfortune's blows to tell.

Tattered though his garments be,
Broken though his spirit seems,
There was once a time when he Walked the world with golden dreams.

Never ask to understand
Why and how so bleak his state.
Stretch to him a helping hand,
Gentler be to him than fate.

TODAY'S TALK

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

ON COLLECTING

For many years I have been a modest collector of etchings, rare books of authors that have had a special appeal to my literary taste, and of a few works of art that have intrigued me. This has added greatly to my happiness and, I think, efficiency as a human being. But I still cling to the fact that the collecting of friends outweighs all else!

There was a time in early Roman history when the affluent collected slaves. They kept slave establishments of painters, gem-cutters, grammarians, scribes, philosophers, and the like, just as we moderns collect what I have noted as one of my jobs. I am glad that such collecting as that of the Romans is outdated. We have learned a little over the centuries, but not enough to totally banish all slavery among human beings. No human being was ever born to be a slave in any shape or manner.

I am now fascinated in the reading of William Beebe's book about his collection of insects and animals—not to destroy them, but to study them and to reveal the beauty about them, their habits and way of life. He has been about it for half a century and has revealed unknown facts that are amazing. Edwin Way Teale is doing the same, concentrating on insects and birds. No man has ever lived long enough to learn all about the endless varieties of birds and animals that populate this magic earth.

These unpretentious talks, from day to day, were really initiated to collect ideas that I have endeavored to pass along to such readers as would be interested and, I hope, helped and inspired. I have continued to borrow from others, to pass along their discoveries and thought. Few, if any of us, are originators. I come 'across the thought of today in writings that were set down a thousand and more years ago.

Human nature has always been the same. We can only collect the best out of the best, and try to make it our own—try to make it serve us to some high purpose. I am always inspired by a fine thought that someone else has stated better than I am able to state it.

Communism Originally Had Beneficent Aims

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

State Secretary Dean Acheson made a statement Thursday about communism which is likely to cause puzzlement among some intellectuals who have been viewing the red ism as a Utopian political ideal.

In making a plea before the House of Representatives Foreign Affairs Committee for approval of the administration European arms program, the United States secretary pointed out that "throughout this struggle there has been in existence behind the iron curtain the greatest peacetime combination of military forces the world has ever known". Then a little later he said:

"The fact is that the appeal of international communism is not, contrary to the self-serving assertions of the Soviets, an appeal to the minds of men. International communism has made its gain in Europe not by any intellectual or spiritual attractions but by the threat that derives from the existence of large forces, and the ruthless application of force wherever this has been necessary to achieve its objectives."

A Definition

That strikes me as calling for a definition of "communism." The original communism of generations past was a beneficent ideology abolishing private property and establishing a social order in which it was one for all and all for one.

However, by the beginning of this century communism had been split into two sections — the Bolshevists, who were the majority, and the Menshevists, who were the minority. The Bolshevists, led by Lenin, adopted the doctrine of direct action. They held that the rule of the proletariat could only be achieved by actual revolution and bloodshed. This was exemplified in their successful revolution of 1917 when the Czar was overthrown and "liquidated" with his immediate family.

Since then the Bolshevists have been in power in Moscow, first under Lenin and for the past quarter century under Stalin. Direct action and strong arm methods have prevailed.

Obviously international communism does appeal to the minds of some men. It appeals to those who believe in Bolshevism—progress by force. However, all students of the isms should study the distinction between old - time communism and Bolshevism, and understand that they are two distinct breeds which in vital aspects are the antitheses of each other.

London to Get Diesel-Electric Locomotive Plant

Toronto, July 29 (CP)—A new diesel-electric locomotive plant, costing an estimated $5,000,000 is to be built at London, Ont. The large-scale production will provide what officials term "a tremendous step forward for Canadian railroads."

Construction of the 226,000 square-foot plant, to start immediately, was announced Thursday in Detroit by C. E. Wilson, president of the General Motors Corporation. The plant will employ about 1,000 persons.

Officials said options had been approved covering a 210-acre tract of land on the eastern outskirts of London, in the vicinity of Crumlin. The plant will have a capacity of one diesel locomotive a day and will construct locomotives for all classes of railway service.

Commenting on the announcement, Planning Minister Griesinger of Ontario said Thursday night:

"......the new diesel locomotive industry will mean new and varied employment for the skills of our people and thousands of dollars a year in order to hundreds of Ontario companies ...... More than 20 municipalities will benefit by work for their local industries. For instance, radiators will come from one part of the province, steel from another, and so on."

He added that gradual conversion by railways from steam locomotives to diesel power is opening a tremendous market for Canadian oil and should lead to the saving of millions of dollars annually in coal imports.

RELIEF FOR PERSISTENT HICCUP

Hiccough or hiccup is spasmodic contraction of the diaphragm and coincident closure of the vocal cords. The sudden intake of air resulting from the contraction of the diaphragm—perhaps a tablespoonful of air would be scarcely noticeable if the vocal cords did not contract spasmodically at the same time. It is the participation of the vocal cords in the act that makes hiccup so audible and so impressive.

In most instances hiccup requires no treatment. In cases of persistent hiccup any d.f. can and very likely will tell you of an unfailing remedy, preferably a peculiar or mysterious one. Lest any reader feel impelled to enlighten me about his or her sure cure, I give fair notice that I shall not read, much less comment on any such reports readers may send in.

I'll mention just one or two simple remedies that are not only rational but effective in a good many cases. First, rebreathing: Hold the mouth of a 5-pound paper sack closely around nose and mouth and breath into it and rebreathe the air several times. This is a simple way to take carbon dioxide inhalations. News item tells about a man who drove 300 miles to a hospital, after he had tried all the remedies suggested by Tom, Dick and Harry and continued hiccuping for four days without rest. At the hospital he received inhalations of carbon dioxide mixed with air and got relief within a few minutes, and the hiccup did not return. The interesting part of it is that the patient is a physician. He should have known better.

The second remedy I suggest is particularly for those cases of persistent hiccup where the usual procedures prove ineffective and continuance of the paroxysms may exhaust the patient. The remedy is quinidine (not quinine), which may be given by mouth but is best given by intramuscular injection — nine grains of quinidine sulfate the first dose and the same dose at hourly intervals for three doses.

Drs. Samuel Bellett and Carl S. Nadler found that this treatment stops the hiccup or at least moderates the trouble materially in the course of two hours (The Am. Jour. Med. Sciences, Dec., '48) It proved apparently effectual in stopping the hiccup in 6 cases, was partially successful in 2 cases and failed in 1 case.

Quinidine is like quinine in most of its actions. It is a cinchona alkaloid composed of the same elements as quinine but of different structure. It is generally used to regulate such heart disturbances as auricular fibrillation, (great irregularity of heart beat and pulse), auricular flutter, heart block, bradycardia (abnormally slow heart beat or pulse rate of less than 60) or tachycardia (abnormally rapid heart beat or pulse rate of more than 100). Quinidine restores the control of the normal pacemaker in most of these irregularities or disturbances of rhythm, but it acts only two or three hours, so four to six doses a day are necessary to maintain its effect.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Complexion Cleared Up

I am happy to report that my daughter, 15, started taking vitamin A as recommended in your fine pamphlet on Acne, and after a month or so her complexion cleared up nicely, and she has continued taking 1 capsule a day for nearly a year, and she thinks it keeps her complexion clear. (Mrs. F. D. W.)

Answer—Any reader who asks for it in writing and incloses stamped self addressed envelope may have the pamphlet on Acne—Blackheads and Pimples. Vitamin A is more likely to be effective where there are obstinate indurated or hardened papules.

Blue Baby

What is a "blue baby"? What is the cause? How does a dog come into the picture? (Mrs. M. S.)

Answer—"Blue" baby is one born with Cyanosis (bluish or purplish color, from faulty oxygenation of the blood). This may be due to weakness, feeble breathing, failure of the lungs to expand as they normally do with the first vigorous crying of the newborn. In some instances it is due to defect of development of the heart. In my case a dog has as much to do with it as the man in the moon.

Who Cares?

For dry air extraordinary cures of crippling arthritis come to Victorville. I've seen former cripples doing fine work nd I'm much better after 6 months. (K. I.)

Answer—The air almost anywhere in southern California, Arizona or New Mexico is as dry as it is in the Mojave desert. Send twenty-five cents and stamped self addressed envelope for booklet The Ills Called Rheumatism.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

SO KEEP ON PUSHING

As Pierre and Marie Curie struggled to separate radium from the materials with which they worked, their task seemed almost hopeless. Experiment followed experiment without success, and when at last the number of these experiments had mounted into the hundreds, Pierre was ready to quit. But Marie was of a different spirit. She maintained that though they search all their lives and in the end fail of their goal, they would nevertheless point a way which others at last would follow to triumph.

Everyone of course knows the end of the story. The day came when the world resounded with praise for these two courageous and persistent souls. We can only faintly glimpse the possibilities of their triumph, but the fact that radium is now used so largely in medical science indicates what great humanitarians Pierre and Marie Curie were.

Our achievements may not be great, but usually they are much greater than we think they are. Our little triumphs have ramifications which go out and touch the lives of many. And every time we persist is some duty, the sum total of the world's goodness has a helpful increment added thereto.

Life does not have to be spectacular to be significant; it need only be sincere and dutiful.

THE PACKSACK

OF GREGORY CLARK

There used to be a common saying—"Live and Learn".

You do not hear it so often, in recent years. It belonged to a former time when it was easy to stay alive and learn. The new proverb should be — "Die and learn."

Our grandparents, when anything went wrong, consoled themselves with saying "Live and learn." If a pie went soggy, if the bread dough did not rise, if a neighbor's boy went astray, if a horse put its foot in a groundhog hole, live and learn was the invariable comment.

But within the space of about twenty years, life has become rough, tough and nasty. Experience no longer is a safe and sound teacher. One experience of a motor car accident, and there may be nothing more to learn. One experience with a farm tractor, a factory machine, any of the multivarious engines and devices which have been introduced within the lifetime of a boy of twenty, may leave the learner maimed or dead.

The old men, the bankers and industrialists who today so skilfully move multitudes of men and women this way and that amidst the intricate mechanized world of their fashioning, learned by living. They had plenty of time to learn the easy way, which is by living. Any mistakes they made, in their upward climb to success, did not cost them their lives or limbs. To be a successful man, you have to be either venturesome or determined. Thirty years ago, you could be born without risking your neck. The venturesome and determined youth of today has a thousand hazards to play with where his predecessor had one. The bankers and industrialists of tomorrow will be either fortunate veterans of a hundred mishaps; or else were born and raised far back from the railroads, and were grown up before they entered the mechanized world. For "Die and learn" is the challenge that confronts the rising generation on every hand.

Sunday School Lesson of the Week

Losing God Among the Gadgets

By ROY L. SMITH

Modern man is apt to think he has filled life because he has crowded it, but he is in a very grave danger of losing God among the gadgets he has made.

It was easy for the ancients and our fathers to have a sense of kinship which God has made. But modern man, by various devices, has set himself apart. Life for him is artificial in so many aspects. As a consequence it is difficult for him to feel the divine and the supernatural.

Gadgets Between Man and God

Men who lived in the Old Testament world and saw God on every hand lived close to nature. When they were thirsty they found some clear flowing spring, stooped down and drank their fill. When they arose refreshed they offered their thanks to the God who gave them the spring.

When modern men are thirsty they go to a faucet, give it a turn or a little pressure, and artificially chilled water squirts up in a little stream from a chromium plated tube. When they have drunk their fill, they go back to their lath, drill-press, or desk without no thought whatever except possibly some passing comment within their own mind concerning the plumber and his union or the time clock.

The psalmist looked to God and the skies for relief from the heat, or for the rain which would nourish his crop; the modern factory and the boss' secretary think in terms of air conditioning and legislation from Washington.

All this has the effect of building up a barrier between man and God. Very seldom in the course of the day is one reminded of his immediate dependance upon a kindly Providence, of the generosity of a Heavenly Father, or even of his own dignity as one created in the image of God.

We Have Exiled Fear

In the face of every discomfort we have an easy retort: "The scientists will work that out in time." And it is true that they have succeeded in robbing life of its fears in a long list of instances.

The Sunday School lesson for July 31: "Psalms of Trust," Psalms 34; 37; 46; 91; 138:3 7a; 143:8.

Scientific agriculture, the improvement of seeds, mechanization, and a dozen other processes have well-nigh banished the fear of famine. Modern man, looking to the laboratories and the researchers, finds it just a little difficult to understand the ancients who looked to God. Incidentally, there is just a little disposition to hold those same ancients in contempt.

In similar fashion we have conquered one disease after another so that good health is credited to the city health department rather than to any divinity. We rest our hope in vitamins rather than in Saviors or Redeemers.

God Was Real to our Fathers...

To the ancient psalmist it was a part of life itself to trust in God, to declare that trust in the most positive terms, to rest all of one's personal problems back on faith. The God who provided the water in the cool spring was so very near and so very real. The sight of rich harvests was an assurance of the goodness of God. The glow of health was proof of the indwelling of God.

The Hebrew psalms are a glorious collection of confident declarations of consistent and continuing faith which had the effect of ennobling life and producing serenity, peace, and poise. Modern life, with all its physiatric talk about acheiving perfect relaxation and peace of mind, is an effort to get back to the spiritual state of a psalmist. The ancients seem to have had something the moderns have lost and which they miss very badly.

The beginning of mental health is a confident attitude toward life a willingness to go out and meet each day as if it were an opportunity and a blessed privelege. Without such confidence we become neurotics, psychopaths, and people with aberrations.

Good religion which insists upon seeing God even in scientific agricultural methods and psychological principles, which reminds us constantly of the divine force that is back of all our scientific adventuring, and which insists upon pointing out God amid the molecules is only the modern descendant of the ancient faith-full.

Cleveland (AP)—An east-side barber is being sued for $25,000 on charges he put a crick in the neck of a n18-month old baby.

A petition says the child, David Nelson, now has his head at a 30-degree angle and is unable to move it right or left.

The action was filed by the baby's father, Edward Nelson, against Charles Sparino. While giving the baby his first haircut on June 24, the suit alleges, Sparino twisted the child's head.

Los Angeles (AP)—Singer Marjorie Hughes, daughter of bandleader-pianist Frankie Carle, married a piano player.

Spaulding Parke Lake was restocked last week for Thursday's "Huck Finn Day" fishing feature, open to kids up to 16 years of age.

Then head-scratching sponsors resmembered. Three grownup anglers—fishing in the lake contrary to posted notices—fled from police shortly after the restocking.

Miami Beach, Fla. (AP)—Carol Kreig was swimming in the ocean Thursday when something big, black and slimy moved alongside her.

Soon a police squad car arrived, siren howling. Two patrolmen went on the double to investigate.

One snorted.

"That's no monster," he announced. "It's just an old automobile tire."

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

This Man is Either a Would-Be Joker or a Complete Cad

I have juts received a letter from a man who tells me that this is his second request for advice on the same problem.

"Please answer," he says.

Apparently he failed to see the answer that I made in this column several weeks ago, and therefore I am going to repeat what I said at that time for two reasons.

The first of these reasons is because I have a definite suspicion that his letter may be a hoax, and I would like him to know I suspect that.

The second reason is that if the letter is not a hoax, then he is one of the most contemptible characters who has ever written me and I would like to tell him that, too.

Here is his second letter, omitting the part in which he referred to the first.

"I married again after my wife died, leaving two children. (Ed. Note: In his previous letter he said his wife left three children.) My second wife was healthy when I married her three years ago. (Ed. Note: In his other letter he said he had been married to this second wife for four years.) Now she is sick. I think my children, having lost their own mother, should at least have a healthy step-mother. She is very cranky now, and cannot work, and will get worse. My sister says I could get plenty of other women who would marry me and that I should take my wife to court before she gets worse. What shall I do? (Ed. Note: In his previous letter he said that he had met another woman and would like to divorce his present wife so he could marry her.)

I am now going to repeat exactly what I told this man before.

My doubt about the sincerity of this letterwritter—and the discrepancies in the second letter increase my suspicions—stems from my reluctance to believe that any man could be so contemptible as the letter makes him out to be.

Having persuaded one woman to take on the responsibility of bringing up the three children of another woman, this man, if his letter is taken to be true, now wants to throw her over after four years of marriage because she is ill. In other words, it appears that he was perfectly willing to put on her shoulders the burden of his children, with all the attendant possibilities of illness among them and other problems that might arise, but the minute she becomes something of a problem to him, he wants to get rid of her.

What a fine example to set his children! Instead of showing that a man cherishes and is loyal to his wife when trouble arises, he puts before them a shocking picture of a husband who has no idea whatever of martial loyalty. If his children grow up with the idea that marriage is something to be faithful to only so long as things go to one's liking, it will be nobody's fault but his own. Perhaps, even, that is the philosophy he wishes to pass on to them.

By his own admission, this wife has done nothing for which he could bring a divorce suit against her. All he can think of to do, therefore, is to pick a quarrel with her and take her to court, an idea so ludicrous that it could not possibly be taken seriously—anothetr thing that seems to stamp the letter as the work of one who fancies himself a funny man.

If this man has a shred of decency in him—always provided there really is a man in these actual circumstances—he will face the situation squarely and see what can be done to work it out. And if the letter is simply a hoax, I would feel that the person who wrote it must have in himself something of the characteristics of the man he describes.

Thirst-Quenchers For Warm Days

Here's to August and a long month of soft warm days. That urge to relax in a comfortable lawn chair or sink into an inviting hammock is almost irresistable. A trayload of cool, frosty glasses is always in order for between - meal refreshment and casual entertaining.

Tinkling glasses of well - iced fruit drinks are true thirst-quenchers, whether made with one or with several fruit juices combined. Almost any combination and almost any proportion is good if well chilled. Tall glasses of fruit punch will clink and sparkle with colored ice cubes. Rhubarb, raspberry, grape and plum juices are wonderful colors for ice cubes and also add flavor as they melt. A few drops of green food coloring added to plain water will supply a trayful of frosty, green ice cubes. Garnishes of mint leaves, fresh berries or paper - thin slices of lemon are a pretty touch with fruit drinks. Tumblers can be given party dress by dipping the rims in egg white and then in sugar.

Prepare Sugar Syrup.

For convenience in sweetening cold beverages, make up a jar of light sugar syrup. One cup of sugar and two cups of water make about two and one half cups of syrup. This thin syrup sweetens in a jiffy and avoids the difficulty and waste of undissolved sugar crystals in the bottom of glasses or serving pitcher.

Milk drinks help to solve the problem of getting plenty of milk into the diet of both children and adults. Color and added flavor always appeal, particularly to the junior members of the family. Every child loves milk shakes so they are delighted to make their own. A cup of milk and two tablespoons of flavored fruit or cocoa syrup poured into a pint sealer, sealed tightly then shaken well makes a delicious frothy drink. Pouring it into the glass is half the fun. If straws are provided, they add much to the child's pleasure.

The home economists of the Consumer Section, Dominion Department of Agriculture, suggest these recipes for delicious and chilly refreshments.

Grape Mint Cooler

1 tablespoon finely chopped mint leaves
1 cup boiling water
2 tablespoons sugar
2 cups grape juice
2 cups gingerale
Cracked ice.

Pour boiling water over chopped mint leaves, add sugar and let stand one hour. Strain, add grape juice and chill. Just before serving, add gingerale and pour over cracked ice. Garnish with a sprig of fresh mint. Yield: six servings.

Raspberry Vinegar

1 quart box raspberries —(4 cups
2½ cups cider vinegar
Sugar

Place berries in a bowl, cover with vinegar and let stand about 24 hours. Crush, strain and measure juice. Add equal quantity of sugar, bring to boil and boil 10 minutes. Bottle while hot. Yield: 2½ cups.

Serve diluted with cold water to taste and pour over crushed ice in tall glasses. Yield: 18 servings.

Currant Flip

1 quart box red currants —(4 cups
Water
1/4 cup sugar
3 egg yolks
Gingerale

Wash currants, stem and measure. Add one half cup water for each cup currants. Bring to boil and boil, covered, 15 minutes. Crush and strain through a moistened jelly bag. Add sugar to juice, reheat to boiling point. Chill. Stir one cup juice into three well-beaten egg yolks. Pour into six tall glasses over cracked ice. Fill glasses with gingerale and serve at once. Yield: six servings.

Fashion Flashes

SO POPULAR that it is almost a uniform, is the frock that is slim of bodice, with a roll collar, cuffed sleeves, slim waist and fullish skirt with pockets. Nice in this silks and cottons for Spring and Summer, it will be seen, come Autumn, in thin wools and heavy tie silks.

PENTHOUSE OR PATIO makes a nice background for the pretty cotton frock. Persian-printed cotton on a deep red background is used for a handsome patio frock. It has a deep oval neckline—adjustable to on or off-shoulder line — tiny sleeves and a full ankle-length skirt.

BIGGER THAN EVER is the word on ribbon-knit dresses, both of the hand-loomed and hand-knitted variety. In the latter class, expensive but worth it, is an exquisite one-piece dress made of very narrow pure silk ribbon knitted in a new non-stretchable stitch. Available in exquisite colors in a soft, shirtwaist casual, the dress weighs less than one pound, and is a wonder for the traveler.

GLITTER touches mark many of the new hats. Designed for wear with dressy but informal evening suits is a black velvet cloche with a lariat of pearl beads that may be wound around the crown or worn dangling.

CLOSER THAN EVER is the good word on matchmates. Not only the same fabric, such as jersey, gets together, but there are matchmates that combine wool jersey and tweed, worsted and surah in the same colors and color combinations. A flecked Donegal type tweed skirt—beige with nubs in rose, green and orange—is worn with a rayon surah blouse of exactly the same color scheme.

Frenchmen Rule Out Patterned Material

Vancouver — (CP) — Frenchmen may be volatile in politics but in dress they're conservative.

Paul Roederer, Paris textile wholesaler here on a visit, says you can't catch a Frenchman in a flowered swim suit.

"American men may fall for that sort of thing, but we don't," Mr. Roederer said.

Paris business men stick to plain worsted with no design in their suiting, he added. "This is probably a passing fancy, but we're certainly not using stripes or any pattern."

Hard tweeds that last forever are out. Those used sparingly for sports must be soft as silk.

But Frenchmen at resorts branch out into light pastels, said Mr. Roederer. They bounce right back into conservative blues and greys when they return to Paris.

Fashion Industries Plan Buyers' Club

London (CP)—To put London "in the forefront of the fashion world," a Fashion Industries Club is to be set up in Mayfair.

It will aim at entertaining foreign buyers and providing them with a "nation-wide network of contacts" in British fashion production.

"Though the club has the moral support of the government, it will be run as a private enterprise by representatives of leading textile and fashion industries," said secretary Hugh Robinson.

If we are to encourage foreign buyers, we must receive them in the right way. The club will not try to compete with hotels, but will welcome visitors in attractive surroundings, offer them good food and immediate information on any merchandise that interests them."

Membership will be open to anyone connected with Britain's fashion trade. There will be six entertainment rooms and a secretariat where guests and members will be able to deal with correspondence.

Chairman of the club is Lord Hollenden. Directors include Norman Hartnell, Viscount Templetown and Lord Barnby.

WISH FULFILLED

London — (CP) — Viscount Nuffield, automobile magnate, who recently gave £250,000 to the Royal College of Surgeons, was addmitted to the Honorary Fellowship of the College. He told them: "When I was a boy I wanted to be a surgeon."

TIME TO GET BUSY MAKING JAM AND JELLY

For Quick, Easy Sure Results Take Your Choice of CERTO or "CERTO" Crystals

CERTO
THIS IS YOUR CERTO RECIPE BOOKLET
Look for Tested Recipes under the label

Jam and jelly-making need not be a chore. The sensible, modern way to do it is with the help of CERTO or "CERTO" Crystals. Both are fruit pectin—the natural substance in fruit that makes jams "jam" and jellies "jell" — extracted and concentrated for efficient jam and jelly making. The name "Certo" is a trade-mark.

Please yourself which you choose . . . some prefer the liquid — some the crystals. Each ends guesswork and tedious long-boiling. Each gives sure results if you follow the instructions exactly.

Why CERTO Fruit Pectin or "CERTO" Crystals Make Better Jams and Jellies ...Easier...Quicker

1. VERY SHORT BOIL. When you use CERTO or "CERTO" Crystals you need only a ONE-MINUTE full, rolling boil for both jams and jellies. Such a saving of time and work!
2. MORE JAM OR JELLY. Very little juice has time to boil away as it does in old-fashioned, long-boiling. You get up to 50% more jam or jelly from the same amount of fruit.
3. FRESH-FRUIT TASTE . . . COLOUR. The lovely taste and colour of the fresh fruit stay in your jams and jellies because the boil is too short to spoil the one or dull the other.
4. NO GUESSWORK. With either CERTO or "CERTO" Crystals you get tested recipes — a different one for each fruit. Follow them exactly and you'll have no failures.

Shoes Buried 46 Years Found Well Preserved

Cranbrooks, B.C., July 28 — (CP)—Dozens of men's canvas shoes in good condition, buried by the Frank slide in 1903, have been uncovered by a power shovel loading rock from the slide onto railway cars. The shoes were in a carton, and only those under the stove-in top were damaged.

The rock was being loaded for ballast on railway right-of-ways. The Frank slide occurred April 29, 1903. A 70-million-ton slab of limestone crashed down the side of Turtle Mountain burying the town of Frank and 66 persons.

Several years ago a baby's crib was found and identified by some of the survivors. Bones of victims were found when a road was blasted through the rock.

Bill Kerr Leads Second Round Millar Golf Cup

Toronto, July 29 (CP)—Stocky, dark-haired Bill Kerr of Montreal today headed a field of 16 Ontario and Quebec golfers into the third round in the hunt for the Millar Cup and its first-prize pot of some $700.

The highly-rated Montreal Beaconsfield shotsmith, today was scheduled to meet Gord Brydson of Mississauga in the match-play round.

Defending champion Stan Horne of Montreal moved off against Hugh Borthwick of Toronto. A potent Ontario golfer, Bobby Gray of Scarboro, teed off with Dick Borthwick of Toronto in the first flight today.

Other survivors of Thursday's second-round match included five from Toronto, two from Hamilton and one each from London, Peterborough and Niagara Falls.

Kerr moved into the third round by virtue of a 2 and 1 victory over Lloyd Tucker of Kitchener Rockaway Thursday while Horne disposed of Joe Noble of Thornhill two up in the close second-round battle.

The lanky-easy-going Gray had little trouble as he registered a 4 and 3 win against Bob Cunningham of Toronto St. Andrews while Dick Borthwick defeated Les Franks of Islington 2 and 1.

Jules Huot, of Quebec a pre-match favorite, was ousted in the first round Thursday by Hal Butler of Thornhill, 3 and 1.

Second-round play produced three extra-hole matches, one of which went to the 23rd hole before a winner was declared. In that test, Jim Johnstone of Toronto Rosedale defeated Gordon Delaat of Weston, with a birdie on the final hole.

The pair came to the 18th all even. Each parred the 19th, birdied the 20th and parred on the 21st and 22nd holes before Johnstone clinched the match.

Redwings' Pitcher One of Toughest In Int. League

(By The Associated Press)

George Copeland is one of the toughest pitchers to hit in the International League and the Rochester Red Wing righthander would be one of the loop's headliners if his control was sharper.

Copeland, a curve-balling cutie, has won nine games for the red-hot Red Wings. Two of his triumphs were two-hit shutouts and one was a three-hit whitewash.

The 26-year-old Red Wing pitcher turned in his third two-hitter of the season Thursday night, turning back the Syracuse Chiefs 6-3 in the first game of a doubleheader.

Copeland lost his shutout in the sixth inning when Dutch Mele followed two walks with a home run. Copeland walked six Chiefs during the game to boost his free-ticket total to 107 in 10? innings.

The Red Wings solved Jim Prendergast for 11 hits with catcher Jim Bucha pacing the attack, driving in four runs on a triple and pair of singles.

Rochester also won the nightcap, 8-6. The double triumphs boosted the Wings to within two games of the league-leading Buffalo Bisons, who were humbled 10-0 by Jersey City Giants.

Erv Dusak held the Chiefs hitless and runless going into the sixth inning when he gave up six runs on three hits and four walks. Eddie Blake relieved and blanked the Chiefs on one hit the rest of the way to save Dusak's ninth victory.

Red Hardy blanked the Bisons on three singles as the Giants slammed Clem Hausmann and Jake Wade for 16 hits including a home run by Jack Lohrke.

Montreal Royals outlasted Newark Bears 8-6 in 11 innings. A walk, triple by Chuck Connors and double by Kermit Wahl turned the tide in favor of the Royals.

Dan Bankhead went the distance for the Royals, granting 13 hits and fanning 13 for his 11th. Victory.

Toronto and Baltimore were idle.

Golf 'Bridesmaid', 'Giant-Killer' Battle Today

(By W. R. WHEATLEY)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Riverside Golf and Country Club, Saint John, N.B., July 29—(CP)—A 16-year-old Vancouver boy took on a man's size job today in the semi-finals of the Canadian Amateur Golf Championship.

It was the golfing thrill of a lifetime for Laurie Roland, who wasn't at all over-awed at the prospect of meeting Dick Chapman of Osterville, Mass., a former United States Amateur Champion.

In the other half of the draw a couple of old buddies got together for an argument that has gone on for many a tournament but never reached the semi-final stage of the Canadian Amateur.

Phil Farley of Toronto, losing finalist 12 years ago, met Tommy Riddell of Montreal, whose furthest progress in the Amateur has been the quarter-final.

Riddell has been the giant-killer of this tournament, whose five rounds have produced a lot of remarkable goings-on.

Tommy blasted defending champion Frank Stranahan of Toledo on Wednesday and Thursday eliminated Bill Mawhinney of Vancouver, considered by the golf-wise Canada's outstanding bid for the 1949 title.

Farley Squeezes Through

Farley, favored over Allan Boes of Winnipeg in Thursday's quarter-final, just squeezed through to a one-up victory.

Then came young Roland, a high school student at the Lord Byng school in Vancouver, with a two-up win over Eddie Crowell of Halifax. That was the same margin by which Riddell got by Mawhinney.

Mawhinney was unfortunate in spotting Riddell to two holes at the start, and that was enough for the chubby Montreal Beaconsfield player and Quebec Amateur Champion. He kept Mawhinney fighting from behind, never able to get in front.

Farley could never get in front of Boes until the 17th. He laid the Manitoba champion four stymies two on each nine, and then once in the lead put on a grand stand finish with a sensational pitch shot.

From the edge of a trap Farley pitched to within two inches of the cup.

Chapman, beset with a cold putter and fighting stymies laid by Mike Pidlaski of Winnipeg, struggled through to a 2 and 1 victory.

Eddie Crowell and young Roland each won two holes on the first nine. From there on the Vancouver boy took charge of the match. He won the 10th and 12th, lost the 17th when he overshot the green with his approach but won the 18th when Crowell's tee shot caught a sand trap.

Rainy Weather Dulls Junior Tennis Tourney

By H. DENT HODGSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, July 29 (CP)—A half-dozen youngsters from the Maritimes have served notice that the Canadian tennis world will be hearing a lot more from the Atlantic Coast in the future.

While rainy weather dampened the clay courts of the Rideau Lawn Tennis Club and slowed matches of the Canadian junior tennis lawn tournament, the group, in an interview, talked over east coast tennis problems.

Members of the first Maritime delegation of juniors ever to attend a Canadian championship tournament, they've made a good all-round impression here this week. They'll go home with a wealth of experience and high hopes of coming back.

Tennis in the Maritimes, the juniors said, suffers from a lack of competition.

"You get so far," said Jim. Scriven of Halifax, the Nova Scotia junior champ, "and there's no place to go from there. Kids in the rest of Canada get more instruction, travel around more. Central Canada also has some indoor courts, which helps."

Other members of the Maritimes delegation are three New Brunswickers, Joene Mooers and Burton Simpson of Fredericton and John Russell of Rothesay.

All six feel they have picked up a lot, partly from the matches in which they mostly fought losing battles, partly from watching the top-seeded stars, and partly from the practice with various players between tournaments.

Thursday's play was mostly dull, with rain delaying the matches.

The No. 1 show of the day was a men's doubles feature which saw Don Fontana of Toronto and Ned Rainboth of Ottawa win a titantic battle against two Toronto players, Peter Stewart and Jim Bentley.

Playing a flashing but erratic game, the Fontana-Rainboth combination squeezed out a five-set win over their opponents 6-4, 6-1, 3-6, 5-7, 7-5. The steadier Toronto combination had the match in their pocket when they led 5-4 in the fifth set, but Fontana and Rainboth smashed Bentley's service at the crucial point and went on to win the clinching set 7-5.

Meanwhile the women's doubles turned into an all-Ottawa affair, with four girls of the host club slated to meet in the finals today.

Pat and Diana Lowe made it 6-2, 6-2 over Lily Dumoulin of Dorion, Que., and Therese Helie of Montreal, and qualified for the finals against Miss Rainboth and Miss Felix.

CNRDefaultGame H&H Tie For 6th In Softball Tilts

Howe and Hagerman moved into a sixth place tie with Provincial Engineers in the league standings last evening as they brushed aside Energetic Club 16-3 before a poor crowd. CNR Nationals, who had a chance to make it a three-way tie for the last playoff berth defaulted their game to Anti-Tank when they were unable to field a complete team on time.

The Nationals and Anti Tank played a 5-inning exhibition game the trainmen using two players out of the stands. The makeshift CNR line up, downed the gunners by a wide margin in the exhibition game.

Howe and Hagerman had little trouble as they romped to a win over Energetic Club. They scored freely in every inning but the seventh and were never in trouble.

The plumbers opened up a five run lead in the first frame on singles by Doyle and Callaghan, a double by V. Murray, and a home run by Ray Donovan. Two errors and two singles counted two more runs in the second. The plumbers kept lengthening their margin in the third counting four times on four errors and a double by V. Murray. They added a single run in the fourth, three in the fifth and another run in the sixth.

Energetic scored their 3 runs in the bottom of the seventh on a single by Bateman, a double by White, and a home run by McMillen.

Adams went all the way for the winners walking none, striking out seven and being nicked for 10 hits and three runs. Stickle toiled vainly for the losers, walking two, striking out two, and being tagged for 13 hits and 16 runs as his mates committed 13 errors behind him. The loss shut Energetics out of the win column for the season.

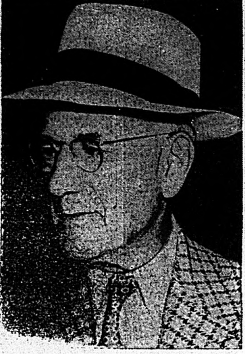
Parents Invited to Attend Baseball School at Exhibition Park, Aug. 5



This is an open invitation to every parent in Belleville and throughout the district to attend the "Better Baseball for Boys" school being held at the Exhibition Grounds here on Friday, August 5th from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. under the sponsorship of the Philadelphias, the Toronto Maple Leafs and the Toronto Telegram.

The invitation comes from the head instructor, Michael J. O'Neill, one-time big-league pitcher and brother of famed Steve O'Neill, former Leaf manager, now coach of the Cleveland Indians. In issuing the invitation, O'Neill said:

"During the two weeks of our schools, I hope to meet many hundreds of young ambitious Canadian ball players. I hope that I am able to impart some knowledge of baseball to them. I would like if the parents of these boys also could attend our school sessions so that they could see for themselves just what baseball can do for a young lad in building character as well as making it possible for him to become a better athlete and a much better citizen."

For All Ages

Boys of all ages are invited to attend the classes — junior for boys 17 and under and senior for youths 18 and over. Pupils are asked to wear baseball shoes and bring a glove.

During the week of July 25 the sessions were held in Toronto and next week the sessions travel throughout the province — to Dunnville, Niagara Falls, Brantford, Barrie and Belleville. During these sessions, junior and senior boys will be selected to play in the climax of the program, the all-star double-header Saturday night, Aug. 6 at Maple Leaf Stadium.

The head man of the Better Baseball for Young Canada, program is as young in baseball ideas and enthusiasm as the greenest rookie despite his some 50 years of service in the game as a major and minor league pitcher, outfielder, manager, coach, scout and business executive.

He started his professional career as a pitcher with the Montreal Royals in 1901.

Despite his 72 years, O'Neill hasn't varied five pounds in weight since his playing days. He likes nothing better than to get into a baseball uniform and test his legs and arm with men half his age. He attributes his good health and condition to the fact that he has never smoked, chewed or drank.

"No athlete can give his best," O'Neill stated, "unless he gets eight hours of sleep every twenty-four; eats plain but wholesome nourishing food and does not try to overdo the physical end of conditioning, but rather pace himself with just so much each day."

Philadelphia Phillies' scout, who is well versed in the art of teaching baseball, says there is no such thing as "a poor baseball student;" providing the student has ability, enthusiasm for the game, and the heart to play it.

Three Essentials

"There are only three things that will keep a ball player," said O'Neill, "from being a good pitcher. They are a sore arm, lack of control or a weak heart. I can cure the first two, but if a lad has a weak heart in baseball, he might as well forget all about the game and take up ping pong. Baseball is no game for anybody with a weak heart."

O'Neill is the oldest of four brothers, famous in baseball. He was the pitching end of the O'Neill battery, his brother Jack being the catcher, and they made baseball history during the early part of the century in the major leagues. His younger brothers Steve and Jimmy, are well known to Toronto ball fans. Steve was a member of the Toronto Maple Leafs in 1928 and 1929 and returned in 1930 and 1931 as manager. He later went to Detroit where he served as manager for several years and is now associated with the Cleveland Indians, World's champions, as a coach. Brother Jimmy came to Toronto as a player-coach during the 1930 season after a very successful career as a short-stop with the Washington Senators in the American League. He is now personnel manager for an upper state New York business firm.

By GEORGE H. CARVER, Sports Editor

There will be a 90-minute time limit when Whipper Billy Watson and Fred Atkins hook up in their return wrestling clash at the Memorial Arena tonight. Following last week's draw decision when the time ran out at one fall apiece for each of these keen mat rivals, Watson demanded an extended time clause and was successful in securing a full hour and a half stretch in which to reach a decisive climax.

• • •

Two of the biggest wrestlers in the heavyweight ranks will be opposed in the semi-final. The 330-pound, bearded Cardiff Giant will roll into action against none other than Sky-Hi Lee, the 292-pound Ozark giant. The Giant figures on getting the towering Lee clamped in that deadly bear-hug of his, from which he claims no wrestler has escaped once it was applied. Lee, on the other hand, boasts there's no hold that a good clop on the chops with one of his mammoth fists won't break.

Fast, rousing action is expected in the opener, when Tom Rice and Bill Stack will tangle.

And Bulging Bunny, he of the rotund shape and scowling mien will be in the ring during the main bout, just in case Atkins and Watson start kicking up didoes. Dunlop knows his wrestling—and his knows his men. Should the three of them tangle—and they likely to do just that if matters develop, there will be over 700 pounds of flailing beef in the ring—and something should explode before the smoke of battle settles.

• • •

The Belleville Lawn Bowling Club has added another feather of victory to its well-adorned bonnet by winning the Zone "B" championship of its district, No. 15. It romped through the series undefeated turning back the challenges of Madoc, Deloro, Deseronto and Kingston. It now awaits the winner of the Stirling-Trenton series for the championship of Zone "A".

• • •

District 15 winners will meet the champions of District 16 comprising clubs of the Ottawa Valley and St. Lawrence for the right to compete for the Governor General's Cup, emblematic of the championship of Canada. The finals matches will be played in Ottawa on September 3.

• • •

The Governor General's Trophy is no stranger to the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club. Rinks representing it won the cup back in 1947 defeating the Verdun, Quebec, rinks.

Two rinks will represent the city club. The personnel of the rinks include Skip Cliff Argue, L. E. McLean, H. W. Hanton and Gord Edwards, Skip A. E. Wonnacott, A. Watkin, G. Hyde and Ray Grant

• • •

There'll be high jinks at Tweed on Monday, Civic Holiday when the dignified gentlemen of the Hastings County Council headed by Warden S. A. McCarey, reeve of Tweed, let down their figurative hair-do's, forsake their dignity, and turn playboys for a day. They're celebrating the 100th birthday of the grand old county of Hastings and they're going to give the revered old girl a banner celebration.

• • •

There will be a smart regatta in which the queens of the nautical speedways will take part. In fact there will be all kinds of boats from the snorting little sea-fleas to the majestic 225 cubic inchers. There'll be canoes, rowboats, sailboats and even tiny puddle-jumpers. A monster picnic will be held in Tweed Park and one of the features of the afternoon will be an address by the Hon. Geo. H. Dunbar, of the Ontario Government. Others of the civic, political and municipal cognoscenti will be on hand to mingle with a cross section of the county.

• • •

But otherwise staid decorous members of the County Council will get in a little celebrating of their own. In the timberlands of the northern sections; the rich fertile farmlands of the reputed wealthy "south"; in shady woodlots in thriving villages, and in fields in sparsely-populated settlements, elderly and other gentlemen who once a month don the garb of a township or village father, and three times annually solemnly sit in argumentative conclave in the quiet dignity of Shire Hall as representatives of their municipalities, have been acting strangely.

• • •

They have been noticed at times swinging cordwood sticks over their shoulders in the approved manner of a baseball player prior to going to the plate. They have been seen throwing potatoes, apples and other articles of a spheroid nature at foot-square pieces of wood, or cloth. They have been seen running short-measured distances. Some have been taking special exercises to loosen up dormant muscles. Others have been heard practicing new-cusswords, and directing barrages of more or less severe language at an imaginary person. Strange fist-shaking antics have been noticed.

• • •

But the mysterious actions will fade into nothingness and all will be explained at Tweed on Monday when the County Council will be a house-divided for the nonce. For the county fathers will roll back the pages of time and recall younger days (some of them) when they form two softball teams and indulge in a battle to the "death".

• • •

That's right. Reeve Clarke Rollins, Wollaston, will captain the County "Wildcats" with Reeve Sauer, Deseronto masterminding the "Tigers". Four umpires will be used to cut down unnecessary travel. These are Reeves Charles Buskard, Deloro, Geo. Sprackett, Tudor and Cashel; McWhirter, of Limerick and A. Carmen Kleinsteuber of Elzevir. County Clerk Eric Denyes will tote along his trusty adding machines plus three secretaries and act as scorekeeper. Reeve Adams will coach both squads as long as his wind holds out. Free crutches, iodine, bandages, nursing service and surgical instruments will be supplied. If the game goes into overtime, a curfew has been set for three o'clock Tuesday morning. The game MUST be over by that time. Time out will be allowed for players who have to milk cows.

• • •

Thousands of people are expected to attend the Centennial Picnic being held in Tweed in honor of the 1949 Warden Reeve McArey of that village. The local Canadian Legion branch and other village organizations are fully behind the function and present indications point to it being one of the best affairs of its kind ever held in the mid-Hastings village.

Better Golf

By Sam Snead

In the explosion shot there is little leg action. Much leg action isn't necessary in this three-quarters swing shot and, if you have a well - opened stance, it isn't possible. The straight left arm is highly important in all shots but particularly so in an explosion shot because it gives you the arc swing on the ball. This would be hard to get otherwise since you're not permitted to touch the ground with the club. Since there is little body action the left arm and the wrists do most of the work in the explosion shot. And if you understand the action of the clubhead in taking the sand back of the ball, thus, providing the cushion for the shot, you won't fear that you're going to knock the ball a mile. The sand will take up the power and the clubhead, passing under the ball, will arc it up where you want it. A follow through is necessary on all shots. But it is particularly important in the explosion shot so that the power imparted to the ball by the clubhead isn't cancelled by the club dying in the sand. Follow through and watch that ball hop onto the green.

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, July 29 — (CP) — After reading Joe (Owen Sound Sun-Times) Goldenberg's column the other day, we wonder just what was good about the "good old days." Joe quotes an old-time ball player, James Wilson, who tells of the sport's initial experiments some 60 or 70 years ago.

The big handicap facing the kids of that day was the lack of finances. Most equipment was home-made — even the ball. "We made our own baseball by putting a stone in the centre and wrapping cord around it until it was what we judged to be the correct size," relates Wilson. "Then we took it to the shoemaker and he sewed a horsehide cover on it."

The stone and cord were easily obtained without money, but the shoemaker's charge of 25 cents forced the whole team into a hunt for funds, said Wilson — adding that he had to work a week for a farmer to earn his contribution. "For a week's work he gave me a pat on the back, all the water I could drink, and five cents."

Bats and Mitts

Having solved the ball problem boyish ingenuity was stretched still further to produce a bat and catcher's mitt.

"We whittled a limb of ash to the shape we wanted and used a rasp file to finish it off," says Wilson. But the catcher "used an old woollen mitt— the same one he used to keep his hands warm in the winter — stuffed with whatever padding was at hand."

No Sissies Played

A catcher's mask — a safety "must" nowadays — was unknown to those rugged youngsters says Wilson. "As a matter of fact, we never saw a mask. It was no snap for the unprotected catcher in those days and he got many a black eye and bloody nose from foul balls."

ROUGH MEASURE

The cubit, ancient measure of distance, was actually the length of a man's forearm from elbow to the end of the middle finger.

'Bring on the Bums' Cards Yell As They Ready for Showdown Tilt With Brooklyn Dodgers

By JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Bring on the Dodgers! That's the cry in St. Louis today where the sizzling Cards, on an eight-game winning streak, welcome another showdown wrestle with Brooklyn for the National League lead.

The Cards nudged the Brooks out of first place at Ebbets Field last weekend. They open a three-game series at Sportsman's Park tonight with a 1½-game lead.

The Cards warmed up for the Dodgers by smothering the Phillies Thursday, 10-3, for a sweep of the series. They roughed up Kenny Heintzelman who had won nine in a row, and forced him to retire after a five-run second inning.

Al Brazle, who might face the Dodgers Sunday, wrapped up his 10th win with a seven-hitter.

Brooklyn drew hope from Ralph Branca's route-going job against Chicago Cubs 7-1, his first complete game and first victory since June 29. Despite his 11th triumph, Branca probably will miss the Card series in which Roe, Joe Hatten and Don Newcombe are slated to work.

Giants Edge Pirates

New York Giants again poked their heads into the first division, displacing the Phils, with an 8-6 edge over Pittsburgh. They blew an early five-run lead but fought back to win on Sid Gordon's 20th homer with a man on in the sixth.

Warren Spahn coasted to his 12th victory, 11-2, while his Boston mates put the slug on Ken Raffensberger and two successors for 16 hits, five by Ed Sauer.

The dependable Allie Reynolds-Joe Page combination pitched New York Yankees to a 3-2 decision over Cleveland, splitting the vital series and restoring the Yanks' four-game lead. Page put down a Tribe uprising in the ninth with the help of a sensational throw by Cliff Mapes who caught Roberto Avila trying to advance from second to third on an outfield fly.

Cleveland left for a five-game series at Boston opening with a day-night doubleheader today.

Joe McCarthy's team lost a victory Thursday when American League President Will Harridge ordered the Sox and Washington to complete a six-inning game of July 7 when they meet again. Boston led 8-3 when the game was called to permit the Sox to catch a train. They'll play the final three innings before their Aug. 20 game.

McCarthy got another well-pitched game Thursday from Ellis Kinder who scattered seven Chicago hits for his 11th victory 6-1. Ted Williams hit his 26th homer.

Dizzy Trout's homer with the bases full featured a seven-run ninth-inning Detroit rally for a 13-7 triumph over Washington. Trout picked up the victory on relief when Hal Newhouser faltered.

A scheduled St. Louis-Philadelphia night game was rained out.

BC Swim Stars Assured of Place On Empire Team

Vancouver, July 29 (CP)—Pete Salmon of Victoria, B.C., and Irene Strong of Vancouver practically assured themselves berths on Canada's team to the Empire games with dazzling performances in the games swim trials which ended here Thursday night.

Only the tower diving remains—to be run off today.

The 20-year-old Victoria boy, a student at the University of Washington, swept all before him Thursday. Salmon set a Canadian record in his first heat of the 100 yards back-stroke event, clocking 1:02.3.

The bespectacled young Olympic star went on to win the final with a time of 1:03.

Second record of the day fell to Irene, who clipped three-10ths of a second off the old mark in the 200 yards breast-stroke event. Her time was 2:48.1.

The 100 yards freestyle event went to slender Cay Kerr of Winnipeg, who registered a mark of 1:04.1.

Nineteen-year-old Vivian King of Winnipeg was second and Kay Miles, of London, Ont., placed third, with Glenna Mills of Fergus, Ont., fourth.

Dorothy Cook of Vancouver, captured the 100 yards freestyle event for juniors, edging Toronto's Beryl Lewis in a close finish. Dorothy's time was 1:08.9.

Games officials huddle tonight to decide Canada's team to the games at Auckland, New Zealand, next February.

The tower diving trials will be run off at Kitsilano pool, with the games officials checking the results of their meeting in the evening.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.

New York, July 29 (AP) — Coach Steve Owen's prediction, as he swelters through preparations for next week's start of football training for the professional New York Giants, is: "Football will be much better — and faster — this year from the college level right up through the pros." . . . The reason he gives is simple: "For the first time in several years we're getting players fresh from four years of college ball . . . For a while we were getting mostly boys who had been in service for several years. Maybe they weren't in best condition or had lost some of their enthusiasm . . . The colleges had the same problem, but this season they'll have the kids who were scrapping for places on last year's freshman team . . . and the emphasis will be on speed on all the teams."

Sports Mention

Monte Stratton will pitch for the Seguin, Tex., team in the State Semi-pro Tournament which starts today at San Antonio . . . Jim Johnson, son of former hockey star, Ching, likely will be a candidate for the University of Maryland basketball team next season . . . University of Indiana athletes recently held an "I men's" golf tournament . . . that could include all golfers — "I had a birdie here, I was trapped there, I was in the water on 16" and so on—you've heard 'em.

Dot's All Brothers

Latest addition to the sports bookshelf is "making money on the races" by George Sexton . . . If he can find enough buyers at $5 per, George has a pretty fair way to make money . . . What's this story that Bill Veeck is paying a regular salary to that Cleveland "fan" for staying up on the flagpole?

Guelph Opens Floodlit Park

Hillsburgh, Ont., July 29—(CP)—A new floodlit ballpark was officially opened here Thursday night. Du-vals and Cliftons of the Sunnyside Ladies' Fastball League of Toronto met in a game after the switch was thrown.

A joint effort on the part of the business men of this community of 400 persons and the farmers of the surrounding countryside is credited with making possible the installation of the 1,500-watt lights atop 24 60-foot poles. Sixty farmers and business men backed $50 notes, on the strength of which the bank here made credit available.

Guiding spirit in the venture was the Business Men's Association of this Wellington County village 20 miles northeast of Guelph.

Varsity Grid Player Signs With Ham. Tigers

(By the Canadian Press)

Hamilton Tigers of the Ontario Rugby Football Union Thursday announced at Hamilton that Tommy Waldon has been signed to the quarterback duties for the coming season.

Waldon, speedy, first-string pivot player with the inter-Collegiate Champion University of Toronto Blues, will arrive here Tuesday and is expected to start practices immediately.

The first attempt to crown a northern professional golf champion will be made at the Northern Ontario Golf Association's tournament starting at Noranda, Que., Monday.

The week of golf will begin with senior championships followed by a 36-hole medal play event, open to professionals from the various clubs in the N.O.G.A. The 23rd Annual Championships will be held Aug. 4, 5 and 6.

Included in the tournament will be R Barringer of North Bay, Ben Norris of Timmins, Norm Aldridge of Noranda and Bob Tomlinson of Sudbury.

At Winnipeg, Maurice Smith, Free Press Sports Editor, said Thursday that Dave (Sweeney) Schriner has the inside track on the Brandon Wheat King's coaching job.

The statement was contained in his sports column, with Schriner described as not only a good man to look after the junior coaching chores, but the minor setup as well.

Bill MacKenzie handled Wheat Kings last winter, the club reaching the Memorial Cup final be-Royals. Although no announcefore being upset by Montreal ment has been made, it is reported that MacKenzie will not be back with the Brandon Club this winter.

At Goodwood, Sussex, England, a racing judge admitted Thursday he had picked the wrong winner in a photo finish Wednesday, but Jockey Club stewards said they are powerless to change the decision.

The judge studied the picture of the Bentinck Stakes and ruled that Lord Astor's High Stakes was the winner by inches. Thursday the judge said he discovered that the nose he thought belonged to High Stakes actually was that of Hornett III, owned by C. Nicot of Paris.

The stewards said that under the rules of racing a judge's decision stands. All bets were paid on High Stakes as the winner.

Europe's largest grouse will be introduced into Wisconsin next month in an effort to provide American hunters with a better game bird.

An initial shipment of six Capercaillie, 12-pound giants whose to Siberia, is due to arrive by air natural range is from the Pyrenees Aug. 5 at Minneapolis.

Ernest Swift, director of the Wisconsin Conservation Department said at Madison, Wis., Thursday the stocking will be the first fully-controlled experiment of exotic birds ever held in the United States.

Some 4,000 fans Thursday at Gravenhurst watched under sunny skies competition in the Third Annual Speedboat Meet, under the American Power Boat Association. Rough waters caused boats to jump and four were overturned during the event.

Miss Canada IV Favored to Win Harmsworth Cup

By DAVID J. WILKIE

Detroit, July 29 — (AP)—Canada makes a lone bid today to take the historic Harmsworth speedboat trophy away from the United States.

With a single craft — Miss Canada IV. — E. A. Wilson and his son, Harold, of Ingersoll, will try to beat the best efforts of a three-boat American team.

To lift the trophy the Canadian speedboat will have to beat the three defending craft in two 42 nautical mile rases. The first two races are scheduled to start at 6:25 p. m. EDT today and Saturday. If a third race is necessary it will be run at the same time on Monday.

It is no secret that for the first time since Gar Wood brought the famed trophy to the United States in 1920, the challenging craft has an excellent chance to win. This view is based on unconfirmed reports that in trials on Muskoka Lake, the challenger was clocked at speeds ranging from 130 to 150 miles an hour.

The Wilsons wouldn't confirm these reports. They said merely that their craft had performed satisfactorily and that "we hope to make a race of it."

The defending team consists of R. Stanley Dollar's Skip-a-Long, of Lake Tahoe Yacht Club, Calif., and Jack Schafer's Such Crust I, and Horace Dodge's recently acquired My Sweetie, the latter two representing the Detroit Yacht Club.

Clocked at 115 MPH

Skip-a-Long has been clocked at 115 miles an hour; Such Crust at better than 97 and My Sweetie has gone 109.

Under the Harmsworth Deed of Gift Canada could have had two more boats on its challenging team had they been available.

Possibility of a race within a race was seen by some veteran speedboat enthusiasts as the Harmsworth competition was renewed after a 16-year lapse. (Gar Wood last defended the trophy in 1933.)

Some speedboat veterans suggested that if Stanley Dollar's craft should win one race and one of his Detroit team mates take the second, a run-off might be needed to determine whether the next defence would be in Detroit or in California.

There were others, however who believed that barring a mishap, common to any speedboat competition, Miss Canada IV would easily out-distance the United States trio.

The Canadian challenger is powered with a Rolls - Royce Griffin engine. The three American boats have Allison power plants.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

We like to say that it is best to be natural. But man seems to find methods of improving on what nature has done. Before you start objecting, look at the case I could make out of girdles.

In bridge the bidding words started off with natural meanings. But as the game progressed, players invented special interpretations for some bidding words. In some cases they were improvements.

Double is one of the bidding words so employed. It still retains its original meaning. At the same time it is also utilized for a special signal. Circumstances distinguish one from the other.

Thus, modern bridge accepts the word double in two ways. In its original sense it is now known as a penalty double. It is called a takeout double in its artificial (convention) use.

A penalty double is a double that says it expects to defeat the opponent bid. If opponent's bid is defeated, they pay double loss. In earlier days a penalty double was known as a business double.

When undoubled opponents are defeated their loss is not very great. If not vulnerable they lose only 50 for each trick down; vulnerable, they lose 100 for each trick down.

When doubled and defeated, their loss is: Not vulnerable 100 for the first and 200 for each subsequent trick down; vulnerable, 200 for the first and 300 for each subsequent trick down.

South and north reached a contract of four hearts when the west hand held the cards shown here:

♠A K
♥Q J 9 6
♦7 6 5 4
♣K Q J

West has high hopes of taking five tricks against the bid of four hearts. If he does so, he will defeat the declarer two tricks. So, he says double to collect twice the penalty.

His double says to partner: "I can defeat their contract. Do not disturb my double. I mean business."

Hollywood, July 29 — (AP)— Ramon Novarro may soon return to M.G.M., where he once reigned as the top romantic star for more than a decade.

Novarro's acting career has been revitalized by two character roles in recent dramas and he is now negotiating a deal to go back to his old home lot. Most famed for "Ben Hur," he was the studio's answer to Rudolph Valentino.

The 44-year-old actor has engaged in the real estate business in recent years. He denies a broadcast report that he was going to become a Trappist monk. "No truth to it," he commented.

Odd Notes

Kirk Douglas is an ambitious gent. After another year of pictures, he wants to go back to Broadway. He was on the stage for years but never had a hit. His plan is to divide his time between stage and screen. Kirk's now in "Young Man With a Horn," which has 20 songs plus some fisticuffs by the former "champion." . . .

Jack Carson, who used to call Carmen, Man., home, did one test-run television show, and decided that video is not for him right now. He can't see how he can do it and pictures at the same time. Jack is still trying to get out of his Warners contract . . .

Joan Leslie has her future planned far ahead. She wants to get married, but not for a few years yet. And if her career interferes with her marriage, she says she'll give up acting. (How many have said that, before her?)

Capsule Review

"Savage Splendor" (R.K.O.) proves that on the screen fact can be more exciting than fiction. This hour-long travelogue of Africa in color holds more interest than many plot-packed films. It's good for kids and their parents, too. Best scenes: underwater shots of hippos; lassoing wild beasts from a truck.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was home this afternoon on account of Saturday, and ma looked out the window. Oh, dear, it's starting to drizzle, and this looked as if it was going to be sutch a nice day. That just shows how far you can trust the weather, she said.

It shows how far a man can trust his own plans, pop said. I was figuring on putting on my best old clothes and getting a lot of fresh air and sunshine and exercise climbing up and patching the moth holes in the roof before we actually have to call in a roofer who used to be a watch repairer and still maintains his old scale of prices, he said, and ma said, Well cheer up, all is not lost. There are several faucets around the house that are showing their age. So if you really want to take advantage of time instead of taking advantage of the rain, why dont you put new washers in them? she said.

My dear, that's a splendid suggestion, even though it wont get me out in the air, pop said, and ma said, Why, the sun's coming out again, of all htings. Now you can attend to the roof and get all the air you can hold, she said.

No, by gollies, charity begins at home, and home is the inside of your house, where the faucets are, pop said. I'll get a certain amount of air walking to the hardware store for a supply of washers, he said, and I said, G, pop, I'll go with you. You mite change your mind and decide to get air and fun too, and take me to the ball game, I said.

Dont be silly, but come along if you like, pop said, and ma said, Good bye forever, or at least till dinner, if I know anything about human nature.

Which she did, the ball game being swell.

Fire Truck Deal Worries Some Hamilton Officials

Owen Sound, July 29 — (CP)—Hamilton's fear that it may have been "gypped" when it bought a ten year old fire truck from this city for only $50 less than its purchase price as new hasn't got city officials here worried at all.

Ald. H. Arnott Hicks of Hamilton, suggesting that "we may be getting gypped" said "I intend to find out why Owen Sound is selling Hamilton a piece of fire equipment which has been called "very unsatisfactory" in that city, for only $50 less than had been paid for it as new ten years ago.

"We feel that Hamilton got a good deal," said Ald. Randall Browne, chairman of the fire and street lighting committee of the city council here, in a statement in reply.

"But we're not worried about them deciding not to take the truck because we have plenty of opportunities to dispose of it elsewhere at the price Hamilton paid for it, or at even higher price, without difficulty."

Owen Sound bought the ladder truck ten years ago for $5,050. This year the city received delivery of a new $27,000 aerial ladder truck and sold the old truck to Hamilton for $5,000. Mayor Samuel Lawrence and Fire Chief William Murdoch of Hamilton, with a crew of two firemen, are scheduled to pick up the truck here today.

As for the truck being "unsatisfoctory" Ald. Browne said, it has been found to lack power for climbing the steep hills of this city, but officials here understood it would be quite satisfactory for Hamilton's purpose.

STAR PERFORMER AMONG U. S. BATTLE CRAFT

Here is the first flight photo of the Northrop X-4, star performer in one of the secret projects at the U. S. air force base at Muroc, Calif. Bearded Vikings Re-invade Britain

Broadstairs, Kent, England, July 29 — (AP) — A boatload of blond, bearded Vikings stormed ashore in Britain Thursday — just as their warrior forefathers did 1,500 years ago.

The ceremonial landing of 53 sword-swinging Danes, clad in the horned helmets and leather tunics sported by Vikings of old, ended a 10-day sea crossing from Denmark in a dragon-headed replica of a Viking ship.

Thousands of British seaside vacationers overran the official welcoming party, which included Prince George of Denmark and mayors of several resort towns.

The modern Viking invasion was staged to commemorate the raid by the Viking brother-chieftains, Hengist and Horsa in 449 A.D.

Viking Chief Erik Suell Kiersgaard said "We had a good voyage, but it was hard going, rowing over the North Sea. We are looking forward to a good time."

The invading Vikings ladled out samples of Mead, an ancient drink made from honey, to the welcoming Britons.

Male Chairman Admits Error

Slaidburn, Yorkshire, England, (CP)—Tom Walker, 78-year-old chairman of the county education committee, delayed business at a recent meeting to apologize publicly to the opposite sex.

It had taken him a long time to change his mind, he said, but he finally had come to believe that women could be useful in public affairs.

When he started out in public life and saw increasing numbers of women "muscling in" he predicted "no good will come of it." Not that he was against the sex generally — he married and has four daughters.

After acknowledging that work done by the three women members of his committee had helped change his mind he said:

"It's been preying no my mind lately. But I'm not so proud that I won't admit it now—I was very wrong."

Thanked by one of the women members for saying "I'd like to see more women serving the council," the elderly chairman confided publicly: "You know, I feel much better now."

He plans to see Mayor O'Dwyer, Cardinal Spellman and Postmaster Goldman before starting another hike to Washing to see the President.—Central Press Canadian.

Manhattan Love Song

By Kathleen Norris

"On Avenue A, in the Thirties. It's rather . . I don't know New York very well, but it's rather a-a popular neighborhood."

"Avenue A in the Thirties; I must tell Jesse, my husband," Mrs. Mockby said, as if she were talking to herself. "We-we were there, but it's thirty years and more ago now. You aren't doing it on what we had to do it on, I imagine. Mr. Mockby and his twin brother went into a dry-college, and our income . . salary, I ought to call it . . was twenty-five dollars a week."

"No, we haven't that," Fanny conceded thoughtfully. "Sixteen."

"Sixteen what?" said Mrs. Mockby, pausing.

"Dollars a week," Fanny supplied, innocently.

"You mean . . that's all you have, dear?"

"We do it," Fanny said, flushing a little in fear that she was making a sentimental appeal.

The older woman laid a hand on Fanny's shoulder, looked at her in the soft mellow light of the upper hall.

"You mean that everything . . everything is going along all right?"

"If I make a little money on the radio," bosted Fanny, 'it goes in the bank."

"I wish," Mrs. Mockby spoke in her gentle, wavering way, "I wish Mr. Mockby could hear this, my dear. We often speak . . we like to remember . . ." She paused.

"His brother Joseph and Joseph's wife Dora," she began again, had the flat below; we were all very . . poor, I suppose you'd call it; but we were . . . But I'm keeping you!"

"I wish," said Fanny, her voice a little hoarse with resolution "I wish you'd let me tell you, Mrs. Mockby, how glad I am to hear that, and to have seen you . . it makes me later meeting Chris, but I don't care about that! It's so wonderful to . . to be begining, and then to meet someone who has . . who has been through it all, and who isn't . . ." She was flushing brightly, confused by her own daring. "Who isn't spoiled, I mean, proud about it," she went on impulsively, "and whose daughter has such a wonderful home, and adorable babies that'll have everything . . . .

"I think of my own, if I ever had a little boy or a little girl," said Fanny, faltering, bright tears suddenly hurting her smiling eyes. "And I think, what break would be . . what break . . . ."

Her voice thickened, and she stood still, smiling, but unable to go on.

"I know!" said Mrs. Mockby, in a low quick voice. "I know just how you feel."

"So!" said Fanny. And then, after a pause, with a quick upward glance of the blue eyes she had lowered. "So it is wonderful to think that-that homes like this can come out of . . of starts like ours . . and children have fires, and toys, and cousins . . ."

"They were like one family when they were little," the older woman said. But she was not talking to Fanny.

Presently they were downstairs in the lower hall; now she did speak to Fanny.

"Will you tell me your name . . no, I don't mean your married name . . ."

"Fanny."

"Fanny," said Mrs. Mockby suddenly, and with a little hurried air of caution, "will you do something for me, my dear?"

"Why, yes," said Fanny, a look of pleasure, surprise and courtesy oddly blended on her tired, dirty, pale young face.

"At the other Mockby house . . the Geralds, you'll see Dora . . . the older Mrs. Mockby. Will you just say . . I mean of course it comes in naturally . . that you came here by mistake, and that I . . . I had Jake . . they know Jake! . . leave his dinner to take you over there?"

"I'm so sorry!" interpolated Fanny, not in the least understanding.

"My dear, as if it mattered! It's nothing! . . Here comes Jesse." Mrs. Mockby caught Fanny's arm, drew her a little aside.

"Do that for me if you see Mrs. Mockby," she said in a quick undertone, "I mean Joseph's wife . . that's the older Mrs. Mockby . . will you tell her that . . that Sarah was delighted to do her even this little favor. Just that . . . that Sarah was delighted to do even this much for her. Will you remember? There's been," she went on hastily, "there's been a little . . but never mind. Just tell her that. Jesse . . ."? she went on questionally, as her husband came out into the lower hall. Fanny saw that the man of the house was smiling.

"Who d'you think turned up, Sally?"

"Well, who?"

"Towler, Gene Towler. Remember Gene Towler, who was with us . . . Don't you remember my father's coachman who was in Sidney with us when Margaret and Lily had scarlet . . . Of course you do!"

"Uncle Gene!" Mrs. Mockby exclaimed. "Jesse, I am so glad! Where is he? Margaret'll want to see him . . you know we've said a dozen times . . But I mustn't delay you my dear," she interrupted herself to say to Fanny. "Jake'll take you safely, and don't . don't forget my little message."

"And thank you so much, Mrs. Mockby," Fanny said. "I've been doing stupid things all day, but I did love seeing the children, so I'm not sorry for this one. But I wish I could get hold of Chris!"

She went down to the car that was pouring a funnel of light against the dark shrubbery. It was a small closed car, and she took the seat next to the driver. They fell into friendly conversation.

"The other Mockby's, please. The Gerald Mockby's."

"Is that so?" said the old driver, turning an interested face. After a while he added: "Well, I never thought I'd take anyone from our house to their's again. there's been bad blood between thim that's brother's born . . . and there's no luck to it, d'ye see? She's very proud." He jerked his little wrinkled grey head toward the house they had just left and winked at Fanny in the dim car light. "She's only to say the word, mark you, and the others 'ud come running like fowls for scraps! But that she'll never do; not for a long while, at anyrate. She's gentle, and when you hurt her, there's no healing to it."

"She's lovely," said Fanny. Nothing for it but patience now until they reached the other place; she tried not to think of what her reception might be. Chris would be angry with anxiety and bewilderment now, as well as exasperated by her stupidities and delays. "Oh, Jake — go back, go back!" she ejaculated in sudden panic. "I left my bag. The taximan put it right inside the door ."

"It'll not delay yo ten minutes," Jake reassured her, retracing his way rapidly. "I'll schlip up an' get it for yeez, an' be back that soon that ye wudden't know it!"

This was all very well, but Fanny on her way again, and having reassured herself as to the safety of the precious envelope, settled in her seat, shut her eyes, and gave rein to some serious thoughts.

"I'll just have to stop this sort of thing, or I'll ruin Chris and myself, too. It's all very funny when one's in college, to be flibberty-gibberty and crazy, but it simply wrecks everything not to use — to use my wits, now. If I'd remembered the time, I'd have met Chris at four; he would have had the tickets, he would have known the right Mockby's, everything would have been all right, and we would be dining with the Mockby's now, and everything wonderful! I'm weak, that's what I am . . or maybe I'm stupid — oh, Chris, my darling big strong brown Chris, your wife is a stupid woman, but she loves you! Go on loving her and taking care of her — I've got to stop this," Fanny said, opening her eyes, straightening in her seat, "I'll arrive crying!

"Heavens, what a long way! It's quite a big place, Scarsdale, isn't it?"

"It's not as big as ye'd think, thin," said Jake unexpectedly.

"That Margaret," Fanny's thoughts ran on, 'how wonderful for her! A mother like that, and a father, and a home. Pictures of herself and sister Lily on their ponies, and pictures on ships and everything! And three ducky babies, and no bother about being able to afford them. But the mother started the way we are — I wonder if sometime, when Chris and I are sixty . . .

"I wonder if my mother would have liked Chris. But everyone likes Chris! I wish-I wish it was an hour from now, and all over .

"This is it Jake! Thank you Jake. Goodnight! Oh, Lord, I hope I have got nearly to the end of this adventure. I hope things'll all be normal and explained soon! she thought.

She went up the steps of another fancy home, not so formally parked and gardened as the Jesse Mockby place, but comfortable and attractive too. The door opened to her ring; her heart began to beat very fast now. It — it would be over in a few minutes . . . .

A nice-looking colored maid here. Yas'm, Mis' Mockby in. Fanny waited in the hall; she could hear the clinking of silver and china. They were at dinner.

Gerald Mockby came out, napkin in hand, amazement on his face.

"Mrs. Thring? Hello, hello! Say you people are a little late; we'd given you up! Thought you got detoured somewhere. Where's Chris? —there's a wire for him."

"Where's Chris?"

"Sure. He was bringing up some papers.'

"Oh, I have the papers . . . I have the papers, Mr. Mockby," Fanny, pale and disheleved and amazed, reassured him instantly. "But . . But where's Chris?"

"Isn't he with you?"

"No. We were to meet at the four-ten train . . ."

"That plan was changed. Mother," Gerald Mockby said, as a gray-headed woman came into the hall, "Thring hasn't come!"

'Oh, Gerry!" the woman said, in a sort of wail. "What can we do with this impossible Mr. Kessley without any notes!"

"This is Mrs. Thring, mother."

"I've brought the notes, Mrs. Mockby. But I can't think where my husband is," said Fanny, ready to weep. "I went to the wrong place by mistake. I'm just from the other Mockby house . . but I missed the train first . . Chris wasn't there, and I thought of course he'd come up here . ."

"My brother decided to drive out at three-thirty," said Gerald; "we were all to meet at the office. I thought, when Chris didn't show up, that he'd been delayed and would be on the train. He was headed for home at one thirty all right."

"Headed for home; he told me he had a date! We weren't to lunch at home! Where . ." said Fanny, paling. 'where do you suppose he is?"

"You're tired," Mrs. Mockby put in sympathetically. "Helen," she said to a girl of seventeen, who was peeping throug the dining room doorway, "show Mrs. Thring where to wash her hands and brush up a little and then bring her right out to dinner."

'But where do you suppose Chris is?" Fanny asked the man, making a clutching gesture at his arm.

"Well, he'll turn up. We can telephone him," Gerald said easily, going back to the dining room.

"But telephone where? We have no telephone. I could telephone Mrs. Ruggiero . . ." Fanny murmered anxiously, thinking aloud as she followed Helen to the dressing room. "But it seems so funny that Chris didn't telephone here, when he knew he couldn't make it. He may," she said, regarding Helen over a towel, struck with a sudden thought, "he may have been wondering where I was, all afternoon, and too much worried to come! And then he might have looked for the papers and discovered that I had them with me . . . .

"That was it!" she decided in relief, following Helen out to dinner, too hungry and too much disturbed in her mind to feel shy. She confusedly greeted them all: the elder Mockby . . Joseph Mockby . . . the lawyer Kessley, Gerald's handsome young wife, Gerald's daughter of four and son of seven who had come leaping downstairs unbidden, for raisins. Hot delicious food was served her while the others had their salad; but although it was all bright and pleasant and homelike, Fanny began to feel the strain that the nightmare of the last six hours had put on her. Everything was all mixed up, and it was her fault.

"Can you telephone your husband after dinner, Mrs. Thring?"

"I was thinking . . ." The earnest look from Fanny's blue eyes. "If I could?" she said.

"Chris had a lunch date," Gerald Mockby put in, "but he had some telephone message calling it off."

"Maybe he arranged to meet Madge later and forgot the time, just as I did," Fanny thought, trying to enjoy her meal. "He wanted to explain some of his notes to Mr. Kessley himself," she said, apologetically. "He could come up, I know, first thing in the morning."

"I'm leaving for California at eleven tonight," said lawyer unencouragingly. "The Jellicoes-my clients- are in Santa Barbara. As a matter of fact, I'd be glad to get going right after dinner," he added coldly, "for I've got to get into town and pick up some things there before I go to the train."

"I ought to go down to town," said Fanny anxiously. "I must find out what's delaying Chris!"

"I'm driving Mr. Kessley down at half-past nine, Mrs. Thring," Gerald said, "and I'll gladly take you along."

"Stay with us tonight and telephone tomorrow morning," Mrs. Mockby said kindly.

"I think I'd rather see if I can't find Chris," Fanny said; "It's not like him not to have sent some word. We've been missing each other all day!" Her lip shook.

"I thought I never would get my hands on thes notes," said the Jellicoes' lawyer. "It's the greatest relief in the world to have them here, and be able to go over them in just a quick way with you, Mr. Mockby, especially with the Judge here . ." he bowed to the older Mockby, "to lend us a hand if we get bogged up."

"Oh, I'm out of it . . I'm out of it!" the Judge said.

"He's taking a whole year off," pretty, plump, gray headed Mrs. Mockby said impressively, "and I won't let him hear a word about anything!"

"Now, Mrs. Thring," said Gerald, "if we might have those papers?"

Fanny went to get them, put the big envelope into his hand. She and the elder Mrs. Mockby found themselves alone in a cosy little library after dinner, when the other members of the family scattered with a general murmur of movies and getting the children to bed.

A maid approached: spoke respectfully to Mrs. Mockby.

"Mrs. Thring at the telephone please."

'Miss Canada IV' Finishes Third In First Heat Harmsworth Race, But Today is Another Day and Heat

(By STAN BRADSHAW)

Detroit, July 30 (AP) — The United States, thanks to Detroiter Jack Schafer's speedy Such Crust I, today was one leg up in its bid to retain the Harmsworth trophy.

But in seeking to repeat today, the three-boat American team may have to fight off a comeback attempt by the Canadian challenger, Miss Canada IV.

The E. A. Wilson boat — reported to have been clocked at speeds upwards of 150 miles an hour in Ontario trials — suffered a broken supercharger in Friday's race. She finished third with an average speed of 66.300 miles an hour.

Driver Danny Arena said that the 30-foot Such Crust "was never opened up" in outclassing the other boats in the field. She reached a lap record of 94.945 miles per hour, but her average time for the 48.3 statute mile course was 87.969 miles per hour.

That was roughly three miles an hour slower than British racer Kaye Don's record in the 1931 Harmsworth race. Don also held the lap record of 93.017 miles an hour, made in the same race.

The other two American boats in the race both had troubles of their own. Horace Dodge's My Sweetie, turned over finally to Driver Wild Bill Cantrell, dropped out in the fourth lap with a broken water line. She was clocked at 89.5 miles an hour just before the mishap.

Stanley Dollar's Skip-a-Long, which duelled with Such Crust in the opening laps, tried to pass My Sweetie in the fourth lap, but got caught in the wash and shipped too much water. Dollar and his mechanic, Ollie Meeks, spent 12 minutes bailing her out.

Set Blistering Pace

But they got the craft started under her own power and set a blistering pace to overtake the steadily plugging Miss Canada and win second place in the race.

Wilson, and his son, Harold, Miss Canada's pilot, had little to say except that they still hope to make a race of it. Harold Wilson said, however, that with the supercharger out, his engines would only turn over at approximately 1,700 revolutions per minute.

Gloom shrouded the hut of Miss Canada IV.

Harold Wilson told reporters he almost dropped out of the race after the fourth lap.

"I hurt my shin when the boat leaped in the air on the upper turn," Harold said. "My back hurt after that, but since we weren't running fast I decided to stick it out. I'll be all right tomorrow, I'm sure."

Such Crust, in winning, hit upwards of 3,400 r.p.m.'s, according to Arena.

A surprise even before the race had started was the announcement that Cantrell, who won the Gold Cup in My Sweetie, again would be at the helm. New owner Horace Dodge drove the big hydroplane in last week's trials and placed third, well back of Such Crust and Skip-a-Long. Since then, the United States committee had put pressure on him to let Cantrell take over.

Dodge made no formal announcement of his change of mind. He had insisted, almost to the last, that he would drive the boat himself .

Under the Harmsworth rules, a competing country must win two races to take the trophy — also known as the British International trophy.

If Miss Canada should win today, a third race will be held on Monday.

The current race is the 20th. running for the 70-pound bronze trophy. The last competition was in 1933 when the veteran American racer, Gar Wood, claimed it for the Detroit Yacht Club.

Wood won the 1933 meet in Miss America X, after having taken the trophy for the first time in 1920. He successfully defended it in 1921, 1926, 1928, 1929, 1930, 1931, 1932 and then in 1933.

He now is serving as captain of the United States team and had a seat in the judge's stand.

R.C.M.P. Boats Ply Great Lakes All Summer Long

Toronto, July 30 (CP)—Five Royal Canadian Mounted Police boats glide through the Great Lakes all summer long, as mounties keep keen eyes open for smugglers, enforcing the Canada Shipping Act, briefing pleasure craft and inspecting navigation licenses.

The 250 members of the mounted police's marine division are stationed at Toronto, Kingston, Windsor, Sarnia and Sault Ste. Marie. The five territories interlock so that the whole of the lakes north of the international boundary is covered.

Water mounties have the right to board any ship and inspect it for suspected smuggling. They see that all passenger-carrying ships have adequate life-saving equipment, and that all craft over 10 tons are registered.

OTTAWA POUNDED BY SEVERE GALE DAMAGE HEAVY

Buildings, Trees Down, All Services Disrupted

Ottawa, July 29 — (CP) — A roaring, smashing gale pounded the capital Friday, felling trees, power lines and buildings and jumbling communications.

Damage was still being counted today. But it was expected it will reach at least $100,000.

Seven miles from Ottawa $50,000 damage was caused to the Holy Rosary Novitiate and Scholasticate when the wind ripped the roof from the main building and flattened a barn on the Novitiate grounds.

Street car service was disrupted for several hours when falling trees knocked down power lines.

All four radio stations in the district were put off the air briefly when power failed at the transmitters.

Telephone and power companies rushed out extra crews of repairmen to put lines back in order. Some telephone lines still were out early today.

Heralded by low - hanging black clouds, the storm whipped up suddenly in mid-afternoon, just at the hottest part of a 3-day heat wave. High winds, reaching 65 miles an hour in gusts, buffeted the district for 20 minutes, followed by an hour's rain.

On Confederation Square, the heart of the capital near the Parliament Buildings, a street car was hit by lightning. But there was little damage and no one was injured.

In the residential east - end Sandy Hill district a huge maple tree was split down the centre and fell across Augusta Street, scant seconds after a passenger-laden taxi had pulled away from the spot where the tree fell.

Teacher Blames Students, Parents For Large Number of Exam Failures

Peterboro, July 30 (CP) — A Peterboro Collegiate teacher Friday blamed students and their parents for the large number of failures in middle school examinations at the school last month. Dr. Eldon P. Ray, head of the school's history department, made his claim in a newspaper advertisement.

Reports received by the Board of Education showed that only 53 of the 115 Grade 11 students who wrote the examinations passed in all subjects. Thirty-two failed outright and 30 others must write supplemental examinations before next term.

Dr. Ray asked if the board, which has called for an investigation, intends to start a "witch-hunt." He added:

"Placing the blame for poor results on the staff simply provides a scapegoat for parents and students who have shirked their responsibilities and, unfortunately, it has been given official blessing by board members.

When asked if he placed the advertisement on behalf of the staff, Dr. Ray replied that he spoke for himself, but believed that he was expressing the opinions of most of the teachers. Teachers are scattered on holidays and he could not therefore speak for all, he said.

Famed Russian Scientist Puts Talents at Service of Canada, Pioneer in Cancer Research

By JACK MITCHELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, July 30 (CP), — A former Soviet scientist, refugee from the mental fetters of totalitarianism, wants to use his world-renowned talents to help but Canada at the forefront in the latest methods of cancer research

Dr. Feodore Bohatirchuk, famous for his microradiography methods of probing cancer's mysteries, is Russia's loss and Canada's gain.

Recent Immigrant.

The greyish-haired scientist, a recent immigrant from a displaced persons camp in Germany, hopes to resume his research at the University of Ottawa. The university's medical faculty has applied to the National Cancer Institute for a reseach grant and a fellowship for him.

Approval by the institute, currently sponsoring 61 cancer research projects, would establish Canada's first research centre in this comparatively new method of examining cancerous tissues.

Internationally Known

Dr. Bohatirchuk is an example of the type of immigrant Canada's promise of freedom can lure from behind the iron curtain. Tough internationally known both as a chess master and a scientist, he found he was not excepted from Soviet government dogmas.

He left Russia soon after the war ended and came to Canada last March, shortly after his daughter and her husband, Dr. George Jeletzky. He lives with them in the Ottawa suburb of Billings Bridge.

Dr. Bohatirchuk was a pioneer in the development of microradiographical cancer research and has written a number of works on the subject. Microradiography enables minute blood vessels to be examined by X-ray pictures taken after radio-opaque substances are injected into these blood vessels.

The developed pictures are studied under a microscope. Normal and abnormal tissues are examined in an effort to learn more about the nature of cancer.

Dr. Bohatirchuk conducted his research at the University of Kiev, where he was professor of clinical radiology from 1937 to 1943, and later in Russian government- sponsored X-ray laboratories.

Star in Chess Circles

His arrival in Canada created a big stir in chess as in scientific circles. A former chess champion of Russia, his reputation preceded him. For years his games have been publicized and studied by chess followers.

Since arriving, he staged exhibitions in Toronto, Montreal and Ottawa, playing a dozen or so opponents at once. They found him a brilliant if unorthodox player.

On his arrival in Canada, friends found the 55-year-old scientist a reticent, worried man who "looked like 80". He has become well groomed and pleasant, distinguished looking with all small goatee and ready to converse fluently in English or a half dozen other languages. As one friend put it:

"He knows there's no need to worry in this free country .. no need to look over his shoulder all the time."

Attlee Charges Churchill With Irresponsibility, Spite In Attack on Labor Govt.

London, July 30 — (CP) — Prime Minister Attlee today accused Winston Churchill of giving Britain a black eye abroad out of "irresponsibility and party spite."

Replying to the Conservative party leader's policy speech at Wolverhampton a week ago, Attlee said Churchill's abuse of the Labor government "may be taken seriously in other countries," where he is remembered mainly as wartime prime minister.

Attlee declared:

"Any government which does not contain him is always denounced as incompetent."

Churchill told a party rally at Wolverhampton that the Labor government had led Britain into "imminent peril" of communism and national bankruptcy.

"I have never been slow to acknowledge his war service," Attlee said in a prepared speech in his own election district, "but during these last four years he has had a bad relapse into irresponsibility and party spite."

Attlee Defends Program

Attlee defended the Labor government's nationalization program which Churchill had denounced as "cramping and disastrous."

"How disgraceful it is," declared Attlee, "to try and make people believe that all our difficulties are due to socialist mismanagement."

The prime minister said the published policy statement issued last week by the Conservative party made "utterly unsupported charges". He added:

"Having heard Mr. Churchill's violent words about how this country had been brought to a low ebb in its fortunes and ruined by the Labor Government you would have expected the Tories to propose cutting down expenditures.

"But on the contrary, on page after page of this document they demand increases. . . . There is a lot of talk about reducing extravagance but not a single practical suggestion."

Attlee declared that "no one outside bedlam" ever suggested that Britain's post-war position would be economically secure.

Attlee next took up Churchill's criticism of the Labor Party for borrowing dollars from the United States and Canada while simultaneously handing out money to aid other countries.

This was in reference to the Canadian loan of $1,250,000,000 and the United States loan of $3,750,000,000.

Attlee commented:

"We did give aid to other countries to the tune of £900,000,000 ($3.600,000,000).

"The coalition government decided to support U.N.R.R.A. (the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration) and rightly decided. Without the aid of U.N.R.R.A. to which we were only second to the United States of America in our contribution, Europe might have fallen into utter chaos.

"We have been involved in a heavy cost in maintaining the people of Germany, but the occupation of Germany and Austria was decided by the coalition government. It was an honorable agreement with our allies. Would Mr. Churchill have repudiated it?

No Blackouts If Conditions Normal--Saunders

Des Joachims, Que., July 30—(CP)—It's too early in the season to rule out power blackouts next winter, Robert Saunders said Friday, but there won't be any if rainfall is normal in August and September.

Mr. Saunders, chairman of the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario, said in an interview blackouts will not be necessary if conditions are normal.

He made an inspection tour Friday of the giant power development near this Ottawa River village, 140 miles northwest of Ottawa, and also toured the Chenauk project, 10 miles north of Pembroke.

MURDER CHARGE LAID AGAINST WINDSOR MAN

Robbery Said Motive In Hern Slaying

Toronto, July 30 (CP).—Louis Martinello, 21, faces a murder charge in the bludgeon-slaying Tuesday night of Leslie William (Jack) Hern, 38-year-old railway dining car steward, whose body was found under a boardwalk at Toronto's east-end Kew Beach.

It is expected that Martinello will appear in court today.

Detectives arrested the dark, haired Martinello late Friday in a tavern on downtown Bay street. He offered no resistance.

Police said the man had been employed in an automotive plant in Windsor, before coming to Toronto a month ago, but he had not worked lately.

Investigators questioned Martinello for three hours before lodging him in a police station on the murder charge. They said that at first Martinello denied ever meeting Hern, but later said he met Hern in a downtown beverage room and spent some time drinking with him.

A police statement said robbery is believed to have been the motive for the slaying. Hern, unmarried, wore flashy clothes and an expensive watch and drove a big automobile—relatives described him as "a little guy who looked and acted like a millionaire"—but, at the time he was slain, was carrying only about $50.

Formed Friendships.

Hern's mother, Mrs. Llewellyn Hern, and a cousin, Lulu MacMillan both said that relatives had warned Hern that his friendliness and generosity might lead him into danger, especially if his appearance suggested to some criminal that he was wealthy.

They said he often formed friendships with men he had met casually around town, took them for drives in his sleek sedan, brought them to his parents' home for a night or a weekend and then after a few days, usually saw them no more. Mrs. Hern said that to her, some of the men looked lie undesirable companions for her son.

When found on the beach early Wednesday, Hern's body was clad only in a shirt. An autopsy showed the cause of death as a blow on the head from a blunt instrument. There were indications that Hern, a slender, frail man, might have been beaten and that possibly his head had been battered against a nail protruding from the boardwalk.

Three Montrealers who had gone to the beach to find a sleeping place Tuesday night told police they saw a man standing over Hern's inert form. They quoted the man as telling them:

"Go away. This is my friend, Tommy. He's drunk."

When they returned later the beach appeared deserted. Almost hidden under the boardwalk they found Hern—dead.

TELLS POLICE GROUP OF YOUTHS ROBBED HIM

Toronto, July 30 (CP).—William Edwards, 30, told police that he was attacked, beaten up and robbed of $25 by a group of youths while walking on Sherbourne street in east-central Toronto early today.

Seven youths were arrested by police and charged with creating a disturbance. Edwards was taken to hospital with a cut eye.

U.S. Relations With Chinese Reds Drop to New Low

Mob Seizes Consulate In Shanghai, Demands Pay

Washington, July 30 — (AP) — A mob's seizure of the American Consulate at Shanghai brought troubled United States relations with the Chinese communists to a new low today.

Several score Chinese, claiming to be former employees of the United States Navy, seized control of the Consulate Friday to enforce demands for back pay.

After an all day seige, the State Department announced, the staff of Consul General John M. Cabot was locked in the Consulate offices.

Refuse to Intervene

An official report said the communists police force "flatly refused to intervene," while the aliens affairs Bureau of the communist military control commission did nothing to restore order.

What effective steps might be taken to deal with the new incident were not immediately clear.

The communists have not yet set up a central regime for the North China and Yangtze Valley areas. American protests, directed to military commanders at Shanghai, Nanking, Peiping and other cities, have been fruitless.

In releasing its report of the consulate invasion yeterday the the State Department said it was not known whether Cabot himself was among the 13 Americans and 35 Chinese employees besieged in the building.

The back pay demands raised by the Chinese workers resulted from the departure of the navy from the port last May.

Prepared to Settle

The State Department said the consulate for some time has been prepared to make an "equitable" settlement known to be acceptable to more than half the claimants. But it has refrained from submitting the proposal at the official request of the Aliens Affairs Bureau.

"Responsibility for the present incident therefore is clearly attributable to the lack of effective action on the part of the Aliens Affairs Bureau and to the utter failure of the police to afford protection to the consulate general or maintain even a semblance of what the civilized world regards as minimum standards of discipline and order," said the report.

Fish Story -- Lightning Bolt Kills Trout

Toronto, July 30 — This is the story of the fish that were struck by lightning and were electrocuted.

Pete McGillen, reporting it Friday in his Toronto Daily Telegram column "Outdoors," attributes it to Herb Rodregue and J. Swan of Harcourt, Ont., in the Haliburton district 100 miles northeast of here.

The two men were camped on the shore of an unidentified lake in the district when lightning split a tree on the opposite shore and set it afire. They paddled across and found a dozen large speckled trout floating on the lake surface.

They picked up eight, all more than 15 inches in length, while the others revived and swam away.

Two days later, they returned and counted more than 50 large trout dead on the lake surface. They apparently were killed by the lightning stroke.

COOLING BREEZES GIVE RELIEF IN MIDDLE STATES

Death Toll in U.S. Now More Than 75

New York, July 30 (AP) — Colling breezes out over the heat-weary midwest and headed into the sweltering eastern states today as the death toll in the United States from the oppressive weather mounted to more than 75.

The cool air broke the week-long spell of hot and sticky weather over the central states Friday. It was moving eastward from 15 to 20 miles an hour and was expected to cover the eastern heat belt tonight.

The mercury was in the upper 60s in Chicago early today after a week of hot and humid weather.

The death toll in the eastern states mounted as temperatures soared into the 90s and broke records for the date Friday. There were scores of prostrations. Business etablishments in many cities closed and sent employees home becaues of the sizzling heat.

President Truman was among the thousands in Washington who sought relief from the blazing sun. He and his staff left the 96.2 degree capital temperatures for more comfortable weather at a mountain-top hide-away in Maryland. Some 70,000 government employees were sent home early because of the heat.

Friday's 96.2 reading in Washington equalled Tuesday's mark—the high for the year and the fifth consecutive day the mercury climbed above 95 in the current two-week heat spell.

New York City had another sizzler Friday. The 97.8 reading was the hottest July 29 on record, and topped the previous high of 95.5 in 1892. It was the third consecutive day of above-90 readings. The mercury probably will hit around the 90 mark again today.

MISSING MAN'S CAR FOUND ON SIDEROAD

Galt, July 30—(CP)— Arthur Turner has been missing from his Galt home since July 13, and Friday night local police were advised that his abandoned car had been found on a sideroad near Richmond Hill.

Police said the machine had apparently been abandoned two weeks ago Turner had been employed as laborer by the Waterworks Department and left his job without giving any notice.

WOMAN PUSHING CARRIAGE UP HILL IS ROBBED

London, Ont., July 30—(CP)— Mrs. Minnie Genereaux who was pushing her baby carriage up a hill was attacked and had her purse containing $17 snatched by a youth Friday night in West London. The youth, about 17 years of age, disappeared in the bush.

Elmer's Strong Heart Could Not Stand Strain of Long Imprisonment

Swoope, Va., July 30 (AP) — Elmer the bull is dead. Twenty-one days' imprisonment in a railroad culvert pipe were more than his Angus heart could stand.

The end came quietly Friday night shortly after Elmer's vitamin-plus dinner.

"He ate real well. I can't understand it. We thought he was getting well," said Elmer's modest owner who has declined the use of his name in connection with Elmer's story.

Elmer topped the scales at 900 pounds when stumbled into the pipe about a month ago, apparently to escape the heat.

He was rescued last week by worker — a 300-pound shadow of his former self.

Then came the best that money could buy to help Elmer in his fight for life.

Vitamins, eggs, milk, then some sure enough oats — and it looked as if Elmer would make the grade. Elmer died under the canvas shield they had rigged for his comfort in the pasture.

Albino Swallow, Scorned by Others, Stays in Ice House

It is great to be original but being an albino swallow in a flock of blue ones, has its drawbacks.

Maurice Callaghan reports that there is such a bird in his ice house on South George Street, and that it is treated with disdain by its fellow swallows. In this case birds of a feather are making sure that the color of the feathers are true blue.

Despite such treatment, however, the pure white swallow has lingered on in its frigid environment for the last three or four days.

Mrs. Vic White Lands 5-Pound Black Bass

"This," murmured Vic White to himself as a 3-pound small-mouth black bass gently but firmly attached itself to his bait in Little Salmon Lake, "is where I foil the better half. The good lady," he reminisced, "fancies herself a fisherman. Shucks, these gals are O.K. in the house but when it comes to hauling in the big fish, it is we men who get the palm."

Vic let the black beauty tire itself before boating it.

Too Busy to Notice

But so intent was the estimable Stewart-Warner-Alemite executive on his catch, that he failed to notice the more or less calm activities on the part of Mrs. White at the other end of the boat.

There was a grim determined look on the lady's face. And well there might be, for her fishing line was taut as a fiddle-string and something on the other end was cutting up foamy didoes.

Later Mrs. White drew her catch to boatside. Her eyes opened wide. Threshing in the water was a small-mouthed black bass beauty that later tipped the scales at five pounds, four ounces, a near-record for this district.

Exact Measurements

It measured 19, five-eighths inches in length and believe it or not, 15, five-eights inches in girth. (These Whites are sticklers for detail).

In addition, the Whites augmented their prize catches with other members of the bass family which pale into insignificance in comparison.

Now, when the subject of fishing is brought up in the White menage, there is an awed silence on the part of the man of the house.

Police Blotter

Activity on the local crime front was confined to routine calls only, Friday night, with the usual number of drunks being warned, and the usal number of family altercations being settled amicably.

Three persons reported to be on the roof of Trudeau's Station St. garage after 1.00 a.m. this morning were apprehended but released when it was learned that the two men were part of a crew engaged in roofing the building.

A person suspected of rifling a car on George Street had disappeared when the police investigated. A motorist ripped a screen door off the Club Commodore and drove off just as the policeman on duty took his license number.

A Front St. car had its fender creased by a passing auto, and a dog was accidentally killed by a motorist on West Moira St.

More Caution Necessary Electronic Device Warns of Fatalities

Toronto, July 30—(CP)—An electronic computer in the Ontario Highways Department has come up with a highway safety reminder for the Civic Holiday weekend. Department workers fed statistical factors into the machine and it produced an estimate that 12-15 persons will be killed in traffic accidents during the weekend — unless extra caution by motorists crosses up its calculations.

William Miller Presented With Attache Case

Plant associates of Mr. William (Bill) Miller who is severing his connections with the Swift Canadian Company branch here, on Friday afternoon honored their plant manager on the eve of his departure from the city.

Mr. Miller was presented with a handsome attache case which accompanied the best wishes for the future, of the plant personnel, dealers and government inspectors.

Herbert Fraser, plant accountant, made the presentation to Mr. Miller stating in his presentation address that the recipient had not only been the plant manager but a personal friend to all. It was, Mr. Fraser said, a case of not working for him, but with him.

Mr. Miller recovering from the element of surprise expressed his appreciation of the gift and sentiments of his former staff. He had served with the Swift Canadian Company for the past 16 years, he said, but the last four in Belleville had been among the happiest. He had made lots of friends and gained much valuable experience, he stated.

He thanked the staff for its continued loyalty to himself and the company.

Search for Data Of Totem Poles

Vancouver, July 30 —(CP)—A six-week historical mission that is something of a penance will get under way from the University of British Columbia today.

The mission will take Prof. Hunter Lewis of the university's English department into the lonely Indian outposts of the bleak and rugged British Columbia coast, from Alaska down, in search of anthropological and historical data relating to the remaining totem poles and house poles of B. C. tribes.

A move to preserve native art and cultural history from extinction, the propect is backed by a U.B.C. grant.

"It is about time the white man took steps to preserve the last traces of a civilization he all but destroyed," Dr. N. A. M. MacKenzie, university president, said Friday night.

Prof. Lewis also president of the Federation of Canadian Artists, said the study may take several years to complete, but it is "extremely urgent" that it start at once.

"The situation now is critical," he said. "The poles must be preserved and copied or they'll disappear forever."

Ungava's Wealth in Iron Ore Greatly Exceeds Earlier Estimates

Quebec, July 30 (CP)—Ungava's wealth in iron ore is even greater than heretofore imagined.

That was the word brought back Thursday from the mineral-wealthy region of northeastern Quebec by the Hon. C. D. French, Provincial Mines Minister, who flew to Ungava last week.

He told a press conference that the North Shore Exploration Company now estimates there are 500,000,000 tons of iron ore in Ungava. This is 200,000,000 tons more than earlier surveys had shown.

Mr. French said the company proposes to carry on with its plans to produce 10,000,000 tons annually, and that on this basis ore can be taken from the region for the next 50 years.

The North Shore Exploration Company has contracted with the provincial government to develop the iron-ore resources of Ungava.

Mr. French said he also visited the Havre St. Pierre area on the far eastern north shore of the St. Lawrence where the Quebec Iron and Titanium Corporation is developing titanium deposits.

Titanium is widely used in paints and in some high-grade steel alloys. Most of the world's commercial supply at present comes from India.

Mr. French said the corporation, which began making surveys 1½ years ago, expect to reach active production by the autumn of 1950. The deposits are estimated to hold 1,000,000 tons of ore.

Progress in the planning and building of railways to bring out the ore to northshore St. Lawrence River ports for shipment to processing plants, was also reported by Mr. French.

He said the Quebec Iron and Titanium Corporation, had already completed 11 miles of a 26-mile-long railway line linking Havre St. Pierre to the pits.

Havre St. Pierre also will be the port of call for ships bringing titanium to the corporation's plants at Sorel, Que.

Meanwhile, surveying of the 300-mile railway line that will bring iron ore from Burnt Creek, Ungava, to Sept Isles, Que., 100 miles up the river from Havre St. Pierre, is far advanced, Burnt Creek is the company's centre of mining operation.

Tito's Defiance Of Russia Called Big Human Drama

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

One of the great human dramas of our time is the defiance of Russia by Marshal Tito, Yugoslav dictator, who has been outlawed by the Soviet for pursuing nationalism for his country, contrary to the policy of the Kremlin which holds in effect that sovereignty of communist countries rests in Moscow.

I have an illuminating account of this battle from Alex H. Singleton, AP correspondent in the Yugoslav capital of Belgrade, and I want to present him here as guest columnist. He observes that Tito has turned to the western powers to ease the economic pressure being applied against him by the communist countries of eastern Europe, and continues:

For more than a year Tito has withstood Moscow's attempts to bring him to his knees. It is obvious that the Kremlin's order has been to starve him out, and members of the cominform (communist information bureau) have been following instructions.

Trade Ties Cut.

Trade ties have been cut between Yugoslavia and four cominform countries — Albania, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Poland. Yugoslav commerce with Bulgaria and Romania is almost dead. Traffic with Russia has been reduced to a trickle.

Tito's reaction was made clear in a speech. He declared that Yugoslavia would trade with the west for the things she needs, provided no political strings are attached. Said the marshal:

"When we sell copper we buy machines. We do not sell our consciences or our souls, but just copper."

At the same time he announced officially that Yugoslavia is looking for loans. These include $280,000,000 from the international bank. Approval could ease a lot of Yugoslavia's economic growing pains.

Tito also cleared the air a bit on a number of political points. He said Yugoslavia planned to close the Greek border "completely"—an action which would help his country develop friendly relations with the west (and would make the lot of the communist guerrillas in Greece harder).

Tito was denounced as a communist heretic June 28, 1948. He was expelled from the cominform and was accused by Russia and the Soviet satellites of pursuing "Trotskyite" policies of nationalism.

To a world impressed by the post-war steamroller tactics of Russia's military-minded diplomacy, there seemed at first glance but little chance that Tito could survive as chief of a communist state. But he still is the head man in a lonely, independent Yugoslavia.

Tito's Complaint.

Through it all, Tito has professed his allegiance to the cause of communism. His chief complaint has been that, as it works how, Russia wants to run the show and refuses other communist countries "equal rights" in determining policy.

Incidents have mounted all along the frontier. There have been shootings, on both sides.

Tito, thus far, has steered clear of turning those incidents into war. His diplomatic aides have channels while protesting that the cominform countries—not Yugo-

Columbus, O., — (AP) — People are welcome to sit on shaded benches beside Ohio's statehouse these hot days — but not to book horse race bets.

Syracuse, N.Y. — (AP) — This is what can happen when you smoke in bed.

George Burke, 19, told police he placed a burning cigaret on an ash tray beside his bed. A rifle bullet was near the cigaret. He was holding a razor in his hand.

Burke said he fell asleep, and was awakened by blood trickling down his chest and leg. He theorized later from a hospital bed that the heat of the cigaret caused the bullet to fire. When he jumped, he said, he cut himself with the razor.

Girls Turn Tables On Young Romeo

Kolding, Jutland, July 30 — (Reuters) — A Danish youth who climbed through the window of a girls' school here was seized by the girls, taken to a bathroom and held under a shower, fully dressed, until he appealed for mercy. A mistress of the school said the girls were tired of local Romeos who besieged the school after dark with invitations for the girls to take midnight walks with them.

Motor Vessel Run Down in Fog, Crew Escapes

Canso, N.S., July 30 (CP) — The 126-ton motor vessel Laverniere was run down in dense fog Friday by the 5,600-ton American freighter Colabee nine miles south of this eastern Nova Scotia port.

The six-man crew escaped in a lifeboat and was brought to Canso by the Yarmouth, N.S., swordfisher Edward L. The Laverniere was fired as a menace to navigation and slid beneath a smooth Atlantic half an hour after the collision.

The Colabee, out of Wilmington, Del., was bound for Baie Comeau, Jue., and the Laverniere, out of Grindstone, Magdalen Islands, was en route from Port Hawkesbury, N.S., to Halifax with a cargo of herring.

Capt. George Lake of Montague, P.E.I., skipper of the motor vessel, said: "We didn't have a chance. We were sounding our siren regularly but we heard only two blasts from another ship nearby.

Freighter Seen 100 Yards Off

"We weren't able to tell where the sound came from. We didn't see the freighter until she was about 100 yards off starboard. We swung around to try to avoid the collision but it was too late."

The Colabee hit the Laverniere amidships, slicing off her stern. She started under and the crew took to the lifeboats.

The freighter lowered her boats. Capt. Lake climbed into one of them and went aboard the Colabee to talk with her captain.

The swordfisher Edward L. reached the scene and Capt. Lake and his crew went aboard her. None of them was injured.

The Colabee is owned by Illinois Atlantic Corporation. She was not believed badly damaged. The Laverniere was owned by a Grindstone Co-operative.

Bishop of Derby Calls Gambling 'Mug's Game'

London, July 29 (AP).—The Bishop of Derby—whose title has nothing to do with the race classic—said today that gambling is a "mug's game". He said you can't beat the odds against you.

Dr. A. E. J. Rawlinson, the bishop, said in a church news letter that gambling "confined within rigid limits . . . is not necessarily harmful," but it can "lead men on their ruin".

It was the first Church of England blast against gambling since the home office reported last week that the government's 20-per-cent tax on football betting pools produced $49,000,000 last year.

IN MEMORIAM

WILSON — In loving memory of a dear father, Frank Wilson, who passed away July 31st., 1934.

Just of you today we're thinking,
But then that's nothing new:
We thought about you yesterday,
And the day before that too.
We will think of you tomorrow,
And each day through all the year.
In fact we'll think of you forever
For to us you are so dear.
We lose our friends from day to day
First one and then another,
But the day it really broke our hearts
Was when we lost you, father.

Lovingly remembered by daughters Grace and Violet. J30

DOUGLAS — In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather, John Douglas, who passed away July 31, 1943.

His last parting wish
We would liked to have heard
And breathed in his ear
Our last parting word.
Only those who have lost
Are able to tell,
The pain in the heart,
In not saying farewell.

Lovingly remembered by wife, daughter, son Clarence and grandchildren. J30

SHARPE—In loving memory of F.O. Harry Morden Sharpe, who was killed on enemy operation over France, on July 31st., 1944.

Five years ago today our brother was called,
To his eternal rest,
Gone where the angels sing so sweet
And taken when God knew best.
We miss him here so very much,
His presence oft seems nigh,
But we all hope in Heaven to meet,
When no one says goodbye.

Lovingly remembered by sister Pauline. J30

Scout and Guide Activities

There are 73 Cubs from the 1st (St. Thomas), 2nd (Christ Church), 4th and 8th Belleville Packs and 10 from the 1st and 2nd Picton Packs camping at the W.C.T.U. camp on Lake Consecon under the leadership of Akela Pat. Nicholls assisted by Miss Lillian Summers, Miss Betty Smith, Mrs. Ola Walden, Mrs. Helen Aselstine and Miss Doreen Cunningham. Akelas Magaret Kemp and Lillian Ashley are not in camp permanently but spend as much time as possible visiting the camp.

The service Scouts at the camp are Patrol Leader Harry Smith of the 1st (St. Thomas) Patrol Leader Reuben Kline and Scout Bob McLuskie of the 2nd (Christ Church) and Scout Tommy Hare of the 8th Belleville troops and Scout Ted Cottrell of the 1st Fruitland Troop.

On last Monday evening the camp leaders entertained 25 Scout and Cub leaders, group committeemen and local association members and other guests at supper and evening Red Flower. The Cubs gave a very inspiring bathing beauty contest. Local association President Mr. A. W. Simpson and Akela Margaret Kemp were called on to give a short skit. The sing-song was led by Akela Pat Nicholls.

Tuesday was athletic day in camp. Due to heat the events were held in the evening. The list of prize winners will be given on the final Red Flower program on visitors day. Cubs Douglas Aslestine, Gary Rowbotham, Charles Rowbotham and James Clemens passed their swimmers badges.

On Wednesday evening the local association provided, through a committee composed of district scoutmaster Henry Nicholls, and group committeemen Mr. C. N. Nicholson, Mr. Swain and Mr. O. Owen, a special treat of cake and ice cream. This was a very pleasant conclusion to an exciting Indian day at camp. Local association members Mr. Richardson and Mr. Symons provided the Cubs with a fine afternoon of Archery. Field commissioner Art Jackson was visitor in camp.

Sunday July 31st is visitors day at the Cub camp. Parents and friends are urged to join the Cubs and their leaders for the special program during the afternoon and evening. Be sure to take along a picnic lunch so that you can stay for the evening Red Flower and the presentation of the camp prizes. After the Red Flower parents may bring the Cubs home. The Cubs own service will be held Sunday at 4.00 P.M. Daylight time. The service will be in charge of Rev. C. P. Heaven of Wellington. The best way to reach the camp is to go via Highway No. 2 to Trenton and then on Highway 33 through the village of Consecon. As you leave Consecon take the left fork in the road after crossing the railway tracks. The camp is about a half a mile from the turn on the left hand side of the road. Signs have been provided along the road from Consecon.

A SCOUTER'S NOTEBOOK

(A corner devoted to presenting the aims and ideals of Scouting)

To continue with our little chat of last week we will discuss the latter part of the Scout Promise. To do my duty to God, and the King; To help other people at all times; To obey the scout Law.

Every Scout is expected to belong to some religious denomination and to faithfully carry out his religious duties. This is a necessity since religious obligations give one the background for an honorable life. The Scout program provides many opportunities for you, such as Scouts Own Services and combined church parades as well as the short opening and closing ceremonies of the regular meetings to carry out some of these obligations. As far as your duty to the King is concerned it is not necessary to point out that every Canadian is proud of his flag, his country and his King.

To help others at all times — here we have one of the most important phases of the whole Scout program. It is service to others. This cannot be stressed too much. You should remember that your leaders give up a great deal of their time and energy often at a great expense to themselves to try to show you the way of service to others. It is not always an easy path to point out so it is up to every boy whether he is a troop Leader or just a Scout to observe carefully in the best Scout traditions every possible way that he may assist others to the very best of his ability.

The last part of a Scouts Promise is not an easy mark either. The ten parts of the scout law govern practically everything in a person's life. To live up to every one of them is a full time job at of the whole Scout promoment. This will be shown to you later when each law will be explained seperately.

137 Children Enjoyed Bible School at Alliance Tabernacle

More than 137 boys and girls gathered into the Alliance Tabernacle for Daily Vacation Bible School this year. Almost every church in the city and surrounding community was represented making this, the 19th consecutive year, one of the best ever.

Each morning the children gathered at the church entrance and then marched in according to their ages singing, "Jesus Loves the Little Children". During the worship period, favorite hymns and choruses were sung with motions. A feature each morning was Missionary story time. Eagerly the children listened to the many stories from missionaries around the world. From the offerings received during the two weeks, ten dollars was taken out and given to foreign missions.

One half-hour each morning was devoted to memorizing scripture. It was encouraging to listen to the children of the various classes reciting at the closing program such portions as Psalm 23, 91, 100, Isaiah 12, 53, John 14, 15 and I Cor. 13.

Recess time was always anticipated for it was treat time. Nearly every day something was given to the children, either ice cream, chocolate bars or candies.

Following this was Bible study and each morning the lesson was given in flannelgraph by one of the teachers. The life of Christ was given in this way and the boys and girls attentively listened and watched.

The handicraft period was most enjoyable as the children made various things from carved shields to small paper baskets. The older girls did sewing and each made small wordless books from cloth and wore them on their lapels for the closing service.

A fine staff of teachers gave unstintingly of their time and effort and although they sacrificed and served without pay, it was well worth while as they saw the response in the children's hearts toward the Gospel and their eagerness to learn the Word of God.

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

BY
WINIFRED E. WILSON

A BROWN STICK

Gently the canoe glided through the narrow, winding outlet of the little lake. Presently the passage widened somewhat, while lily pads and driftwood floated on the surface of the water. Suddenly an upright, brown stick at the edge of the boggy shore moved! As though the machinery in an automaton were running down it turned, and slowly stalked into the weeds and bushes.

"Well, I never was better fooled!" Edith exclaimed. "That stick simply changed into a Bittern."

Depending entirely on camoflage, the American Bittern would not budge until the canoe was within three yards of it. Twany plumage with long, dark stripes, upright pose with neck stretched, long bill pointed skywards: all help the disguise. A close connection of the Herons, it haunts the same type of territory; leads a similar life; flies in the identical manner with head drawn in and legs extending out behind; and eats frogs, clawfish, snakes, small fish, tadpoles, crustaceans, insects and probably mice and even young birds. But there are some radical differences. Its Average is 28 inches, about half the length of the Great Blue Heron; its neck and legs are shorter though its toes are longer; and, of course, its coloring is entirely different The nesting habits of these two are also quite unlike. A Heron prefers to build in trees, and live in colonies; a Bittern makes its home on the ground, in grass or reed-grown marshes, in solitude.

At mating time, the white plume ordinarily hidden on either side of the neck or breast is unfurled and brought into prominence as an added attraction. An extraordinary lovesong provides another protection because it is so unbirdlike, sounding like a wooden mallet driving a stake into the ground, or like frantic pumping with a dry pump. The Bittern goes into contortions, with head moving up and down while the neck is dilated with air.

The children are fed on partly digested food which they get by hanging on to their mother's bill, which by the way, is her best weapon. The home is so low that there is great danger from minks, muskrats, and birds of prey; but her close-set, yellow eyes are ever on the watch, and any enemy coming too near receives a stab. When first out of the nest, young Bitterns cannot stand, but progress by clinging to the reeds with the "fingers" on their wings.

Atlantic Pact Passes French Upper House

Paris, July 29 — (AP) — The Upper House of the French parliament ratified the Atlantic Pact, 284-20, early today. The Lower House had previously ratified it. The treaty now goes to President Vincent Auriol for formal ratification.

The motion of approval also called on the United States to back the treaty with arms.

It asked the French government to "use all its authority to obtain the furnishing from the United States government of armaments and modern equipment indispensable to the French armies in effectively filling the obligations of defence and aid under the Atlantic pact."

The 20 opposition votes were cast by communists and their affiliates.

No Additional US Troops to go Under Aid Plan

Washington, June 29 — (AP)— Defence Secretary Louis Johnson told Congress today that no additional United States troops will be sent to Europe as part of the military aid program.

In a statement prepared for the House of Representatives Foreign Affairs Committee setting forth the national military establishment's views on the legislation, Johnson said he wanted to make one point "absolutely clear."

"This military assistance program is solely an equipment and a technical and training assistance program. The only United States personnel involved will be a strictly limited number of technical and training specialists to assist and advise the participating countries."

Johnson led off a parade of the armed services' big guns supporting President Truman's drive for the $1,450,000,000 program to help arm friendly countries.

UNITED FREE NATIONS OF EUROPE

In a few weeks there will be taking place in ancient Strasburg a parliamentary assembly. It suggests the possibility of realization of a European union.

Not many years ago the world saw a German plan for a united Europe and perhaps a united world, but it was to be the Hitlerite model of union, built by force by one dominant people. Germany's idea of a united continent was indicated in no doubtful way. It was to be founded on the basis of a dominant race, on tyranny and slavery for those who were not Germans. In that Hitlerite hope the world witnessed what barbarism could be, in which every invention of science and every fiendish thought of man would be applied to the subjection of not only Europe but of the whole world.

But that mad dream of the German dictator and his followers fell to the ground by the power of the United Nations.

The international parliamentary assembly which will meet in Strasburg is built on the basis of the association of free peoples. It has as its base a vision, one of the most magnificent and brotherly that the world has ever seen. Great leaders of democracy in these days had a hand in the organization, among them Winston Churchill who had much to do with the ultimate victory of free men over the revival of savagery under the Hitler menace.

Michel Debre in an article of the French Information Service "Reason Demands a United Europe," says "the new Europe is in contact with the outside world . . . Through freedom of exchange and investment, the ruin and the untold destruction brought about by the war can be repaired. The German conception of Europe was continental, military, even warlike. The conception of the liberal Europe which we wish to build is maritime and pacific."

Europe has been badly ravaged by war and there are ruins in every country. The standard of living is low as compared with what we know in the new world continents There are millions of refugees and many without work.

The liberal nations of Europe have common problems. They are at one with the nations of the West and have shown their ideal in the signing of the Atlantic Treaty.

SELL MORE AT HOME

Whether Canadian buying urges can be kept sufficiently whetted to sustain this country's more abundant production of trademarked consumer goods is a pertinent question now that many foreign doors have been shut to exports of this type comments the Financial Post.

Walter D. Fuller, president of Curtis Publishing Co., Philadelphia, provides a yardstick against which our efforts at maintaining the domestic market can be measured. He points out that there has been a decline in the percentage of national income which has been spent for advertising. Last year, he said, the U. S. figure was 1.8 per cent, compared with 3 per cent or more from 1900 to 1930, with the exception of two abnormal years. In these figures, Mr. Fuller read a danger of 'advertising inadequacy;' of promotional efforts ebbing too low to perform the necessary task of moving goods and services in adequate amounts to keep the economy in high gear.

What about Canada? Two points seem indisputable:

(a) Canada is spending a slimmer slice of its national income on advertising that it did pre-war. A study on one group of media indicated that the national income has risen 40 per cent faster than the advertising expenditures which help to keep national income up.

(b) Canadians do not allocate, either now or pre-war, as large a percentage of their national income to advertising as is common in the United States.

Significance of these figures for Canada is clear. With vastly increased national production to move, it is very clear that the business sights have not yet been raised high enough; that old yardsticks are quite inadequate in this new and enlarged post-war Canada.

239,000 BRITISH SETTLERS

Australia will receive 239,000 British immigrants, all carried in British ships, in the three years between January 1, 1949, and December 31, 1951, states the Australian News Service. Between today and December 31, 1950, she will also receive at least 110,000 displaced persons from Europe.

The U.K. Government has promised to make shipping available for the following numbers to be carried: 1949, 72,000; 1950, 80,000; 1951, 87,000.

The United States paid Russia about two cents an acre for Alaska.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST
(Copyright, 1949, Edgar A. Guest)

THE UNWANTED CHILD

The child they had not wanted grew
To be the greatest joy they knew;
To bring the golden light of fame
To shine upon his father's name.

Time was they feared the constant care
Would be too much for them to bear,
But, later, as the years went by,
They prayed: "Lord, do not let him die!"

Had God allowed the right of choice,
They had not heard his cheery voice.
Had they their own careers designed,
They'd lost the splendor of his mind.

With pride and with exultant joy
Today they look upon their boy,
Regretting this remembrance grim,
That once they had not wanted him.

TODAY'S TALK

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

We are voyagers in this life but each one of us chooses his own journey. Our destinations are personal. We are, however, guided to them largely by the experience of others, and by being inspired by the exploits and victories that others have achieved.

Belief in oneself has been man's finest inheritance. Said Marcus Aurelius: "Because your own strength is unequal to the task, do not assume that it is beyond the powers of man; but if anything is within the powers and province of man, believe that it is within your own compass also." That was written down nearly two thousand years ago by a very wise and good man. He really wrote it for his own profit, not realizing that posterity would be inspired by such a saying. His little book of gold was written "to himself."

How little we realize the power that an example has in shaping our lives. We never know our own potential until we test it out, guided as we so often are by what others before us, or about us, have already done. I recall how much better tennis I always played, or golf, after having witnessed the playing of experts and champions. A friend of mine, a champion tennis player, told me that he aimed always to play with a better player.

Without an ever-abiding belief in oneself, however, we can make no progress at all. And the more and more that we believe, the more we achieve. There is decisiveness and a boldness of faith in one that is a master of himself, and who believes in himself. To such a one, every defeat becomes a lesson, every setback a prop to will.

Napoleon's most admirable trait was his belief in his own star — in himself. But his ambition, and his love of power, gained selfishly, and at the expense of thousands in war, to satisfy that ambition, was far from admirable. Contrast such a life with that one with an ambition only to benifit mankind.

No matter what your origin, or circumstance, belief in yourself will lift you high — just as high as you aim, or to an intermediate station sure to place you among the useful, honored, and worthwhile of your time.

THE PROBLEM OF ARTHRITIS

Ten years ago I would have titled a talk like this "The Riddle of Rheumatism." for I wanted to make everone understand that "rheumatism" means nothing more than lameness or soreness or disability from something or other which affects the limbs, joints or spine.

Heaven only knows whether the individual who purports to have chronic rheumatism has tuberculosis, gonorrheal, strepococcus, staphylococcus, coccidioidomycosis or brucellosis involving one or more joints; or just internal derangement of a joint produced by some injury, sprain or strain; or the process of degeneration which is probably the most common condition called chronic rheumatism.

An internist, in a paper on arthritis published as the leading article in Jour. AMA early in July, began with the observation that in most instances responsibility for diagnosis and treatment of rheumatic diseases remains in the hands of family physicians, only a small portion of cases come to the attention of specialists. The internist then gives a cursory review of a score or so of remedies and methods which have been tried, with no particular effect, in the treatment of chronic rheumatism. He concludes with the admission that there are a large number of cases in which causes remain unknown—but medicine is making the great strides for which medicine is famous, and so there is the increased hope for rheumatism sufferers—the hope for which medicine is famous.

Reading such contributions is wearisome and disheartening. It makes me wonder about the fate of American medicine. Why should such a sterile, sophomoric essay be published at all, much less as the leading article in the official organ of the medical profession.

Infection of one or more joints with the gonococcus, tubercle bacillus, streptococcus, staphylococcus, the brucella of undulant fever, the coccidioides or other spesific organism accounts for some cases of joint disability that are likely to masquerade as just "arthritis." Injuries, sprains or strains, recent and severe or old and so mild that they have forgotten, account for some cases of joint lameness or disability that so untreated or improperly treated because they are labled "arthritis" or "chronic rheumatism."

It is more or less fashionable for authors of articles and books on arthritis to allude cryptically to "metabolic disturbances" and they genarally mention atrophy, hypertrophy or dystrophy as features of chronic arthritis or chronic rheumatism. Atrophy means a defect or failure of nutrition manifested as wasting or diminution in size of cell, tissue, organ or structure. Hypertrophy means enlargement or overgrowth of organ tissue or structure. Dystrophy means defective or faulty nutrition, such as fatty degeneration the actual shrinking of gums and jaw bone in pyorrhea, or the change in appearance and color and strength of the nails so characteristic of nutritional deficiency in women around forty.

The medical "authorities" have not yet learned enough about nutrition and the every day manifestations of nutritional deficiency to recognize the paramount significance of long-continued nutritional deficiency as a cause of the degeneration known as chronic arthritis. But it is obvious that they are getting warm. In another ten years, I predict, they'll come right out and say that most chronic rhematiz is the degeneration one may naturally expect as a consequence of years of existence on the refined American diet.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Complexion

I am very grateful for your face lotion recipe. It has really worked wonders for me and I'm telling all my friends that you are a beauty doctor too. (Miss M. B.)

Answer — After all, health is beauty. I'm not sure which lotion you mean. There are several recipes for such lotions in the booklet Save our Skin — for copy send twenty-five cents and stamped self addressed envelope. Persons with blemishes such as moles, warts, wens, moth patches or 'liver spots', birth marks, little broken vessels, scars, etc., may find practical help in the booklet Cosmetic Blemishes, obtainable in the same way.

Milk for Old Folks

I am past 60 and was told that milk drinking give people past 60 hardening of the arteries, that milk is only for babies, to supply enough calcium for their bones and teeth. Is that true? (Mrs. G. M. C.)

Answer — It is not true, in my opinion. In the booklet CVD (about the arteries and heart) will find that the corrective protective or basic health diet I recommend for those of mature age includes four glasses of milk daily. For copy of booklet send twenty-five cents and stamped self addressed envelope. In the pamphlet Young and Old Folks sent on written request if you inclose stamped self addressed envelope — I advise more liberal use of milk in the diet.

THE PACKSACK

OF GREGORY CLARK

Twenty-six million people bought hunting and fishing licenses in the United States last year. This is a federal summary of all the outdoor licenses sold in the various states. The staggering number is modified, of course, by the fact that many people bought both fishing and hunting licenses. But it is still a stupendous number of people interestd in killing fish and game.

Various interested persons have tried to arrive at an estimate of the number of hundreds of millions of dollars spent annually by Americans in enjoying themselves with rod and gun. They take figures for travelling hotel and resort accomodation, outdoor clothing, guns, gear, tackle and gadgets — there are no gadgeteers to equal the devotees of rod and gun— and come up with billions. Florida, which is always making estimates, figures that in 1948, in Florida alone, $1,000,000,000 — that's a billion! — was spent in outdoor sports including investments in the allied industries.

The enormous increase in public interest in outdoor sports is part of the phenomenon of the motor car on the highway. At the beginning of the century, in the day of the railroad train and the horse and buggy, hunters and fishermen were a rugged minority in every community, and were looked upon slightly askanse by the rest of the population. Your sporting uncle, in 1900, was suspected of being sporty in all respects by the rest of the family. 1880 that there were less than 25 N.Y., newspaperman, reported in men in New York City interested in salmon fishing at the time. A few hundred — no more — took the trains out into the trout streams of New York State each week-end or went on the fishing excursions by steamboat in Long Island Sound. Today, it might safely be said that there is a fishing rod in three-quarters of the homes in the entire continent.

Strength for the Day

STALK THE ENEMY

Fear is man's greatest enemy—fear of illness, fear of poverty, fear of accident; anxiety about loved ones, disquietude over the fact that one may be displaced socially, fear lest one may lose his position; and worst of all, fear of fear.

There is no power adequate to fight fear except the power of faith. Believe deeply enough in the goodness of God, in the sufficiency of Jesus Christ, in the eternal significance of life, and you will make an onslaught against fear that will at last bring about its defeat.

Just a few days ago I talked with a woman who told [illegible] for many years she had been a most pronounced worrier. Her life was positively cursed with a hauntin sense of fear. Then there came upon her a great calamity, and out of that troubled circumstance she wrestled a faith in God which changed her whole outlook. Today she fears nothing, and the result is that she has nothing to fear.

There is no enemy that can tear down life so effectively as fear. It is of no avail that we tell ourselves that our fears are foolish. We only cure the disposition to worry when we restore our whole personality to robust spiritual health. We need to cleanse our souls of the doubt from which fear arises.

Royal Family Gets Used to New Way Of Life Now Elizabeth is Married

By NORMAN CRIBBENS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, July 30 (CP).—Like any other mother and father whose married daughter leaves home, the King and Queen are having to get used to a new way of life at Buckingham Palace.

Now that Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh have moved into their official home at Clarence House, their old rooms at the palace are bare and deserted and the little nursery once occupied by Prince Charles, stripped of its bricks and toys, has a forlorn look.

These rooms, occupied by the Edinburghs for 19 months after their marriage, are part of an enormous apartment on the second floor reserved exclusively for the Royal Family. In effect, they are cut off from the rest of the building and so private that only friends and personal attendants are allowed in them.

The rooms, opening off a red-carpeted corridor running around the four sides of the palace, are arranged in suites each with its own bedroom, bathroom, dressing room and living room. The King and Queen have the best rooms at the front; overlooking the wide, tree-line Mall, and the atmosphere in them is that of a well-kept, well-lived in home.

Now the Edinburghs have gone, their rooms will be occupied only occasionally by private guests. For although the rest of the palace is crowded with officials and staff, the King and Queen insist that their own private floor be used by members of the family only.

Most afternoons the Royal Family meet for tea in the King and Queen's spacious living room and enjoy a quiet chat between official duties. Without the Edinburghs these gatherings are smaller and quieter — and the King misses his nightly "man's talk" with the duke.

For young company the royal parents now look to Princess Margaret, who is always lively and amusing. Some afternoons the King picks up the house phone to ask if Margaret is free for a chat and a stroll. Father and daughter meet in the corridor and lead a noisy procession of dogs into the gardens behind the palace. Both are good friends, able to converse without restraint on most matters.

Lone Fisherman Uses Marionette Method of Getting His Limit

You've heard of various ways and means of hooking the elusive bass, pickerel and lunge.

In the olden days the boys who frequented the piscatorial haunts of the River Nile caught their breakfasts by the simple expedient of ticking the umbilicus of a lazing fish.

Down the ages have come other methods of luring the finny beauties.

But for mass production, a lone fisherman of this city takes the proverbial cake.

His is the marionette method. He just sits pretty and pulls strings — and everything happens.

It did in this case. Alone in his sea-going kayak, the fishermen with an octopus complex, lowered four lines over the side. He sat back to await developments.

Then things started to happen.

A playful school of bass out for recess, saw the undersea frog chorus doing their stuff. Four of the bass gulped the free meal.

Topside, the lone fisherman sprang into sudden action. He pulled more strings than a politician and hooked as many fish. He dashed from one line to another each with its finny catch. For a few minutes he was busier than the proverbial one-armed collection taker with the hives.

But his novel method got results. He came home tired from plenty of exercise—but with plenty of finny evidence.

2 Men Attacked By Hoodlum Trio

Toronto, July 30—(CP)— Two men suffered severe injuries Friday night near a suburban Long Branch hotel when they were attacked by what police called a "trio of young hoodlums."

Gerald Vander Eyken, 55, of Long Branch, suffered fractured ribs and lung injuries in the fight and the other, Victor Stewart, 54, of Long Branch, had his face "almost kicked to a pulp."

Police said the two men were getting into their truck outside the hotel when the three youths approached and attacked Stewart. They pulled him to the ground and punched him until he was unconscious, police said.

Vander Eyken chased the youths in his truck for several blocks. When he caught them the youths turned on him and beat him up.

The two men were removed to hospital for treatment.

PEACHES SMALLER, SWEETER

St. Catharines, July 30—(CP)— There's good news today from the peach orchards for housewives interested in preserving. E. F. Neff, Lincoln County Agricultural representative, says peaches may be smaller than usual this year but they will be sweeter and firmer than in most other years.

Says Only Ottawa Civil Servants Get Civic Holiday

Ottawa, July 30 (CP).—A protest has gone out to State Secretary Bredley against the government's failure to give civil servants outside of Ottawa the day off next Monday, a civic holiday.

Fred Knowles, national secretary treasurer of the Amalgamated Civil Servants of Canada, today said he has sent a letter to the cabinet member, claiming that the civic holiday had been granted only to Ottawa civil servants.

"Almost every year this trouble crops up and we feel that it is high time that the government takes some definite action to eliminate it in the common interest," Mr. Knowles said in his letter.

"We have been instructed to very strongly protest the holiday provisions being restricted to the employees of Ottawa, in view of the fact that throughout the province of Ontario, as well as in Winnipeg, the first Monday in August is generally observed as civic day."

Mr. Knowles said that some Federal government departments in other parts of Canada grant the holiday without government authority. This had the effect, the secretary-treasurer added, of producing an atmosphere of "disorder".

CHALK RIVER ATOMIC ENERGY PLANT MAY PRODUCE A-BOMBS FOR CANADA

377 Polio Cases In Canada, Death Toll Now 16

(By The Canadian Press)

The total of poliomyelitis cases in Canada rose to 377 this week while the death toll from the dread disease climbed to 16.

A Canadian Press survey today showed Ontario far ahead of the other provinces with 184 cases, compared with 83 cases at this time last year. Quebec has 91 cases, British Columbia 67, Manitoba 16, Alberta 11, Saskatchewan five, and Nova Scotia 3. Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island and New Bruiswick so far have escaped the disease.

Deaths have been most numerous in Ontario, where 10 are reported. Polio has also claimed four victims in Quebec, one in British Columbia, and one in Manitoba.

Complete figures were not available for comparative totals last year but some health officials believe the earlier outbreak this year is due to the late spring and early summer heat waves in central Canada.

Seven new cases reported in Montreal Thursday brought the city's total to 56, with two deaths. In addition, 35 cases from outside the city are being treated in Montreal hospitals. There have been two deaths in this group.

In Toronto there are 49 resident cases and 67 non-resident cases. Fifty three of British Columbia's cases are reported in Vancouver.

Woman Clings For 18 Hours To Rock Pinnacle

Los Angeles, July 29 — (AP)— The United States Coast Guard reported today the rescue of a 53-year-old woman, who for 18 hours clung to a rock pinnacle off San Clemente Island while heavy swells exploded spray over her.

Her husband, Theodore Homer, 56, is missing after their 28-foot fishing boat, Marjorie Mae, smashed against the rocks of the island 60 miles southwest of here Thursday night, the Coast Guard said.

Mrs. Mae Homer, said her husband, who remained aboard the craft, helped her to the rocks. She said she called to him to follow her, but she didn't see him again. He wore a life-preserver.

On Sunday at a reunion at the Yacht Club, in Stoco, members of the Cassidy family will gather to pay tribute to a rare accomplishment. John Cassidy, a Hungerford township man, who has lived all his life in this vicinity, will be celebrating his 101st. birthday.

In fairly good health, Mr. Cassidy attributes his longevity to hard work, plenty of rest and the inclination not to worry about the future.

This grand old man, now into his second century, remembers his life as being one in an age of great things: electricity, automobiles, air travel, radio and modern farm implements.

"But I don't think the people of today are bit happier than we were when we had nothing, but coal oil lamps, the oxen, and the scythe," Mr. Cassidy noted.

Homan read an article and Mrs. Moorman gave a most interesting and informative paper. She said "a hostess should provide for the comfort of the guests; make them feel at east at all times; give them a cordial welcome and let them enjoy themselves in their own way."

A highlight of the afternoon was a very fine display of fancy sandwiches and a demonstration of how to make many attractive kinds. The demonstration was given by Mrs. Moorman, ably assisted by Mrs. O. Denyes of Belleville and was much enjoyed. This was followed by a delicious tea and a social half-hour. The next meeting will be held at Mrs. Earl Dafoe's.

Display of Exquisite Knitted Goods from Nfld. to be Shown

By Joe MacSween

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

St. John's Nfld., July 30—(CP)—There is good news from sweater girls in a bundle of pretty things shipped from here today to the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto.

Nonia—a Newfoundland organization to foster handcrafts—sent the knitted, woven and hooked goods to the exhibition which opens in August.

There is something for every member of the family — Mom, Dad, Sis, Junior and baby, to say nothing of a rug for the living room floor.

Dorothy McNamara, a Nonia worker handled the goods just before they left with the tenderness of a virtuoso fingering his violin.

"Aren't these wonderful?" she asked. "They won't have better than these in Toronto."

She said the "nicest" work was a father-and-son pullover combination. But the reporter gave the nod to a lacy, filmy sweater that was knitted in heart's content. There are Sloppy Joe cardigans—which is what women call a sweater that buttons up the front—baby shawls, socks and bed jackets. Ski sweaters have a caribou design and a hand-hooked rug shows a polar bear grazing wistfully into a hole in the ice.

Nonia, which originally meant "Newfoundland Outport Nursing Industrial Association," has 48 centres and 800 workers scattered along the northeast, east and southeast parts of the island.

Aim of the non-profit organization is to provide employment in outlying settlements and raise the standard of living by increasing earning power. Besides, the employment has an education value and brightens an otherwise lonely life.

Shown is a group of accessories to aid and abet the summer wardrobe. Straw with leather piping makes a neat little carry-all bag for general wear. Bright yellow linen with a black initial is used for a large kerchief that tucks nicely into the belt or pocket of an otherwise plain costume or that can be used at the neck. In the same color scheme is a yellow patent leather belt with a black calf buckle and eyelets. The large over-the-shoulder bag is made of bright yellow straw which is a good choice for the city or country wear. The yellow patent leather sandals are also nice for the beach.

The Experts Say . .

By KAY REX
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, July 30—(CP)— The market-stalls across Canada are filling rapidly these days with quantities of fruits and vegetables, many of which the housewife is anxious to preserve for winter use.

Home economists of the consumer section, Dominion department of agriculture, note that freezing is gaining popularity as the ideal method for home preserving.

Fruits and vegetables are quickly prepared for freezing, and the kitchen keeps cooler than is possible with canning methods. The fruit also retains its natural color and fresh flavor, and vegetables, quickly cooked before serving, are almost garden fresh.

"Freezing Fruits and Vegetables," a booklet issued by the department, carries the housewife through the entire process of this new preserving method.

All fruits and vegetables do not freeze well. The housewife should be wary of pears. And peaches require special treatment to prevent discoloration. Berries, sour cherries and rhubarb, are excellent when frozen.

As for vegeatbles, beans, peas, spinach, and whole kernel corn, turn out well. But corn on the cob has a tendency to develop off-flavors during storage. Vegetables usually eaten raw, such as celery, tomatoes, lettuce and cucumbers, should not be frozen.

Freeze only high quality fruits and vegetables. Always use garden-fresh vegetables and freeze within a few hours after gathering.

Select fruits and vegetables which are at the ideal stage of maturity for immediate table use. Fruits should be ripe but firm. Do not freeze any fruit that is green, over-ripe, bruised or beginning to spoil. Vegetables should be young and tender.

Heavily - waxed, cylindical-shaped cartons with slip-over or slip-in lids are excellent for products packed dry or in syrup or brine. Rectangular-shaped cartons with moisture-vapor-proof bag linings are more suitable for dry pack vegetables or fruits.

Glass jars may be used for packing vegetables or fruits, but they are wasteful of locker space. There also is danger of jars breaking, especially if used for fruits packed in syrup or vegetables packed in brine. As a precaution against breakage, at least one-inch head space should be allowed.

Transparent or heavily-waxed papers and other moisture-vapor-proof wrappings may be used for corn on the cob or rhubarb. All wrappings should be sealed securely to exclude as much air as possible.

Housewives may not know it but the sour milk which gives such good flavor to gingerbread and muffins, has most of the nutritive value of fresh milk. Health and welfare officials say that in view of this it is even more important to use up any sour milk on hand—for good economy as well as for good health.

GOOD MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Hints on "Being Yourself" on your vacation. When you start forth on your vacation, it's a serious mistake to resolve to "be yourself" unless your "self" is something you are proud of, or are going to be proud of.

She Should Want to Return 'Friendship Ring'

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A little over a year ago a boyfriend of mine, with whom I was going steady, gave me a friendship ring. We were never engaged. Two months ago he broke off the friendship, giving no reason, although I suspect he's going with another girl now, a distant cousin of mine. I know that you always insist that a girl should return an engagement ring when the engagement is broken....would you also advise that a girl return a friendship ring when the friendship is broken?

Vera N.

Yes. As a matter of fact it's very important that a girl return a "friendship" ring, whether or not the friendship is broken. For unless a girl is engaged to a man, it is very bad taste for him to give her a ring and certainly bad taste for her to accept it. And also a right-thinking girl wouldn't want to keep in her life and thoughts a ring that symbolizes either an engagement or a friendship has been broken by the man.

When Several Ladies Arrive Together at a Church Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Several friends and I have been discussing the correct thing to do when three women attend a wedding where there are not too many ushers in attendance. Is it correct for the oldest to go first up the aisle, on the arm of an usher, the other two women following, or should the younger women wait at the back of the church and be escorted to their seats one by one?

Puzzled.

That depends. The correct and gracious procedure is for the usher to offer his arm to each woman guest; that is, even when several women arrive together, he first offers his arm to the oldest, escorts her up the aisle, and returns to escort each woman in the group. However, it certainly doesn't make sense to over-do this procedure. So, if there are many guests waiting to be seated, and the time before the ceremony-hour is short, or (as you suggest in your question) if it is obvious that there are not enough ushers for the number of guests to be seated, the usher usualy offers his arm to the oldest lady and asks the others to follow.

Wasteful Not To Exchange Gift

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

As a birthday present last week I received a very beautiful slip from a girl friend of mine whom I don't know particularly well but for whom I was able to do a favor several months ago. The slip is the wrong size, too small. Would it be proper for me to ask her if I can exchange the gift for my size? Or, since I don't know her very well, should I say nothing about the size and perhaps give it to someone who is that size?

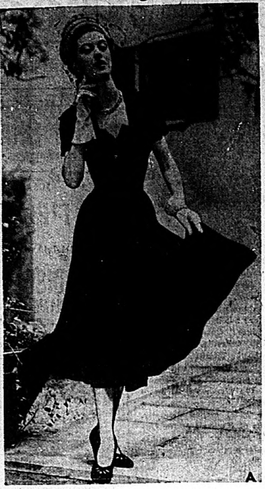
Dorothy S.

If the name of the store is on the box, you should exchange this for a slip in the correct size. If not it is foolish of you and wasteful not to explain to your friend about the size and ask her if she would exchange the size for you, or, if she prefers, direct you where to exchange it.

BOAT BURSTS BASEMENT

Halifax (CP) — If you want to build a boat, build it in your basement. That's what Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Knock of nearby Fairview did and they found it a good idea, even if they did have to tear down part of the foundation to get the boat out.

New Floating Panels



By ALICE ALDEN

Dior Certainly started something with those floating panels! But here is one fashion fad that is pleasing since it is an easy method of lending animation to the simplest silhouette. This black sheer, so nice for those dreadful dog days in the city, is cut on nice lines that are enhanced by panels over a tubular skirt. The squared neckline, with jagged edge, and bodice tucking in front and back are other pleasing and distinctive touches to an unobtrusively pleasing dress.

Lilly Christine Develops Dance On Feline Theme

New Orleans, (CP) — Ever watch a cat stretch and walk gracefully away?

Lilly Christine did . . and what she saw made her the recognized challenger of the long reigning specialty dancers in the United States.

It was about a year and a half ago when the beautiful blonde from Buffalo, noted the charm of a cat's grace. She decided to build her dances around a feline theme.

Now, billed as "The Cat Girl", she is packing them into the night clubs all over the country.

The tawny, 21-year-old dancer uses a slow, provocative rhythm that has brought her rave notices in newspaper reviews and trade magazines and more than a thousand cat figurines from fans all over.

Lilly is no stripper. She wants that understood. She begins with the minimum, so there isn't anything she can remove and stay within the bounds of the New Orleans law which requires at least a bra and a G-string.

Watching the fortunes of other specialty dancers who have reached the top, Lilly hopes to fare even better than most of them.

For one thing, she and Leon Prima, brother of bandsman Louis Prima, and owner of a New Orleans night club, plan to open three night clubs in Miami, New York and New Orleans as the beginning of a Lilly-cat club chain. These, she says, are to open in the fall.

With the night club trade in a seasonable slump, she is using her time now to plan for them after concluding a successful return engagement at Prima's 500 Club here.

Anglicized Name

Summer sports are good for her figure, although she has little trouble retaining her present proportions: five feet 6½ inches, 128 pounds, 35-inch bust and hips and 24-inch waist.

Baptized Lilliana Christina, the girl who anglicized the name given her by her parents of German, Swedish and Italian extraction, prefers dancing in night clubs to working in films or on stage.

It was fun working in "My Wild Irish Rose" and "Two Guys From Texas" in the movies and with Bert Lahr on the stage in "Burlesque," she says, but night clubs are much better.

"The audience is smaller and closer. I feel nearer to the people and can get their reaction," Lilly says.

Lilly tells you she doesn't smoke and she doesn't drink, but she has had a drink named for her.

It's called the Lilly cat-nip and the recipe is secret, but it contains about everything you could put in a mixed drink without giving the customer an enforced cat nap.

After all, who wants to nap when Lilly Christine dances?

PAINFUL LESSON

Sidcup, Kent, England (CP) — Three-year-old Elizabeth Eastland liked to slip her fingers between the door jamb and half-open doors in her home. But not any more. Her fingers stuck last time she tried it and her papa had to send for the fire department to release her.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Teen-Agers Who Have "Parent Trouble"

My mail is full of letters from teen-agers who are having parent trouble.

"I am 16 and go steady with a boy 18," writes one girl. "My mother and dad have always promised to let me have dates when I was 16, but now that I am that age they just get stricter with me and try every way they can to stop me from going with this boy or any other. The thing that troubles me is that they broke their promise to let me go out when I was 16.

Another girl, this one 17 and a senior in high school, writes me that she is fast losing all respect and love for her parents because they don't give her the freedom she feels she should have."

She says she is "allowed out only three nights a week and must be in at a certain time each night." If she is as late as ten minutes she nevers hears the end of it, she says. The boy with whom she "goes steady" has a car but she is not allowed to go out in it. Because her father found out that she smokes, he tells her she is no good, and is threatening to put her in a reform school.

"Can he put me away?" she asks, "and if so, for how long? I will be 18 in a few months. Could he keep me away until I am 21?" She then says that she can't ask me to write a personal letter because her parents read her mail.

A joint letter from two girls of 14 says that they have "date troubles" with their parents. Our parents think we are too young to go out on dates with boys. We have talked with them several times and it doesn't seem to do any good. Please give us some advice on how to overcome this problem."

Now the point I want to make to the writers of these letters is, first, that they must learn to distinguish between what is reasonable and what is not reasonable. For example the 14-year-olds who complain that their parents think they are too young to go out on dates are very probably expecting too much freedom for their age. What they undoubtedly want is to go out at night alone with boys and to my way of thinking fourteen is altogether too young for that sort of thing except for an occasional movie date on Friday or Saturday night. Beyond that I think they should wait until they are older.

The 17-year-old who complains she is allowed out only three nights a week is equally unreasonable. As a matter of fact if she were my daughter I would not allow her to go out that much while she is still in school. And while I would certainly not threaten to send her to a reform school because she smoked, I would try my best to get her to stop, on grounds of what is best for a growing girl's health. I am sorry that her father—reading their children's mail is a despicable liberty some parents take—handles her so badly, but at the same time I wonder if she might not find matters improved if she on her side looked at things a little differently.

When we come to the 16-year-old whose letter was quoted at the beginning of this column, I think she has more reason for complaint, if her parents went back on a promise they made to her in regard to the age when she would be allowed to have dates.

If this girl knows some older person, perhaps the mother of one of her friends, who may have a little more understanding toward young people than her mother seems to have, it might be a good thing if she would talk to her confidentially and ask her advice.

Boiled down, I think most "parent trouble" problems that teen-agers have come to this: First, the teen-agers should be very sure her demands are entirely reasonable and be fair enough to admit it if they aren't. And if, on the other hand, she honestly feels that there is nothing on her side she can adjust, then she should try and find some sympathetic older person in whom she can confide, preferably one who knows her family and so is able to look at the situation from all sides, and then follow the advice of that person.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMIESON

Be Kind To Your Hair

Treat your hair as it should be treated, tenderly and conscientiously; it will respond and shine. Neglect it and you will be sorry in later years. Those ambrosial locks that may be thick and lovely at the present moment should not be taken for granted. Things can happen to them.

Let us say you have just had a wave set. A lotion has been used to give body to the undulations and ringlets. You are in too much of a hurry to have the beautician arrange your hair-do, so you wrap your head in something or other and beat it home.

Prettying up for dinner, you comb out your wave. You find that the operator has used a heavy lotion and your hair feels as if it had been starched. It is tough going with the comb. You go raking through the strands, pulling out silky ravelings. Shafts are boken.

It is tough going with the comb

Continue this practice, my friend, and you will have short fuzzers sticking up along the parting. There will be rag-tags and bobtails that will make the hair-do untidy. Be gentle. Time may thin out your hair. Why start the business? Why be mean to your hair? It hasn't done anything to you, has it?

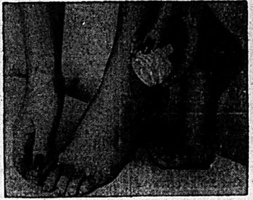
During sleep, ringlets get tangled and matted. The morning toilette may be rushed. Career girls seldom seem to have enough time between hopping out of bed and starting to the job. The poor tresses may receive rough and hurried treatment. Mustn't do!

Considering the importance of the hair-do, what it means to have a lovely facial frame composed of soft silky locks, it seems a pity that all women do not treat their halos with the utmost kindness and gentleness. If by chance the hair suddenly molts or goes thin, despair seizes one. That state of affairs can be forestalled by regular, daily attention to the hair and scalp.

When brushing, treat a strand at a time. Don't just slap the bristles on the front of the growth, or the sides, and sweep toward the back. If there are tangles, use the comb first —— the coarse teeth — and groom the ends, then comb from the crown. When using the brush, hold the strand away from the head.

If you have had a too-tight permanent, you may find your head covered with a frizzy mop after the shampoo. That is when you must be especially gentle, take time to untangle the delicate shafts. Some hurried operators in beauty shops are not always as gentle as they might be. The cash-customer should register a protest. It is not fair dealing.

Going to the Beach? Give Yourself a Pedicure First



During the "barefoot" season, give yourself regular pedicures. Follow the same steps as in a manicure, including applications of nail cream.

By HELEN FOLLETT

Bathing lovelies, strolling on the beach, sunning themselves after the swim, feel not quite top-notch in appearance unless the pink sheaths of their toes are in perfect order, tinted with nail polish. So here are some tips on the correct method of giving oneself a ten-minute pedicure. Home treatment will do if there are not painful blemishes in which event one should seek professional attention as foot ills bring a trail of other griefs that are hard to bear; poor posture, frowns and grouches among them.

Apply a polish remover. You can get these items now that are rich in oils, so the toe nails will not be brittle. File each one straight across, then use an emery board so that when pulling on your stockings, there will not be sharp points or corners to snag them. Scrub with soap and water and a brush. Rinse and dry.

Don't file down at the corners because, by letting the nails grow out to their free edge, they form a natural little cushion that keeps them from breaking. Get out you cuticle cream, applying it not only to the pink sheaths but to the toes, working with the thumb from the base of the toe to the tip of the nail.

Using the orange wood stick, pass is under the eaves then carefully detach the cuticle from the nail fabric. Do not attempt to treat an ingrowing nail, and do not use any sharp instruments as a wound on the foot is particularly liable to infection.

All the cream must be removed with soap suds and the toes dried thoroughly.

Before applying polish, twist a strip of cleansing tissues basketwise up and over the toes so they will be separated. Let the brush drain in the bottle, so you can apply only a thin film of veneer. Let it dry, put on a second coat.

Fashion Flashes

We're glad to see so many furriers concentrating on handsome coats at budget prices. Moleskin, dyed navy, gunmetal, silvertone or bronze brown, is used for a handsome coat that closes from a high turn-down collar with big pearl buttons. Coat has wide turn-back cuffs and a deep overlap pleat.

Little girls will be learning how to wash out and care for their very own underthings, now that there is to be a promotion on lingerie an' sleep wear of nylon for youngsters. Simple slips and panties, little sleep suits and peignoir nighties are included in the line. Nylon crepe and tricot are used.

Softness marks many of the midseason hats, especially those of supple felt designed for travel wear. A squarish crown built well down at the sides and combined with a rippling brim slashed at the sides, is the line taken by a pretty hat. It is of navy felt bound and banded with navy satin.

Crisp fabrics appear in many late Summer frocks. Tissue weight taffeta, in navy dotted in pink, is used for a pretty frock made with a quite low neckline that is framed by a big collar of plain navy taffeta. Bodice and waist are slim; skirt is softly full.

Quite a classic by now is the handsome greatcoat — bulky, yet soft — of beautiful wool fleeces in lovely colors. New coats in cloud-soft wool fleeces readied for Fall, include such colors as lime green, bluebird blue, deep lemon yellow, pale tangerine yellow and blush pink, pointed up by silk saddle-stitching in a darker tone.

Back to town comes the black silk crepe dress. A late Summer design, good for the city child, has deep dolman sleeves and a deep V neckline. It buttons from neckline to hem and has back fullness under a half belt. Slanted pockets have tapering tabs.

Vacation Tips for Fishermen

By JOHN ALDEN KNIGHT
(Noted Sportsman, Author and Creator of Solunar Tables)

Along about this time a good many fishermen will be going on vacation trips. There are a few things that are well to remember if you wish to have good summer fishing.

With the exception of the musky and the largemouth bass, most northern game fish prefer cool water. As soon as the upper layers of the northern lakes grow warm, the trout and the smallmouth bass desert the shallows and move into cooler, deeper water.

This, of course means the use of sinking lures. If you are fishing for trout, let your line and your flies sink right down near the bottom before you start to retrieve. It is much easier to catch them that way than to attempt to coax them up to the surface.

For Best Results

Smallmouth bass will be down around the twenty foot level or deeper. Thus, sinking lures will bring better results as a rule. Fish your sinking lures slowly and vary the speed for best results.

Another thing — if you plan to vacation near salt water, don't forget that Solunar Tables function just as well there as they do in fresh water. A great many people think of Solunar Tables as useful in only fresh water but they are every bit as handy in the ocean.

During Solunar Periods, a great many things happen that do not go on during the intervening hours. Regardless of temperatures hungry fish will move into the shallows in search of food. Trout will rise and feed at the surface and smallmouth will cruise along the shorelines and over the shoals and bars.

For reasons best known to the fish, surface lures seem to be more effective during Solunar Periods than are the underwater variety. Often the bass will ignore sub-surface baits, but they will take surface lures readily.

No matter where you go, you will find that the Solunar Tables will find the best sport for you that each day has to offer. If you plan to go for an extended stay, arrange to have your newspaper sent to you. That way you will be able to keep track of the daily Solunar Periods.

Electrics Defeat Corbys to Keep Record Intact

Northern Electric, although outhit for the first time this season, nevertheless kept their win streak intact to close out an undefeated season by downing Corbys 7-4 in an hour-long contest at the Alemite Field Friday evening.

The game, the last of the regularly scheduled contests in the Commercial League, gave the Electrics an unblemished record and the pennant. The loss left Corbys in fourth place behind Houston Knotholers and Stewart-Warner. Corbys will now meet Northern in the first round of the playoffs.

Corbys opened the scoring in the top of the first frame pushing across a single run on a walk, a single and a double with one away. Carson bore down to retire the side on strikeouts.

Northern got that run back in their half of the frame with Barriage scoring as a result of three successive errors.

Corbys took a one run lead in the third when Moon who had walked, scored on singles by Reid and Storms with one away. Again Carson rose to the occasion to retire the side on strikeouts.

Northern took the lead for the first time in the game when they pushed over two runs in the bottom of the fifth on a single, a sacrifice and two errors. They added four more in the sixth on three hits, two of them homers by Halsey and Whiting. Halsey led off the inning by blasting one of Baldwin's slants into left field for four bases. Henn got to second on an error to right field and went to third on a fielder's choice as Prout went out at first. Carson struck out and Barriage singled in Henn. Whiting then hit one that rolled out to the mound but was called back as a foul. He took the next pitch and hammered it into left-centre field to clean the bases. Wood struck out to retire the side.

Corbys counted their last two runs in the seventh on a walk and three singlees, with one away. Carson struck out the second man and Baldwin popped out weakly to second base to end the game.

Outhit Winners.

Although Corbys outhit Northern 10-8, they could not seem to hit when it meant runs. They left 11 men stranded on the runways while the Electrics lost only five potential runs.

Baldwin went all the way for the losers, walking two, striking out two, and being nicked for eight hits and the ball game as his mates committed five errors behind him. Carson worked the route on the firing line for the winners, striking out nine, walking five, and being tagged for 10 hits and four runs. He was well supported in the field with his mates booting the ball only once.

Best at the plate was Moon of Corbys with two singles in two official tries. Reid of the losers had three for four, and Barriage of the winners connected twice in three trips.

Line-ups:

Corbys—Downing 1b, R. Reid cf, Moon c, H. Reid 3b, Storms rf, Hunter lf, Nolan ss, Mills 2b, Baldwin p.

Northern Electric—Barriage lf, Whiting 3b, Wood cf, Young c, Locke 1b, Halsey rf, Henn 2b, Prout ss, Carson p.

Score by innings:

Northern Elect	100	024	x—	7	8	1
Corbys	101	000	2—	4	10	5

Umpires—Young (plate), Bawden (bases). Time 1:00.

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, July 30 — (AP) — The International Boxing Club, with three outdoor shows already carded, intends to run weekly Friday night fight programs in New York's Madison Square Garden of St. Nicholas Arena . . . President Jim Norris, who will remain in New York to complete the outdoor business, also plans to put on two big cards a month in the Chicago Stadium and two in Detroit Olympia each month . . . Maybe he'll have to establish a farm system to develop fighters for this setup . . . Bobby Feller says he'll forego any barnstorming next fall and give his pitching arm a complete rest. Bobby explains his wing still is weak as a result of the back injury he suffered during spring training, but that it doesn't hurt and he's sure it will come back.

Nothing Across

Eddie Joost, red-hot Philadelphia Athletic shortstop, claims a perfect record as a manager . . . "I was a manager for one day and I didn't lose . . . I might add I didn't win," Eddie says . . . It was when Joost was playing for Rochester under Burleigh Grimes in 1946 . . . Boiling Boilie used to get chased from the park nearly every day and Eddie would take over . . . Finally the St. Louis Cardinal organization decided to dispense with Grimes and the Rochester business manager persuaded Joost to take the job . . . That night the game was rained out and the next day the Cards sent a man to talk to Joost . . . Eddie explained he had hopes of returning to the Majors and the Cards relieved him of managerial duties and sent in Benny Borgmann to finish the season.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEORGE H. CARVER, Sports Editor

At long last, after years of rumor and fancy, of wishful thinking and hope, minor hockey in this man's town will be under one organised head next winter. And it's about time. The Belleville Hockey Association which for years has sponscored junior hockey, and as regular as the seasons roll round have found themselves in the "red", have started to move to align minor activities under one administrative and sponsoring head.

• • •

For years, or at least since this corner has been associated with city sports activities, with the exception of the past two seasons, the younger hockey fry was ignored, or played their hockey willy-nilly wherever and whenever they could. And it is just barely possible that not a few potential stars have been passed up because of their inability to benefit by proper coaching and hockey environment.

• • •

Realizing that in the hockey moppets of today lie the stars of the future, and in a concerted effort to give the youth of the city a long-needed chance to play organized sport, the Belleville Hockey Association has spread its sponsoring wings so to speak and embraced six minor squads in addition to its regular winter chore of looking after the junior "B" team.

• • •

And by so doing, the Association is performing a dual duty. Not only does the new arrangement give the youth of the city the chance to play hockey under proper coaching and management but it is establishing a feed-box for junior and senior squads of the future.

• • •

No one will deny the fact that the reason hockey championships for the past decade here have been scarcer than the proverbial hen's teeth, is because of a serious dearth of championship material. True, efforts have been made to gather the best possible hockey talent from the ranks of local players and some imports have been brought in. But it was the same old answer. Good, at times, but lacking when the playoff chips were down.

• • •

There is, or should be plenty of undeveloped hockey talent here. It cannot be developed until it is given the proper chance. While every kid who dons skates and pads is not a potential Howie Morenz, Dit Clapper or Turk Broda, there may be the occasional diamond in the rough that needs but some reshaping and polishing to bring out its fullest ability. Future major hockey league players may at the moment be trotting along Belleville streets with grimy face, ragged pants, and a yen to play hockey.

• • •

We are all in full accord with the move made by the Belleville Hockey Association. They have taken the big step, and its executive augumented by outstanding sportsmen of the city who will give their time and money toward the furtherence of the project deserve the fullest support this city can give it. And furthermore, the Association is starting early. By the time the first whistle toots in Memorial Arena, the Association will have all plans completed and its various proteges ready to play.

• • •

It has been announced by officials of the Canadian National A.A. that work on their new park and children's playground has commenced. McFarland's Construction Company is engaged in doing the work.

The area for the park was purchased by railroad interests for $1 earlier in the year with the stipulation that a park be built on the property. Present work is going on in the area between Cannifton Road and Hambly Street.

• • •

Seven teams have entered the Eastern Ontario Baseball Tournament which will be held at Megaffin Memorial Stadium Kingston on August 15, 16, 17, 18, it was revealed last night at an executive meeting. Entries close July 30. The seven squads now in the running are Kingston Athletics and Ponies, Napanee Athletics, Batawa Shoemen, Gananoque Cubs, Picton Athletics and Brockville Memos.

• • •

And now, up comes the holiday. Nothing much doing in this village, but Picton is throwing its annual speed-boat regatta and Tweed village is the scene of the Hastings County Centennial Picnic. Baseball is confined to out-of-town games, so sportsmen here are forced to loaf and laze all day or seek the highways for holiday diversion.

This corner will do its Civic Holidaying in the shadow of roaring speedboats over Picton way, an annual habit, but an interesting one.

• • •

If Civic Holiday keeps pace with other days of rest, some half a hundred people will be dead by Tuesday morning. Traffic, swimming, and other accidents will take their grim toll. A number of these fatalities can be avoided if common sense is used and ordinary care taken. If you are motoring, drive carefully. If you are swimming or fishing, take all the necessary precautions. ook before you figuratively leap, and you will come home intact. A minute of care may prevent a lifetime of remorse. A little foresight and precaution may save your life, or a crippled body. Be sane, and you'll be safe. Think it over.

Hastings County Junior Farmers Win Field Day

Hastings County Junior Farmers came out on top of the heap yesterday in the track and field events at the Quinte District Junior Farmers' annual field day held at the Ontario School for the Deaf. Hastings ran up a score of 37 points defeating their nearest contender by a margin of 13 points to hold the trophy for the fourth consecutive year.

Just to keep the records straight the Hastings' lads and lassies walked away with top honors in the softball competitions. In the first section of the boys' softball Hastings defeated Peterborough 2-1, Northumberland bowed to Prince Edward 17-15, Victoria trounced Frontenac 14-7 while Hastings downed Lennox and Addington 14-1. Prince Edward and Victoria met in the semi-fifinals with Victoria winning the right to play Hastings in the finals. Hastings trod rough shod over the hapless Victorians to take the game and the district championship by a score of 20-2.

Northumberland girls defeated Peterborough 1-0 while Hastings downed Victoria 11-4 in the first section of the girls' softball competitions. The Hastings lassies defeated Northumberland 11-5 to capture the girls' softball championship for their county.

Softball Slants

(By BOYD UPPER)

The Commercial Softball league wound up operations 24 hours behind schedule, Friday evening, when Northern Electric downed Corbys 7-4 to keep their undefeated and untied record intact into the playoffs. The loss was Corby third in the campaign, but was sufficient to skid them into fourth place in the league from which point they enter the playoffs against their recent conquerors, Northern Electric.

Northern's win prevented what might have become a two-way tie for first and third place, and ironed out the ensuing kinks in the playoff schedule. As things now stand Northern meets Corbys, Houston's tangle with Shell Oil, and Stewart Warner will face the winners of the sudden death playoff for sixth place between Provincial Engineers and Howe and Hagerman, which is slated for Tuesday evening at the Alemite Field.

• •

Glen Young, hard-hitting catcher for the Electrics, annexed the league batting title during last evening's game when he came up with a single in the third inning to give him one hit in three tries. That single was his 21st. safety in 36 official trips during nine games and gave him a healthy .584 average. At that he just managed to shade Ed. Donovan, Provincial Engineers clouting centre fielder, who amassed a .578 average on 15 hits in 26 tries during seven games.

Jim Barriage fattened up his already swollen average with two singles in three trips in last night's game to take third place in the batting order with a healthy .544. Left fielder Vince Murray, of Howe and Hagerman finished the season Thursday evening with a perfect five for five to take fourth place in the slugging derby with a season's average of .514 piled up during ten games and composed of 19 safeties in 37 times at the plate.

• •

Now that the season is over, and batting statistics are compiled, the league executive will find it easier to pick their all star teams.

Anyone interested in choosing an all-star team can submit their selections to any member of the league executive or mail them to this correspondent at the Ontario Intelligencer. The fan who selects a lineup closest to that picked by the executive and a corps of competent "experts" will be presented with a five dollar reward. Anyone can try their luck.

The two teams named by the combined all - star committee will hook up later in the year in a contest, the gate receipts of which, it is hoped, will fill the league's sadly depleted coffers.

• • •

Bits and Pieces: The Alemite Field now has a score board, with the compliments of the Coca-Cola Company . . . McFarlanes Woodenware, which finished the season with the rather lopsided won-lost record of two wins in ten starts can draw what consolation they can from the fact that they lost more than their share of close games. They went down before Provincial Engineers 6-7, and Houstons 2-3. They fell victim to Shell Oil 7-9; lost to Stewart Warner 3-6, and succumbed to Corbys by four runs. On the other hand Houston's "Knotholers" took advantage of every opportunity provided by the opposition to earn second place in the league standings with a respectable 9-1 record. They generally played superb ball afield and had the necessary pitching when they needed it. Even when the team as a whole would have traded three outfielders and the mascot for a hit, they pulled off enough good ball to win. The results speak for themselves. Houstons took the first game of the season from Shell Oil, 5-1; downed Howe and Hagerman 2-0 on the sensational pitching of Bob Green; outlasted Corbys to take an overtime contest 5-4; ruined Frank Baldwin's one hitter when they capitalized on team errors to beat McFarlanes 3-2; bunched their hits against Stewart Warner to win 2-0 and staged a four run rally in the late innings to down Provincial Engineers, 6-2. And their only loss was to the league leading Northern Electric crew who outhit them by plenty to win by 3 runs. Northern Electrics' undefeated string can be laid directly on the doorstep of their potent batters. Six of the team's nine regulars are belting the ball at a .350 clip or better and another is tagging along with a respectable .342. Added to that are three good hurlers — Lum Carson, Rex Young and Connie Harris. This powerful combination piled up 150 runs for themselves during the season while limiting the opposition to 51. Playoff hopefuls beware.

• • •

The schedule for the playoffs has not yet been released but when it is, softball fans will find it in this paper.

It was the first set-back of the season for Hollingers' John Brandreth who was pounded for seven hits in the five frames. Bluey Webber scored a pair of doubles for McIntyre and Ray Hannigan chopped a pair of singles for Hollingers.

In the Nickel Belt senior baseball league, Sudbury Shamrocks pasted Coniston 24-5 and Frood Tigers shelled Creighton Cubs 7-1. This strengthened Shamrocks grip on third place in the league and, by Tigers' win, tied up the race for leadership.

For Shamrocks, playing coach Lige Beaver headed the wopping spree with a triple and four singles and six runs batted in, while Bengals' playing coach, Gerry Wallace, sparked his team with a double and four singles for a perfect night at the plate.

Sport Shorts From Britain

By MICHAEL O'MARA
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, July 29—(CP)—Some horse fans don't bother about horses—they just bet on jockeys. Trainer Jack Leach is one of them.

Leach likes his apprentice, 17-year-old Walter Cox, so much that he's willing to back the kid against any novice in the world over five furlongs for £200 ($800) a side.

Horse owner Ivor Sainsbury wants to take him up on it, and offered to back apprentice Tony Holloway, 16, for £1,000. But Leach regretfully refused because he had "only £200 to spare."

Stable men, however, still think the match may come off. If it does, Cox will likely be up on Seawrack and Holloway on Stradle. Both have registered victories on these mounts this summer.

Holloway has 18 under-the-weight decisions to his credit in 1949—a figure that far outshines Cox. But Leach figures Cox to be the best apprentice he's ever seen.

Another young rider who's going places is 17-year-old Peter Collins of Kidderminster, Worcestershire. But Peter doesn't ride horses—he rides racing cars.

Fair-haired Pete drove with the assurance of a veteran recently to capture his first big event, the 100-mile Silverstone grind.

Young Collins took the lead at half-way and hung on to the end, averaging 68.05 m.p.h. with his Cooper car.

Presence of mind—and a little champagne—put out a fire during a dinner for Leicester City Football Club, last season's beaten cup finalists.

A wall lamp fused and flames shot from it. A guest, Vernon Stokes, chairman of the Portsmouth Football Club that Leicester had eliminated in the Cup semi-final, threw his glass at it.

A soda water syphon finished off the blaze.

A. V. Pope, former Derbyshire county cricketer, plans to leave England shortly to become coach and groundsman at Trinity College Schools, Port Hope, Ont.

Pope, one of three brothers who have performed for Derbyshire, has been playing pro cricket in the Birmingham League for the last four seasons.

Cards-Brooks Deadlocked After Early-Morning 3-All Tie; Second Stalemate in Series

By JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Hail the clock — new chief umpire in the National League.

With two consecutive Brooklyn-St. Louis games called a tie by the time keeper, the man with the watch is becoming more important than the players.

Curfew struck at 2:18 a. m. EDT today at Sportsman's Park in St. Louis with the Dodgers and Cards locked in a 3-3 tie at the end of nine innings. National League rules say they can't start a new inning of a night game after 12:50 a.m. (local time) so extra innings were out of the question. A heavy pre - game rain delayed start of the game for one hour and 28 minutes.

Brooklyn almost missed a chance to tie the score for they barely completed the eighth inning, with St. Louis holding a 3-2 edge, at 12:47 a.m. St. Louis time.

Howie Pollet, trying for his 14th win, had a shutout 3-0 at the end of seven innings with Nippy Jones and Marty Marion driving in the runs. A walk and successive singles by Carl Furillo. Jackie Robinson and Gil Hodges gave the Brooks two in the eighth. Ted Wilks came in to strike out pinch hitter Gene Hermanski to end the rally.

Cards Load Bases

The Cards loaded the bases with one out in the eighth but Rex Barney replaced Jack Banta, second Dodger pitcher and got out of trouble just in time to get the ninth inning started before the curfew.

On Monday this week the Dodgers and Cards played a 4-4 tie at Brooklyn when they stopped the game to let the teams catch a train to the west.

Herm Wehmeier, 22-year-old Cincinnati righthander, pitched his best game of the season to shut out New York with four hits, 3-0, in the only other National League game played. Wehmeier was in trouble only in the second when he allowed two hits and in the seventh when he walked 3. It was his first major league shutout.

The loss dropped the Giants into a fourth-place tie with the idle Philadelphia Phils, whose scheduled day game at Chicago was washed out. Pittsburgh and Boston played three innings of their night game at Forbes Field with Ralph Kiner's 28th homer with a man on giving the Pirates a 2-0 lead before a storm forced the game to be called on account of wet grounds.

Successive home runs by Johnny Lindell and Bill Johnson enabled New York Yankees to add a half - game to their American League lead with a 3-2 edge over Chicago while Cleveland split a day-night double - header at Boston.

Cleveland rebounded from a 2-1 afternoon defeat at Boston to smother the Red Sox in the night game, 9-3. The Tribe routed Chuck Stobbs, promising young lefthander, before he retired a man in a four-run first inning at night.

The Red Sox knocked out Gene Bearden in a three - run first inning but were tamed by Bobby Feller who finished up with his eighth victory.

A's Win Sixth Straight

Joe Dobson allowed only four hits in his afternoon triumph over Mike Garcia for Boston's fifth straight win. Dobson had a shutout until the eighth.

Connie Mack's surging Philadelphia A's ran their win string to six, their longest of the year, by downing Detroit 5-3.

Better Golf

By Sam Snead

Let's review the explosion shot. The ball is positioned well forward off the left foot and the stance is wide open. Your head is well over the ball. You grip the club low on the leather. The unhurried backswing is very upright and three-quarters full. You start down slowly with that straight left arm and the wrists providing most of the action. You swing slightly outside - in across the direction line with the club in the open face position. The outside - in swing imparts a "cut" spin, to the ball, so that there's very little roll when it drops on the green and at the same time the open club-face shoots the ball straight ahead to the flag. If the club - face is not open you will shoot off-line to the left. To make explosion shots well, you must practice them frequently so that mentally, you think of them simply as a normal, to be expected, part of your game instead of regarding them as a specialized set of circumstances that you have to fear. The average golfer fears an up-hill lie, a down-hill lie, an explosion shot simply because he doesn't practice them and thus move them from the extraordinary class to the ordinary class of shots.

Plan Extensive Hockey Program for Belleville

Realizing the urgent need of organized hockey for the young players of the city, the Belleville Hockey Association plan extensive activities here next winter. Behind the program, and who have been doing a lot of preliminary organization work are as shown above from left to right: B. H. A. president, Jack Yanover; general manager, Bill Cook, and the hard-working secretary-treasurer, Dickie Beare.

Belleville Hockey Association to Operate Seven Minor Teams Here in 1949-50 Season

For the first time in the history of the city, junior and minor hockey will be operated under one organized head here next winter.

The Belleville Hockey Association, long-time sponsors of junior hockey here has expanded its activities and will embrace seven teams during the 1949-50 season.

The teams include the regular junior "B" squad, one juvenile, one midget and four bantam teams. All units will be managed and coached by officials appointed by the Association executive.

The above was officially released late yesterday by President Jack Yanover of the Belleville Hockey Association.

In order to take care of expansion of association activities several prominent sportsmen have been added to the executive of the organization.

Augment Executive

Veteran officials who have been doing yeoman hockey service along junior lines for the past several years are newly re-elected President Yanover, Bill Cook, "Toots" Holway, Wally Berry, Dick Beare, Fred Reid, Austin Walters, "Boiler" Lloyd, Don Hurst, Malcolm Robb and Jim Taylor. Newly appointed members are Charlie Cawker, Don Stanton, Fred Elgie, Eddie Schrieder, Don Thomas and Dan Cowley.

The new executive lost little time in getting to work. At its first meeting it appointed managers and coaches of the various teams who will operate under the general supervision of Association Manager Bill Cook.

The four bantam teams will be under the direct supervision of Orliff Lloyd and Don Stanton. Don Hurst will manage the midget squad with Wally Berry as secretary and the veteran 'Toots' Holway as coach. Charlie Cawker will master - mind the juvenile team with Eddie Schrieder as secretary and another veteran player, Dan Cowley in the coaching role.

The junior "B" squad will again be under the managerial direction of Bill Cook with last year's coach, Ken McNaught back in his former capacity.

Will be Affiliated

The minor squads will be affiliated with the Ontario Minor Hockey Association. The bantams will operate in a city league while the juveniles and midget squads will seek spots in district groupings as heretofore.

Arrangements have been completed with the Memorial Arena Commission and management both of which co-operated to the fullest extent in arriving at a unanimous decision, to allot special hours on Saturday morning during the hockey season to the bantam league. These hours will be devoted to group play and playdowns.

The midget and juvenile teams were allotted one night a week during the playing season in which they will play home games in their respective groupings.

The Belleville Hockey Association will hold another meeting in the near future when further plans for what is hoped to be a highly successful minor and junior hockey season, will be discussed.

Toronto, July 30 — (CP)—How long should a stolen football player remain stolen before it is lawful to steal him again?

In asking this question Ralph (Toronto Telegram) Allen feels such larceny is all right but figures there are larger issues which could have a bearing on the future of football in Canada.

The background:

Edmonton Eskimos of the Inter-provincial Rugby Football Union says legal action may be taken against two eastern players — Mel Aull and Ralph Bartolini — signed by the club and who were reported to have accepted later offers.

Accepted Offer

The Eskimos say that the players, formerly of Hamilton Tigers, had been signed and that later reports indicated that Bartolini accepted an offer to play with Ottawa Roughriders of the Eastern Big Four and Aull was returning to Hamilton.

Ralph muses:

"The Edmonton club stole the players in a straightforward, above-the-board way . . . but the club's agent barely had time to erase his fingerprints before another club was caught red-handed trying to unsteal one of them and still another club was trying to resteal the second . . .

"A certain amount of larceny is a good thing — good for the players and ultimately good for the fans, although pretty harsh on the clubs that can't stand the expense of repelling raiders.

"As long as there aren't enough players to go around, the most just and sensible thing would be to open the international boundary so wide that anybody who felt the urge to steal a 7-formation quarterback or a running guard wouldn't find it necessary to impose on the neighbors."

In summing it up Allen feels that sooner or later the rules governing chattel - rustling in football may have to be modified or most of the major football clubs in Canada will be enbroiled in a full-scale player war.

Racing "Out"

Ivan (Hamilton Spectator) Miller says now that Ontario's automobile racing is in full swing he "has never regretted being born with a yen" for the sport.

"Those speed demons, the boys who race with the big cars in the Indianapolis classic, and the daredevils who nightly risk life and limb in the midget whiz-bangs . . . take the thrills the hard way.

"Certainly there are easier ways of making a living."

Favored Kerr May Have Trouble In Millar Final

Toronto, July 30 (CP).—Four sharpshooting golfers still are in the race for the Millar Cup in a tournament which will be decided today on the suburban Islington links.

Bill Kerr of Beaconsfield, Bob Gray of Scarboro, Jack Littler of Oakdale and Gord Harrison of Peterborough qualified Friday for the semi-finals, scheduled to start at 9 a.m. Gray meets Littler and Kerr takes on Harrison. The final is billed for 2 p.m.

Gray, shooting some of his best golf of the tournament, eased past Hamilton's Dick Borthwick 2 and 1 in a third-round match and brushed aside Lou Cumming of Toronto club 6 and 5 in a quarter final match.

Kerr reached the semi-finals by beating Mississauga's Gord Brydson 3 and 2 and trouncing Hugh Borthwick, unattached, 5 and 4 in the quarter-final.

To make the grade, Littler scored a 2 and 1 victory over Jimmy Johnston of Rosedale and a 3 and 2 triumph over Murray Tucker of London's Sunningdale Club.

Gus Lesnevich Signs to Fight Ezzard Charles

(By The Canadian Press)

Gus Lesnevich won his contractural freedom Friday to fight Ezzard Charles in New York, on August 10, but lost any chance of being recognized in New York State as the world's heavyweight champion if he conquers the Cincinnati boxer.

The Charles - Lesnevich bout will be recognized as a championship match in 47 States, which are affiliated with or recognize the National Boxing Association.

Promoter Sam Becker, who threatened to prevent the contest through court action because of a prior claim on Lesnevich's services, relented Friday at Cincinnati, and told him to go ahead.

At the same time, however, the New York States Athletic Commission turned down a request that it recognize the winner as the world's champion. It proposed, instead, that the victor fight the winner of the Lee Cavold-Bruce Woodcock contest in London, September 6, or some other outstanding contender.

The New York Commission does not recognize the N.B.A., with which Joe Louis, promoter of the Charles-Lesnevich fight, is affiliated.

Carlyle McEwan, 19, of Westville, N.S., said Friday from his hospital bed in Yarmouth, N.S., that he did not know he was fighting the Maritime lightweight champ when he went into the ring with Alvin Upshaw, of Halifax, Monday night at Cape Island.

McEwan collapsed in the early seconds of the 10th. round and was taken to hospital.

In the seventh round, Referee Gussie MacLellan announced he was calling the fight because he felt McEwan was in no condition to continue.

Promoter Mel Saab stepped into the ring and demanded the fight continue. He said his boy was "not hurt—just tired."

McEwan said he accepted the fight under the impression that Upshaw was a fighter on his way out, and not the Maritime champ at the peak of his career.

It was McEwan's first professional fight. He had been in amateur bouts previously at Sudbury, Ont.

The Dominion champion Calgary Stampeders' football stock got another nudge forward Thursday night when veteran fullback Paul Rowe turned out for practice.

Rowe, captain of the squad that beat Ottawa Rough Riders in last year's Grey Cup final, announced following the game he was retiring from the football wars.

Club officials said, however, he will occupy his old spot with the Stamps again this season.

Irishman Harry Bradshaw Friday turned the tables on Bobby Locke, his conqueror in the British Open, beating the South African by one stroke to win the Irish Open Gold Championship at Belfast.

It was a close squeak for Bradshaw, whose 72-hole score was 286 to Locke's 287.

Locke had beaten Bradshaw by 12 strokes in a 36-hole playoff for the British Open earlier this month after they tied over the 72-hole route.

At Oslo, Norway, the United States track and field team Friday night climaxed an uphill climb by winning the "Little Olympics" and its accompanying decathlon competition.

Canuck-Yank To Battle for Amateur Title

By W. R. WHEATLEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Riverside Golf and Country Club, Saint John, N.B., July 30 (CP)—For the third consecutive year, the Canadian Amateur Golf Championship reached the finals today with a Canadian and an American inthe title roles. American in the title roles. who hasn't been in the final for 12 years, against Dick Chapman of Osterville, Mass., a newcomer to the Canadian competition.

In one of Friday's semi-final rounds at 36 holes of match play, Farley disposed of Tommy Riddell of Montreal by 2 and 1. Dick Chapman was carried to the home hole in the second semi-final before he could get rid of Laurie Roland of Vancouver, a junior, one up.

Riddell was the man who eliminated defending champion Frank Stranahan in the fourth round Wednesday in a surprising upset.

The year before it was an all-Canadian final between Henry Martell of Edmonton and Ken Black of Vancouver and the Albertan won.

Roland's disappearance from the competition was a disappointment to the gallery of 800 that trailed him and the former winner of the United States amateur title.

Tough Luck

The 16-year-old Vancouver boy had Chapman three down after the 18-hole morning round and then let the American squirm out a victory.

Chapman flung one shot putt after another at Roland and the little British Columbia junior ultimately brought about his own downfall at the 28th hole. There, a carefully-played second shot struck a rock, caromed off, and Roland was trailing. He could never catch up.

The Farley-Riddell match, watched by a gallery of less than 300, turned into a battle of wits.

Riddell, reaching the semi-final for the first time in his golfing career, was one-up after nine holes. The lead soon disappeared under Farley's pressure and Riddell's inability to make his second shots behave.

Playing carefully over a course he called a "scenic shooting gallery," Farley let Riddell keep up the struggle. At the 31st Farley lost the hole when he went into a trap.

Riddell started scrambling for a hole but the best he could get was a half for the rest of the way. Farley ended the match at the par-four 35th on the strength of a remarkable second shot from behind a tree and the hole was halved and the match ended.

Guelph Player Suspended for Unruly Conduct

Kitchener, July 30 (CP).—As a result of disorder at a game Wednesday night in neighboring Waterloo, left-fielder Andy Barbe of Guelph Maple Leafs Friday was suspended for three games and Guelph's playing coach, George Boniface, was ruled out for one game and fined $10.

Guelph's first baseman, Jackie Lyons, drew the automatic $5 fine for being thrown out of a game.

The Intercounty Senior Baseball game was declared forfeited to the home club. Otto Manske, league president, announced the suspensions.

Barbe is alleged to have pushed plate umpire Hal Langford of Waterford during the fracas.

The matter will be considered at the next meeting of the Intercounty executive. The Guelph club has been notified that the forfeit stands and that the game goes into the records as a victory for Waterloo.

Watson, Atkins Battle to Draw In Terrific Two-Fall Brawl

By GEO. H. CARVER
(Sports Editor)

"That is one of the toughest battles I ever fought" said a tired, perspiring Whipper Billy Watson after last night's terrific encounter between he and Fred Atkins of Australia, in the main bout of the wrestling card at Memorial Arena.

We contacted the "Whip" just a minute or so after the bout had ended. He was "done" so he said. He sat in the anteroom off the main dressing room wherein sat a snarling, unsatisfied Atkins.

Atkins should have been satisfied. True, the pair split the decision in the first two falls, but the Whipper had a clean-cut margin over the Australian in the 3rd, and was under the impression that he had won when the gong (dam-it), clanged to end the ninety - minute time limit. It ended in a draw.

Watson was indignant over the matter, but like the good sportsman he is, accepted the result as handed down by the referee.

And that brings up another item in this muscle - juggling fiesta.

We have always claimed that His Wrestling Riverance, begad, none other, me bucko, than one "Bunny" Dunlop, was tops in wrestling showmanship. He proved it last night. As a matter of fact the Riverend "Bunny" dam near stole the show.

"Bunny" was the third man in the ring — and he proved to the Whip and the "Austrylian" that he was not fooling. And 1,600 excited fans agreed.

Rip Roaring Show

From start to finish, the main bout was a rip-roaring thrill-packed show. It was definitely evident that the Whip and Atkins were serious.

Atkins still persists it seems in wearing an elbow bandage which he uses at times, to massage the optics of the opposition. Last night he wore the appendage. It seems that he suffered a hurt to his left elbow, and thus far he hasn't recovered, nor has the alleged thingumabob healed.

In any event, Atkins, much to the chagrin of the faithful and the referee refused to doff the elbow upholstery. It is, apparently part of the standard equipment of the wrestling game, according to Fred.

The crowd did not like it. Neither did Watson.

The main bout was a ninety-minute affair and it lasted just that long. Atkins used not only all the unorthodox tactics he has in his "wally-bag" but also enlisted the service of one Hi Lee to act in his corner. Hi, added a touch of color to the performance with his ringside antics, but the careful "Bunny" aligned a watchful optic on him.

Atkins used to periodical advantage, the "bandage" on his left elbow. He cannot fool the public much longer with this "med'cal" covering. He's worn it for six weeks. He must heal slowly.

In any event, it was one of the best shows of the current wrestling season. There was plenty of action and the fans were kept on their toes throughout.

Bring 'em back.

Colored Star Has Smart Debut In Int. League

(By The Associated Press)

Bob Thurman, latest negro to begin his organized baseball career in the International League is off to a roaring start.

Purchased two days ago from Kansas City Monarchs, Thurman made his debut with Newark Bears Friday night and paced them to an 8-5 triumph over the Montreal Royals.

The young outfielder blasted a homer and two singles and drove home two runs. He hit a 415-foot homer during a three-run fourth inning that tied the score at 5-5. The blow sailed over the centre-field fence and was the longest hit at the Bears' park since Dale Alexander cleared the scoreboard in the late 20s while playing for Toronto.

Bob Porterfield made his second start of the season and went four innings, bowing out for a pinch-hitter in the fourth. Glen Lierman, another newcomer, pitched the last five frames, blanking the Royals on five hits to gain his first victory.

The league-leading Buffalo Bisons dropped a 9-8 decision to the Jersey City Giants but remained two games in front of Rochester Red Wings who lost a 3-2 decision to Syracuse Chiefs.

Buffalo piled up a 6-0 lead but couldn't hold it, the Giants tying it at 7-7 in the sixth inning. Pete Pavlick socked his second homer of the game in the seventh with a man on to put the Giants in front to stay.

Lefty Harry Perkowski stopped Rochester on six hits in out-dueling Johnny Yuhas and John Grodzicki. The Chiefs nicked Yuhas for two runs in the fifth and another in the seventh.

Toronto Maple Leafs came from behind to down Baltimore Orioles 5-3 with a four-run, ninth-inning rally.

Chet Laabs doubled home Ed Sanicki and Johnny Blatnik with one out. A walk, single and error accounted for the other two runs. Al Widmar, seeking his 18th victory, was the victim of the Toronto uprising.

Ottawa's Lowe Favored to Win Tennis Title

By H. DENT HODGSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, July 30 (CP).—Junior tennis players with eyes on future tournament play can take this cue from Ottawa's Pat Lowe; get the ball back.

Pat, favored to take her second straight junior women's title, doesn't quite agree that's the secret of her success. But most of her clubmates do.

Pat says she would like to be more aggressive in tennis, but she generally falls back on the old pat-ball game which, experience shows her, wins titles.

An enigma of the courts, the senior Lowe girl defies opposition by just getting the ball back. Her performance at the Canadian junior championships, being held this week at the Rideau Lawn Tennis Club, typifies this court psychology.

Railbirds say Pat hasn't a drive, a net game, a smash, a trick cut or a powerful forehand. But when she comes up against almost any newcomer, they know the winner will be Miss Lowe, Sr.

The Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, July 30 — (AP)—Rosalind Russell, the public's idea of the professional woman, is "back behind the desk again.".

She has been a doctor, lawyer, psychiatrist, advertising executive and newspaper woman on the screen already. Now she's a college dean in "Woman of Distinction."

"Here I am again," she told me. "I'm always behind a desk lifting phones and inter - office speakers, saying, 'Send Johnson in to see me — tell Miss Frobisher to get that story in Philadelphia — come in for dictation.'"

A few years ago her friends kept telling her: "No, Roz, you're not playing another executive, are you"? So she gave up playing professional women for straight dramatic roles.

Not Friends' Advice

"That's when I made a mistake" she said. "Too often in Hollywood we listen to the mistaken advice of friends when we should listen to the public. The public never told me it was tired of my professional roles."

After a few films that won her dramatic but no box - office honors, Roz returned to the professional woman. Her only complaint is that there's no change of pace.

"All these gals talk the same," she said. "I can't talk slowly because I'm the type that gives orders. And the wardrobe is always the same: two suits, a hostess gown and a negligee.

"The negligee comes in the seventh reel when I break down and cry, 'I'm sorry for what I did.' "

Tragic Figures

Roz said she has known and studied many professional women, particularly department store executives.

"Many of them are tragic figures. They often have husbands who are sick or poor. They always claim they are going to quit after the next sale. But they never do.

"Some day I will do the real story of the professional woman. It will be a tragedy."

I supplied her the title for the epic: "Death of a saleswoman."

NATION-WIDE VACCINATION PLANNED IN JAPAN

Tokyo, July 30 — (Reuters) — Spurred to activity by the large number of smallpox cases this year, Japanese government officials have announced that they intend to carry out a country-wide vaccination campaign this October. Japanese laboratories have been ordered to turn out enough vaccine for 90,000,000 persons.

Producers Plan to Provide Escapist Plays and Classics

(By PAT USSHER)
Canadian Press Staff Writer

New York, July 30—(CP)—The script that starts off "Time, the Present" is out of favor on Broadway, judging by plans for fall theatre presentations.

The trend now is to avoid current controversial topics and to give the public something old and tried, or something frankly escapist.

Apparently the public doesn't want plays about the second world war or post-war problems. Take "The Traitor," a taut spy melodrama and as topical as a Geiger counter (one was used in the play.) When produced here last spring it got good reviews but theatre-goers didn't take to it and the drama closed after 67 performances.

Recall Attitude

Theatre veterans recall that Broadway's attitude was similar for a few years after the First World War. Producers then turned to revivals of classics as the surest box office attractions.

The autumn lineup is strong on plays that deal with other times. The new musical, "Miss Liberty," falls into the latter category. It is set in the year 1885. William Shakespeare, an old stand-by, will be represented by two plays in the new season. Katherine Hepburn is scheduled to appear in "As You Like It" and Canada Lee in "Othello."

The Shuberts are considering a musical biography of the Italian composer, Puccini, with score by Decms Taylor and Libretto by Elliott Paul. Yet another revival slated for fall or later is Shaw's "Caesar and Cleopatra," and producer Michael Todd is planning a musical comedy based on the opera, "Aida." Only the setting will be Memphis, Tenn., instead of Memphis, Egypt, and the title will be "My Darlin' Aida."

Revival With Music

Another current trend is the practice of revising straight plays into musicals. Last season there was the immensely successful "Where's Charley?" based on the old farce, "Charley's Aunt." This production, with Ray Bolger cavorting through it, is still going strong. A few seasons back there was "Street Scene," with music by Kurt Weill. Now Robert L. Redd is planning to revive "Lightnin'," the Winchell Smith-Frank Bacon play, in musical guise. He has acquired the play and hopes to bring it to Broadway next winter. Redd is trying to persuade Toronto-born Walter Huston to play the memorable role of Lightnin' Bill Jones.

Pemberton Plans

Producer Brock Pemberton, who has been preoccupied for several years with the Mary Chase comedy, "Harvey," has got his eye on three new comedies. He has options on two of them and the third is undergoing a rewrite job.

Pemberton, incidentally, agrees with the current trend on Broadway. He says he believes the need for escapist plays was never greater.

"If there is a message or problem in any of the trio (of plays), they eluded my readers and me," he says. "The only party line in any of them is, I hope, the theatre party line."

Over-Sized M.P.'s Have That Certain Something Not Easily Forgotten

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, July 29 (CP)—There are few things more disturbing for a politician than to go back home and find his own constituents don't recognize him.

That's why it's handy in the fickle field of politics to have a face that's different or a distinguishing feature which will help folks remember who you are.

When it comes to that, Jack Garland, Liberal member for Nipissing, has them all beaten.

He weighs about 500 pounds, and although it's hard to visualize a man that size, you don't forget him once you've seen him. Garland was in Ottawa for a day this week and it was evident around the parliament buildings that his fame as a heavyweight has spread..

Special Chairs

He was entering the parliamentary cafeteria when one of the centre block's many sightseers spotted him.

"That must be that new Liberal member from up around North Bay," she said to her friend. "You know, one of the men they're making those special chairs for."

Mr. Garland's seating problems are being taken care of by the public works department which is also handling similar difficulties for Mayor Camillien Houde, the independent member for Montreal, who weighs something like 300 pounds.

Three specially-built, extra-wide, reinforced chairs are to be provided for each member. One will be placed in the House of Commons, a second in the offices of the two M.P.'s, and a third in the parliamentary restaurant.

The chairs aren't ready yet, however, and on Mr. Garland's visit he had to use regular seating facilities in the cafeteria.

He didn't appear to be having any difficulty with the regular chrome-tubed chairs with leather seats while eating; and the chairs didn't seem to be having any trouble holding those 500 pounds. Mr. Garland appeared to be comfortable although he did hang over substantially.

M. P.'s Around Town

Mr. Garland is one of about 50 Liberal M.P.'s who have visited Ottawa since the June 27 election. In most cases, the new members are making arrangements for their offices and getting familiar with the operations of parliament, preparatory to the expected mid-September session.

Hon. C. G. Power, re-elected in Quebec South, was among the visitors.

George Drew, Conservative leader, has been commuting between Guelph and Ottawa. He and his wife and children are spending the summer at Edward Johnson's Guelph home after selling their Toronto residence.

The Drews have an apartment in Ottawa but are still looking for a house in which to settle down again.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Some bridge partners have trouble with a double. They seem to overlook many of its finest qualities. Let me break it up into some of its parts for a few days and see what makes it tick.

In the first place, know there are two kinds of doubles. One is its original and natural meaning "I expect to defeat the bid of opponents." This is technically known as a penalty double.

The other type is known as a takeout double. This is simply a signal with an artificial (convention) meaning. It says: "Partner, take me out with a bid of some kind to show me what you have."

A takeout doubler has a hand that he could bid if he so desired. Then why does he double instead of making a bid of his own? To first get what information he can from his partner.

After all, the amount of strength in each deal has its limits. An opening bidder has a measure of this strength. A hand good enough to double has a measure of strength. Not much can be left.

So, partner of a defending bidder seldom has enough for a bid that he could voluntarily make. In order to draw any information from him, he must be forced to bid. The double is such a force.

♠A Q 7 4
♥7 4
♣K Q 5

This hand of west seems to have enough for a bid of one spade. If he bids one spade, however, he can expect no information from his partner in east. Instead of one spade as his bid he says double.

This double does not mean that he expects to defeat the south bid of one heart. Instead, it asks partner to bid something. It is nothing but a signal for demanding information from partner.

Not only does it ask partner what he has. Such a double is an admission of having a bid of its own. A takeout double is thus a double with a double personality.

Girl's Drowning Not Due to Oil Slick, Jury Says

Toronto, July 30 — (CP)—An oil slick on Toronto harbor had nothing to do with the drowning July 16 of Vera Burianyk, 24, an inquest jury decided Friday night.

The girl lost her life while trying to swim ashore after a 12-foot canvas-covered boat capsized during a pre-dawn boating party. Three of her friends, Doreen Arney, Wilfred Squires and Alex Burney, were rescued.

At the time of the drowning, some newspaper stories said it was believed Miss Burianyk's nostrils had been plugged by the sticky sludge. But Dr. E. C. Fielden, who performed an autopsy, testified that there was no evidence of oil on either the girl's clothing or her body.

Other witnesses who had seen the body after it was recovered said they saw no signs of oil. Nor was there any oil on the other three members of the party.

The five-man inquest jury returned a verdict of accidental death by drowning. It also expressed the opinion that poor judgment was shown in overloading the boat and preventing it from being operated safely. The jury added a rider recommending the refusal of a licence to operate a boat unless it possesses life jackets, lights, a fire extinguisher and other equipment required by Harbor Commission by-laws.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was sitting on my frunt steps eating the 2nd half of my Man Mountain chocklit bar, and Sam Cross was sitting there watching me without asking for another bite on account of knowing one bite was all he was entitled to and he started to brag about how many bites he would have give me if it had been the other way around with him eating and me watching, but he couldn't influence my actions because I knew he was the biggest liar around, and I said, Look who's standing down at the corner.

Meening Mr. Flannery the poleeceman just standing there, and Sam Cross said, I bet you haven't got the nerve to walk down there and ask him to arrest you.

I'll say I haven't and neither have you, I said, and Sam Cross said, Oh, is that so? Well give me another bite of that Man Mountain bar and I'll go down and do it rite now.

Do it first, and I'll give you the bite afterwerds, I said, and Sam said, Nuthing doing. You got to give it to me first, because I probably won't be here later, because he's libel to arrest me just to prove I'm wrong.

The result being I let him take another bite, and he walked down to the corner lookin as if he wasn't afraid of Mr. Flannery or anybody elts, and he stopped and said something to Mr. Flannery, and I saw Mr. Flannery take his watch out and look at it, and Sam Cross came back, saying, Well, I did it.

The heck you did, I said. All you did was ask him what time it was, I said, and Sam said, the heck I did. I dared him to arrest me, and he got so mad he could hardly talk, and he pulled out his watch and said the only reason he couldn't arrest me was, he didn't have time.

Proving if you trust a liar you deserve what happens.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was finishing putting away the dishes, and pop was in the living room smoking to himself in his private chair and I said, pop, you sure look comfortable.

That's a very intristing proof that appearances are deceptive, pop said. Deep inside me I was never more comfortable. I noticed a certain familiar gleem in your mother's eyes, and I'm sure I'm going to be cordially invited to take her to the movies, he said.

Which just then ma came in, saying, William, I'm going to make a suggestion, but if you'd rather not, please dont hesitate to say so.

What picture would you like to see, my dear? pop said, and ma said, Why William, you're positively sykick. I was thinking of Connie Carmelle in The Straying Heart. I know Connie Carmelle isn't by any means your favorite actress, but she really is quite talented in a way, so it'll be good practice in broad mindedness for you, William, she said.

I'll grin and bare it, or at least I'll bare it, pop said, and I said, G. ma, it's a good thing I'm old enough now to be left alone in the house at nite, ain't it?

Well naturelly, you've been old enough for some time now, ma said, and I said, Sure, that's what I meant. If I happen to get a pane in the middle of the nite in the middle of my stummick, I'm old enough to go to the medecine cabinet by myself without making any serious mistake in the bottles, and even if I smell gas, or even smoke, you can depend on me, ma I said.

Oh my goodness sutch gassly thawts, ma said.

The result being she called up her sister Gladds and went to see The Straying Heart with her instead of pop, and pop let me keep on reeding my new lyberry book a half an hour exter late.

Manhattan Love Song

By Kathleen Norris

"Oh, it's Chris!" Fanny exclaimed, seizing the instrument with relief. A moment later her face fell. It was Mack; he had just telephoned the Ruggerio's; where was Chris?

"Why-why we were all wondering that. How'd you know he wasn't up here with me in Scarsdale, Mack?"

"I called the Mockby's in Scarsdale first and asked for him. Then I telephoned your house."

"You mean that he wasn't there, Mack?"

"Nope. Mrs. Ruggerio said that her door was open and she was sitting there practically all the afternoon with one of the kids who's sick, and he didn't come in at all."

"But, good heavens, Mack, where is he? Where's Madge?"

"Madge and Phyllis are over in Jersey with the Bruntons."

"He wouldn't have gone over there with them without sending me any word!"

"He may have sent some word and it wasn't delivered," was Mack's feeble suggestion.

"But how can I find him, or you, or someone? Where are you now?"

"Working . . at the shop."

"Mack, will you be in the office a little after ten?"

"Tonight? Sure. Are you coming in? I'll be here until midnight; this is Saturday."

"Then I'll come in and wait for you on my way home. I'm scared!" said Fanny distractedly. "If Chris telephones, hold him!"

When she went back to the fire and her hostess, she remembered for the first time that she had a message.

"I didn't tell you, Mrs. Mockby that on my way here I went to the wrong Mockby's first. I went to the Jesse Mockby's . . that's why I was so late."

"My dear!" A little flush had come into the kindly, plump face opposite her own; Mrs, Mockby was watching her intentely.

'Mrs. Jesse Mockby was awfully kind to me, and took me upstairs to see her grandchildren . . ."

"Yes, I know Margaret's there"

"They're darlings!"

"They ought to . . . they ought to be friends with my Gerald's children," Mrs. Mockby said after a second's hesitation, "but there's a little feeling . . you found her very sweet, didn't you?"

"She was lovely, I told her Fanny said, "something of our beginning . . our living on Avenue A, I mean."

"Avenue A!" the other woman said, with a surprised smile, as Fanny paused. "We all lived there," she said.

"We were all such friends," Mrs. Mockby said. And suddenly her eyes were brimming with tears. "We were very happy in those old days," she added a little thickly.

"Mrs. Mockby sent you a little message," Fanny went on.

"Sent me. .? Sarah?"

"She said to tell you that I had gone there by mistake, and that they had Jake bring me here . . leave his dinner, I believe . . and that it was a great pleasure to do something for you."

There was a silence; their eyes were riveted together.

"She said she had always . . I think she said she had always been so fond of you," Fanny said, floundering a little.

"Sarah?" the other woman said, under her breath, incredulously. "She said she was glad to do something for me?"

"That was the message."

"I'm . . I'm extremely glad to hear it; it was generous of her," Mrs. Mockby said in a low tone. And to Helen, who just now came into the room, wrapped for some expedition, she said, "What's Aunt Sarah's number?"

"Aunt Sarah?" Helen ejaculated, obviously stupified.

"Yes, Aunt Sarah. Do you remember?"

"Well, talk of answer to prayer!" said Mrs. Gerald Mockby. "You aren't going to telephone?"

"I am," Mrs. Mockby said magnificently. "I've always loved Sarah Mockby, and I always shall I've thought for seven months that I'd have to give in; now she's given me an opening, and I'll meet her more than halfway!"

"Papa'll be out of his senses with joy!" Mrs. Mockby junior was commencing to say, when there was a stir at the door.

Gerald Mockby, followed by the lawyer, came in. His face had a somewhat bewildered expression.

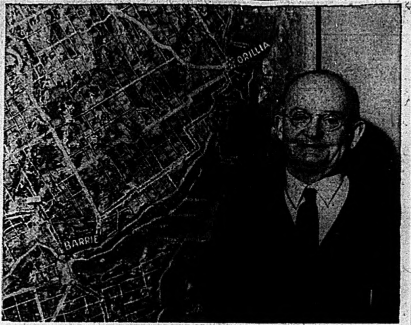
"Mrs. Thring," he said, "are these the notes Chris gave you?"

Fanny rose to her feet, turning pale with apprehension. Oh, what was wrong now? What was wrong now?

"What's the matter with them?" she demanded, trembling.

"Why, look at them. These aren't the notes of the Bucknell case at all!" the Jellicoe's lawyer said impatiently. "These appear to be poems, hundreds of 'em, by someone who signs 'em 'Garth O'Meara Who, for God's sake, is Garth O'Meara?"

"They're poems, sure enough," Gerald said. "How on earth did you get hold of these poems? They seem to be ready for publication . . see?"



Former Premier Ernest C. Drury, sheriff of Simcoe County for the past 15 years, has taken on another job in spite of his 71 years. He's writing a new history of the county, where his family has lived since 1820.—Globe and Mail.

INDIA'S GOVERNOR-GENERAL SETS EXAMPLE

In the traditional costume of his native land, Chakravarthi Rajgopalachari, governor-general of the Dominion of India, guides the plow behind a team of bullocks as he broke new land on his estate for the cultivation of food. The governor-general and Prime Minister Nehru appealed to all Indians to grow as much food as possible. The governor-general set an example by cultivating every available inch of his own land.—Central Press Canadian.

Her mouth dry, her heart hammering, Fanny looked at the papers that Gerald flung down on the table. As one in a dream she saw the title written on the brown wrapper, in Phyllis's pretty angular script: "Leaning Up a Cypress Tree."

For a long moment Fanny stood staring; she raised her eyes from th fatal sheaf of Phyllis Maitland's ridiculous verses to the faces of the men, looked back at the paper again. Her face was very pale.

"I brought the wrong envelope,' she finally said simply.

"So it would seem," Gerald Mockby said dryly.

"There were two; I remember now. They were both in the table drawer. These are the verses of a friend of mine, she sent them to me, and I should have sent them back!"

'D'you mean to say you haven't got the Bucknell stuff with you?" Mr. Kessely demanded flatly.

"Why, no. It's at home unless Chris has it somewhere. And I don't know where Chris is," Fanny explained slowly and carefully.

"Who's Chris?"

'My husband. And I wish it was the middle of next month," Fanny added in her thoughts, 'and that we were all dead and buried!'

"I suppose we couldn't get hold of those papers?" Gerald Mockby suggested.

"We could if they're at the house," Fanny told him lifelessly, 'but Chris may have them."

"Why, no we couldn't; no, we couldn't!" the Jellicoe's lawyer said sharply, after a glance at his watch. "I've got to make that eleven o'clock train; I've got to pick up my bags, and it'll take us an hour to get into town."

'I'll have one of my men make a careful resume of the whole thing, Mr. Kessely," Gerald Mockby said in simple apology, "and send it to you by air mail. I think I could promise to have that in the mail at this time tomorrow, and it'll be in Santa Barbara as soon as you are."

"Sure, sure, sure!" the other man said, dissatisfied, biting his lip. 'It's too bad!" he said restraining himself.

"I can't tell you . ." Fanny began in weary tears of distress.

"Well, it was unfortunate, but it can't be helped," Gerald Mockby said briefly. "I'm afraid our time is a little short to do anythin about it now. Now, I'm driving you people down to the city, I believe, I think we might as well get going."

"Gerald," said the elder Mrs. Mockby, returning from the telephone, " you have to stay down for lunch, don't you, tomorrow? But Aunt Sarah wants us all for Sunday supper."

The young man stared at his mother.

"Aunt Sarah does!" he ejaculated incredulously.

"Certainly Aunt Sarah does," Mrs. Joseph Mockby said with dignity. "I must see your father about it; he'll be delighted."

"The two envelopes were rather alike," Fanny was murmering brokenly. "But I can't think . ."

Nobody paid her any particular attention. Mrs. Mockby presently bid her a kindly but obviously abstracted good-bye. No one else was in sight when Fanny went out to the car; got into the remote back seat, and snuggled into her corner making herself as unobtrusive as possible.

During the entire trip she looked out at bare open country, lighted towns, country roads again, cemeteries, and the begining of the city apartment houses, listening to the talk of the two men with but half-hearted attention, wrapped in her own humiliated reflections.

"All very well to think that tomorrow's a new day," Fanny thought, "but you can make more trouble in one day than ten tomorrows can take care of! This may hurt Chris horribly-it will-with all those ather young men in the office trying to get ahead of each other, being efficient and smart and modern within an inch of their lives. We may never catch up again, and it's all my doing; it was my worring about Madge, and delaying to talk to Mack and missing the train . . ."

They were in the city streets; the car had drawn up at the office of the broadcasting company. Fanny said a subdued good-night to Mr. Kessely, offered one more apology to Chris's boss.

"I am so terribly sorry, Mr. Mockby!"

"Oh, forget it, accidents will happen!" said Gerald briefly. "You'll find Chris home, I suspect, and I wish you'd tell him that I'm staying at the Ambasador and that I'd be glad to have those notes tomorrow morning. I'll get hold of a stenographer, and we can ship them to Mr. Kessely in the afternoon."

"I will," Fanny promised feverently, "and if Chris isn't there I'll bring them down myself!'

"Right envelope this time, "he said good-naturedly.

"Oh, don't!" She could not laugh. "I feel so badly," she said, her eyes filling again.

The car drove away, and Fanny was rushed up in the great elevator and entered the warm, luxurious rooms of the radio base. As usual, agitated singers were awaiting their call; as usual, the string orchestra was anxiously, accurately playing, the leaders eye on the clock; as usual, directors were moving noislessly about and looking through glass little rooms with pianos and chairs in them. And, as usual, the audience of some hundred silent attentive folk was ranged in chairs, listening and watching.

Fanny found Mack, who was occupied, but who nodded her a welcome, and presently being freed by a series of musical notes from a gong, led her into a room where they could talk.
